KANAWHA, river, Va., rises in North Carolina, and, running n. and n. w., falls into the Ohio, at Point Pleasant, 258 ms. below Pittsburg. About 100 ms. from its mouth are the Great Falls, where the r. descends perpendicularly 50 feet. On its banks, 66 ms. from its mouth, are Kanawha salt works, where the r. is 150 yards wide. The salt region extends 15 miles on the river, and the salt now manufactured amounts to 1,500,000 bushels annually, and may be indefinitely increased. The salt water is obtained by boring through a formation of rock, from 300 to 500 feet deep, and the water rises in copper or tin tubes, which exclude the fresh water to the level of the surface of the r. along its margin. It is then raised 40 feet, to the top of the bank, by forcing pumps, moved by steam engines. The bituminous coal which abounds in the vicinity, is used for evaporating the water. These works employ, in various ways, about 1,000 men, and the salt is afforded at from 30 to 35 cents a bushel. Green Brier r. enters the Kanawha 40 or 50 miles above the falls, just before it passes the Iron Mountain. Its other principal branches are Elk r. on the n., and Coal r. on the s.

KENTONTOWN, p-v., Harrison co., Ky., 53 n. e. Frankfort, 489 W. Situated in the n. e. corner of the county.

KENTUCKY, r., Ky., from which the state derives its name, rises by 3 principal branches in the Cumberland mountains, denominated the North, Middle and South Forks, which unite in Estill co. From this point is pursued a circuitous course, in its lower parts, generally n. n. w., until it enters Ohio r. at Carrollton. The distance from the mouth to the forks, is 260 ms. by the course of the r.; but is only 112 ms. in a direct line. Steamboats of 300 tons formerly navigated this r. to Frankfort, in time of high water. But the navigation from the mouth to the forks of the r. has been improved by the construction of 17 dams, creating pools, and 17 locks, connecting them. The dams are from 350 to 500 feet long, and from 20 to 25 feet high, and the locks are 173 feet long, and 33 feet wide, and the least depth through the whole course is 6 feet, so that boats of a less draft than this, can navigate it at all times. The difference of level overcome by the locks, is 210 feet. The estimated cost of the whole, is $2,297,409.

KENTUCKY.

KENTUCKY, one of the western United States, is bounded n. by Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, from which it is separated by the Ohio river; e. by Virginia; s. by Tennessee; and w. by the Mississippi, which separates it from Missouri. It is between 36° 30' and 39° 10' n. lat., and between 81° 50' and 89° 30' w. lon., and between 5° and 10° w. lon. from W. Its greatest length is about 400 miles, and breadth 170 miles, containing 40,500 square miles, or 25,920,000 acres. The population in 1790 was 73,677; in 1800, 220,959; in 1810, 406,511; in 1820, 564,317; in 1830, 688,844; in 1840, 779,898, of which 182,258 were slaves. Of the free population, 305,323 were white males; 284,930 do. females; 3,761 were colored males; 3,556 do. females. Employed in agriculture, 197,738; in commerce, 3,448; in manufactures and trades, 23,217; navigating the ocean, 44; canals, lakes, and rivers, 968; in mining, 331; learned professions, 2,467.

There are 90 counties in this state, which with their population in 1840, and their capitals, were as follows: ADAIR, 8,466, Columbia; ALLEN, 7,323, Scottsville; BARREN, 17,228, Glasgow; BATH, 2,763, Owingsville; BOONE, 10,034, Burlington; BOURBON, 14,478, Paris; BREATHITT, 2,195, Breathitt; BRACKEN, 7,052, Augusta; BRECKENRIDGE, 8,944, Hardingsburg; BULLITT, 6,334, Shepherdsville; BUTLER, 3,998, Morgantown; CALDWELL, 10,365, Princeton; CALLOWAY, 9,794, Wadesborough; CAMPBELL, 5,214, Newport; CARROLL, 3,966, Carrollton; CARTER, 2,905, Grayson; CASEY, 4,939, Liberty; CHRISTIAN, 15,587, Hopkinsville; CLARK, 10,802, Winchester; CLAY, 4,607, Manchester; CLINTON, 3,863, Albany; CUMBERLAND, 6,090, Burkesville; DAVIES, 8,331, Owensboro; EDMONSTON, 2,914, Brownsville; ESTILL, 5,535, Irvine; FAYETTE, 22,194, Lexington; FLEMING, 13,263, Flemingsburg; FLOYD, 6,302, Prestonburg; FRANKLIN, 9,430, Frankfort; GALLATIN, 4,003, Warsaw; GARRARD, 10,480, Lancaster; GRANT, 4,192, Williamstown; GRAVES, 7,465, Mayfield; GRAYSON, 4,461, Litchfield; GREENE, 14,212, Greensburg; GREENUP, 6,297, Greenupburg; HANCOCK, 2,581, Hawsersville; HARDIN, 16,367, Elizabethtown; HARLAN, 3,015, Mt. Frankfort, on the E. bank of the Kentucky river, 60 miles above its entrance into the Ohio, is the seat of government.

The only mountains in this state, are the Cumberland in the S. E. The eastern counties are mountainous. A tract from 5 to 20 miles wide, along the Ohio river, through the whole length of the state, is hilly and broken, but has a good soil. The margin of the Ohio for about a mile in width consists of bottom lands, which are overflowed when the river is high. Between this tract of hilly country, the more mountainous eastern counties, and Green river, is a fertile tract, frequently denominated the garden of the state. It is about 150 miles long, and from 50 to 100 wide. The soil is excellent, the surface is gently undulating, and the forest growth, black walnut, black cherry, buckeye, pawpaw, sugar-maple, mulberry, elm, ash, cotton wood, white thorn, and an abundance of grape-vines. The country in the S. W. part of the state, between Green and Cumberland rivers, is called "the barrens." In 1800, the legislature of the state made a gratuitous grant of this tract to actual settlers, under the idea that it was of little value; but it proves to be excellent grain land, and also well adapted to the raising of hogs and cattle. The whole state, below the mountains, has at the usual depth of 8 feet a bed of limestone, which has frequent apertures through which the waters of the rivers sink into the earth, causing some of them to disappear for a time, and others to be greatly diminished in the summer season. The banks have generally worn deep channels in the calcareous rocks over which they flow. The precipices formed by the Kentucky are in many places stupendous, presenting perpendicular banks of solid limestone 300 feet high, above which is a steep and difficult ascent several times as high. In the S. W. part of the state, between Green and Cumberland rivers, are several remarkable caves. One called the Mammoth cave, 130 miles from Lexington on the road to Nashville, is said to be 8 or 10 miles in length, with many diverging apartments. The earth at the bottom of it is strongly impregnated with nitre, which has been, to a considerable extent, manufactured from it.

Wheat, tobacco, and hemp are the staple productions; but Indian corn, rye, oats, barley, buckwheat, flax, and potatoes are extensively cultivated. Apples, pears, peaches, and plums are the most common fruits. Horses, horned cattle, pork, bacon, and lard are extensively exported.

In this state there were, in 1840, 395,853 horses and mules; 787,098 neat cattle; 1,008,240 sheep; 2,310,533 swine; poultry to the value of $536,439; there were produced 4,803,152 bushels of wheat; 17,491 of barley; 7,155,974 of oats; 1,321,373 of rye; 8,169 of buckwheat; 39,847,120 of Indian corn; 1,786,847 pounds of wool; 742 of hops; 33,445 of wax; 1,055,085 bushels of potatoes; 86,306 tons of hay; 9,992 of hemp and flax; 53,436,909 pounds of tobacco; 16,376 of rice; 691,456 of cotton; 737 of silk cocoons; 1,377,535 of sugar. The products of the dairy amounted to $931,363; of the orchard $434,935; of lumber $130,329. There were made 2,309 gallons of wine.

Among the mineral productions of Kentucky, are iron ore, coal, salt, and lime. The salt licks, as the springs are called, from the fact that cattle and wild animals have been fond of licking around them, are numerous, and salt is extensively manufactured, not only for home consumption, but for exportation. The greater part of the exports of this state pass down the Mississippi to New Orleans, and its chief imports are brought in steamboats through the same river and the Ohio, and other tributaries in this state.

The winters are mild, being only of 2 or 3 months continuance, but the atmosphere at that season is moist. Spring and autumn are delightful; and on the whole, the climate is salubrious.

The Ohio, by its various windings, borders this state on the N. for 637 miles. Cumberland and Tennessee rivers pass through the western part of this state as they approach their entrance into the Ohio. Cumberland river, also, rises in the eastern part of this state. The Big Sandy is 250 miles long, and, for a considerable distance, forms the boundary between this state and Virginia. It is navigable 50 miles for boats. The Kentucky river rises in the Cumberland mountains, and after a course generally through a deep rocky bed, falls into the Ohio, 77 miles above Louisville. It is navigable by steamboats 60 miles to Frankfort. Licking, Green, and Salt, are other considerable rivers. The Mississippi runs on the western border of the state.

Louisville, on the Ohio, is much the largest and most commercial place in the state. Lexington, the oldest town in the state, is distinguished for its beauty and refinement as well as for its business. Maysville, on the Ohio, and Frankfort, on the Kentucky, are important places.

There were in the state, in 1840, 5 commercial and 50 commission houses engaged in foreign trade, with a capital of $620,700; 1,685 retail drygoods and other stores, with a cap. of $9,411,836; 571 persons employed in the lumber trade, with a capital of $105,925; 101 persons employed in internal transportation, who, with 183 butchers, packers, &c., employed a capital of $183,850.

The whole amount of capital employed in manufactures was $5,945,259.

The Transylvania University, at Lexington, was founded in 1798, and is an important institution. Centre College, at Danville, was founded in 1822; St. Joseph's College, at Bardstown, (Catholic,) was founded in 1819; Augusta College, at Augusta, (Methodist,) was founded in 1825; Cumberland College, at Princeton, was founded in 1825; Georgetown College, at Georgetown, (Baptist,) was founded in 1829; Bacon College, at Harrodsburg, was founded in 1836; St. Mary's College, Marion county, (Catholic,) was founded in 1837. There is a flourishing medical department connected with the Transylvania University, and a medical institution at Louisville. In these institutions there were, in 1840, 1,419 students. There were in the state 116 academies and grammar schools, with 4,906 students; 952 common and primary schools, with 24,641 scholars; and 40,010 free white persons, over 20 years of age, who could neither read nor write.

In 1836, the Baptists, the most numerous denomination, had 500 churches, about 300 ministers, and 35,000 communicants; the Methodists 100 travelling preachers, and 31,369 communicants; the Presbyterians 130 churches and 8 or 10,000 communicants; the Episcopalians 1 bishop and 13 ministers; the Roman Catholics, 1 bishop and 34 ministers. There is also a considerable number of Cumberland Presbyterians, Reformed Baptists, 2 societies of Shakers, and 1 of Unitarians.

At the commencement of 1840, this state had 14 banks and branches, with an aggregate capital of $7,789,003, and a circulation of $3,476,367. At the close of 1840, the state debt amounted to $4,665,000.

The first constitution was formed in 1790, and the present one in 1799. The governor is elected for 4 years by the people, and is ineligible for the next seven. A lieutenant-governor is chosen at the same time, who is president of the senate, and who, in case of the death or absence of the governor, succeeds to his duties. The senators are elected for 4 years, one quarter of them being chosen annually. Their number cannot exceed 38 nor be less than 24. The representatives are chosen annually, and apportioned every 4 years among the counties according to the number of electors. Every free white male citizen who is 21 years of age, and has resided 2 years in the state, or county in which he offers his vote, one year next preceding the election, has the right of suffrage. Votes are given openly, or visz voce, and not by ballot. The judges of the several courts hold their offices during good behavior.

A short but most important work of internal improvement is the Louisville and Portland canal, 24 miles long, around the rapids in the Ohio river at Louisville. It admits steamboats of the largest class, is excavated 10 feet deep, in solid limestone, and cost $730,000. The navigation of Kentucky, Licking, and Green rivers, has been extensively improved by dams and locks. The Lexington and Ohio railroad extends from Lexington to Frankfort, and is intended to be continued to Louisville. Several other railroads have been projected.

This state was first explored by Daniel Boone, an enterprising hunter, in 1770. The first white family settled near Lexington in 1775. The first settlers were greatly annoyed by the Indians, until Gen. Clark took their posts and broke up their haunts, in 1778. This state originally belonged to Virginia, and in 1782, was erected into a separate district by the name of Kentucky. In 1789 it was separated from Virginia, and in 1793 was admitted into the Union.

New Orleans is the seat of government, on the N. bank of the Mississippi river, 105 miles from its entrance into the Gulf of Mexico.

Below the mouth of the Red river the Mississippi divides into several branches, or outlets, which diverging from each other, slowly wind their way to the Gulf of Mexico, and divide the south-western part of the state into a number of large islands. The western of these outlets is the Atchafalaya, which leaves the main stream 3 miles below the mouth of Red river, and, inclining eastward, flows into Atchafalaya bay in the Gulf of Mexico. About 128 miles below the Atchafalaya, is the outlet of Plaquemine, the main stream of which unites with the Atchafalaya; but other portions of it intersect the country in different directions. Thirty-one miles below the Plaquemine, and 81 above New Orleans, is the outlet of Lafourche, which communicates with the Gulf of Mexico by two mouths. Below the Lafourche, numerous other smaller streams branch off from the river at various points. On the east side of the Mississippi the principal outlet is the Iberville, which communicates with the Gulf of Mexico through lakes Maurepas, Pontchartrain, and Borgne. The whole territory between the Atchafalaya on the west, and the Iberville, &c., on the east, is called the Delta of the Mississippi, from its resemblance in shape to the Greek letter of that name. A large extent of country in this state is annually overflowed by the Mississippi. From lat. 28° to 31°, the average width of the land inundated is 20 miles; from lat. 31° to the outlet of Lafourche, a little above lat. 30°, the width is 40 miles. Below the Lafourche, the country generally is overflowed. The lands thus overflowed, including those on the Red river, amount to 10,890 sq. miles; though the inundation is not complete, but consists of innumerable canals and lakes, which are interspersed everywhere. The country actually submerged would not, probably, exceed 4,000 sq. miles. More earth is deposited by the Mississippi in its overflow on its immediate margin than further back; and, consequently, the land is higher adjoining the river than it is in the rear of its banks. This alluvial margin, of a breadth from 400 yards to a mile and a half, is a rich soil, and to prevent the river from inundating the valuable tract in the rear, and which could not be drained, an artificial embankment is raised on the margin of the river, called the Levee. On the east side of the river, this embankment commences 60 miles above New Orleans, and extends down the river for more than 130 miles. On the west shore, it commences at Point Coupée, 172 miles above New Orleans. Along this portion of the river, its sides present many beautiful and finely cultivated plantations, and a continued succession of pleasant residences. The southwestern part of the state consists of swamps, on the margin of the Gulf, but of prairies further inland, some parts of which are barren, but others fertile, and containing flourishing settlements. This country is elevated not more than from 10 to 50 feet above high tide. The country between the Mississippi, Iberville, and Pearl rivers, in its southern parts, is generally level, and highly productive in cotton, sugar, rice, corn, and indigo. The northern part has an undulating surface, and has a heavy natural growth of white, red, and yellow oak, hickory, black walnut, sassafras, magnolia, and poplar. In the northwestern part, the Red river, after entering the state by a single channel, and flowing about 30 miles, spreads out into a number of channels, forming many lakes, and islands, and swamps, over a space of 50 miles long and 6 broad. The bottoms on the river are from 1 to 10 miles wide, and are very fertile. The timber on them is willow, cottonwood, honey locust, pawpaw, and buckeye; on the rich uplands, elm, ash, hickory, mulberry, black walnut, with a profusion of grape vines. On the less fertile and sandy uplands of the state are white, pitch, and yellow pines, and various kinds of oak.

The staple productions of the state are cotton, sugar, and rice. In 1840 there were in the state, 99,838 horses and mules; 331,248 neat cattle; 96,073 sheep; 323,220 swine; poultry to the value of $333,559. There were produced 60 bushels of wheat; 107,353 of oats; 1,812 of rye; 5,952,912 of Indian corn; 834,341 of potatoes; 24,651 tons of hay; 49,283 pounds of wool; 1,012 of wax; 119,824 of tobacco; 3,604,534 of rice; 152,555,368 of cotton; 119,947,720 of sugar. The products of the dairy were valued at $153,069; of the orchard at $11,769; of lumber at $66,106. There were made 2,884 of gallons of wine; and 2,233 barrels of tar, pitch, &c.

New Orleans is the place where the trade of the vast Mississippi valley centres, and its commerce is extensive.

The winters in this state are mild; though more severe than in the same latitude on the Atlantic coast. The summers in the wet and marshy parts are unhealthy. New Orleans has frequently been visited by the yellow fever. But a considerable portion of the state is healthy.

The Mississippi divides this state from the state of Mississippi for a considerable distance, and in its lower parts runs wholly in this state, where it enters the Gulf of Mexico by several passes. It is navigable for vessels of any size. The Red river runs through the state in a s. e. direction, and discharges a vast amount of water into the Mississippi, 240 miles above New Orleans. The Washita runs in a s. direction in the n. part of the state, and enters Red river, a little above its entrance into the Mississippi. Bayou Lafourche and Atchafalaya are large outlets of the Mississippi. The other rivers are the Black, Tensas, Sabine, Calcasieu, Mermentau, Vermilion, Teche, Pearl, Amite, and Iberville.

The largest lakes are Pontchartrain, Maurepas, Borgne, Chenichas, Mermentau, Calcasieu and Sabine.

The exports of this state in 1840, amounted to $34,236,936; and the imports to $10,673,190. There were 24 commercial, and 381 commission houses engaged in foreign trade, with a capital of $16,770,000; and 2,465 retail drygoods and other stores, with a capital of $14,301,024; 597 persons were employed in the lumber trade, with a capital of $260,045; 3 persons employed in internal transportation, with 291 butchers, packers, &c., employed a capital of $144,523.

The amount of home-made or family articles manufactured, was $65,190; 2 cotton manufactories, with 706 spindles, employed 23 persons, producing articles to the amount of $18,900, with a capital of $22,000; 6 furnaces produced 1,400 tons of cast iron, and 2 forges produced 1,366 tons of bar iron, employing 145 persons, and a capital of $357,000; 25 tanneries employed 86 persons, and a capital of $132,025; 7 other manufactories of leather, as saddleries, &c., produced articles to the amount of $103,500, with a capital of $69,550; 1 pottery employed 18 persons, producing articles to the amount of $1,000, with a capital of $3,000; 5 sugar refineries produced to the amount of $770,000; 101 persons produced confectionery to the amount of $20,000; machinery was produced to the amount of $5,000; and hardware and cutlery to the amount of $30,000; 51 persons produced carriages and wagons to the amount of $23,350, employing a capital of $15,780; mills of various kinds produced articles to the amount of $706,785, employing 972 persons, and a capital of $1,870,795; vessels were built to the amount of $30,500; 129 persons manufactured furniture to the amount of $2,300, with a capital of $576,050; 5 distilleries produced 285,520 gallons, and 1 brewery produced 2,400 gallons, employing 27 persons, and a capital of $110,000; 75 persons manufactured 2,202,200 pounds of soap, 3,500,030 pounds of tallow candles, 4,000 pounds of wax and spermaceti candles, with a capital of $115,500; 248 stone or brick houses, and 619 wooden houses, employed 1,484 persons, and cost $2,736,944; 35 printing offices, 5 binderies, 11 daily, 21 weekly and 2 semi-weekly newspapers, and 3 periodicals, employed 392 persons, and a capital of $193,700. The whole amount of capital employed in manufactures, was $6,430,699.

Louisiana College, at Jackson, was founded in 1825; Jefferson College, at Bringers, was founded in 1831; St. Charles College, at Grand Coteau, is under the direction of the Catholics; Baton Rouge College, at Baton Rouge, was founded in 1838; Franklin College at Opelousa, was founded in 1839. These institutions had in 1840, 437 students. There were in the state, 52 academies, with 1,995 students; 179 common and primary schools, with 3,573 scholars, and 4,861 white persons over 20 years of age who could neither read nor write.

This state was originally settled by Catholics, who are still the most numerous denomination. In 1835, they had 27 ministers. The Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, and Episcopalians exist in considerable numbers, and are increasing.

At the commencement of 1840, there were 47 banks and branches in this state, with an aggregate capital of $41,736,768, and a circulation of $4,345,533. The state debt, at the close of 1840, amounted to $30,585,000.

The constitution of this state was formed in 1812. The governor is elected for four years. The people give their votes for governor at the same time that they vote for senators and representatives, and the legislature on the succeeding session elect by joint ballot a governor from the two candidates having the greatest number of votes of the people. The senators are elected for 4 years, one half being chosen every 2 years. The state is divided into 16 senatorial districts, each of which chooses a senator. The representatives are elected for two years, and cannot be less than 25 nor more than 50 in number, and they are apportioned according to the number of electors, an enumeration of which is made every 4 years. The legislature meets annually in January, except in the years of the election of President of the United States, when it meets in November.

The judges of the supreme court are appointed by the governor, with the consent of the senate, and hold their offices during good behavior.

This state has a number of important works of internal improvement. Pontchartrain railroad extends from New Orleans 44 miles to Lake Pontchartrain, at a cost of $450,000. West Feliciana railroad extends from St. Francisville, 20 miles to Woodville, Mississippi. New Orleans and Carrollton railroad extends from N. Orleans, 44 miles to La Fayette. Orleans-street railroad, extends from N. Orleans, 44 miles to the bay of St. Johns. The Mexico Gulf railroad, extends from N. Orleans, east to Pascagoula Sound. The Orleans Bank canal extends from N. Orleans, 6 miles to Lake Pontchartrain, and cost $1,000,000. Canal Carondelet extends from N. Orleans, 14 miles to the Bay of St. Johns. Barataria canal extends from N. Orleans, 85 miles to Berwick bay. Lake Veret canal extends from Lake Veret, 8 miles to Lafourche river. The N. Orleans and Nashville railroad extends 80 miles in this state, and if completed, will be 564 miles in length. It is in progress.

This country was first explored by the French, and received its name in 1682, from M. La Salle, in honor of Louis XIV, and a settlement was attempted in 1684, 300 miles w. of the Mississippi, but failed. In 1699 M. Iberville made an attempt to plant the country, but lost his life. His efforts were followed up by one Crosat, a man of wealth, who held the exclusive trade of the country for a number of years. About the year 1717, he transferred his interest in the province to a chartered company, at the head of which was the notorious John Law, whose national bank and Mississippi speculation involved the ruin of half the French nobility. In 1731 the company resigned the concern to the crown, who, in 1762, ceded the whole of Louisiana to Spain. In 1800, Spain recovered the province to the French, of whom it was purchased by the United States in 1803, for $15,000,000. This purchase included the territory of the United States w. of the Mississippi. In 1812, the present state of Louisiana formed a constitution, and was admitted into the Union.

LOUISVILLE, city, port of entry, and capital of Jefferson co., Ky., 54 w. Frankfort, 596 W. Situated on the s. side of Ohio r., at the head of the rapids, 38° 8' n. lat., and 85° 26' w. lon., 120 ms. below Cincinnati. Pop. in 1788, 30; in 1800, 600; in 1810, 1,357; in 1820, 4,012; in 1830, 10,336; in 1840, 21,210. The Ohio r. is here 1 mile and 25 rods wide, and the ground rises by a gentle slope from the water's edge to an elevation of 70 feet, where is a beautiful plain. Bear-grass cr. enters its n. part, and forms a good harbor. Incorporated as a city in 1828. It is regularly laid out, with 8 broad and straight streets, parallel with the r., crossed by 18 others at right angles, making the city 3 miles long, and about 1 mile wide. It is generally built of brick, with many large stores and warehouses, and many fine dwellings. It contains a court house, jail, 2 market houses, a museum, a marine hospital, an asylum, and several other humane and benevolent institutions, 4 banks, including a bank for savings, 12 churches—4 Presbyterian, 3 Methodist, 2 Baptist, 1 Episcopal, 1 Roman Catholic, and 1 African—and several other places of worship, 375 stores and groceries, several printing offices, issuing 3 daily newspapers, about 2,500 dwellings. It has convenient landings, and many steamboats are continually in port, or arriving and departing. It has 4 flouring m., producing 400 barrels of flour daily, several large iron foundries, and woollen and other manufactories. The goods and manufactured articles sold annually, amount to about $29,000,000. Around the rapids at this place, which are not navigable at low water for large boats, a canal has been constructed, 24 ms. long, with 4 locks, which cost $730,000, overcoming a fall of 22 feet. At the lower end of the canal are the villages of Shipping Port, and Portland. The city government consists of a mayor and 10 aldermen, 2 from each of the 5 wards. The Ohio Bridge Company is constructing a bridge across the Ohio, over the shoals above Corn Island. There were in 1840, 1 commercial and 11 commission houses in for. trade, cap. $191,800; 270 retail drygoods and other stores, cap. $2,128,400; 3 lumber yards, cap. $52,000; 2 tanneries, 2 breweries, 1 glass cutting estab., 1 pottery, 2 rope fac., 2 flouring m., 3 saw m., 1 paper fac., 7 printing offices, 2 binderies, 5 daily, 7 weekly, and 3 semi-weekly newspapers, and 1 periodical, 200 brick and stone and 60 wooden houses built, employing 269 persons, at a cost of $260,250. Total capital employed in manufactures, $713,675. 1 college, 80 students, 10 acad. 269 students, 14 sch. 368 scholars.

Missisquoi r. rises in a pond on the s. border of the t., by which, and its branches, it is drained, and which afford water power. The surface is uneven, and the soil productive. It has 2 stores, cap. $1,200; 1 grist m., 2 saw m. Cap. in manufac. $6,600. 6 sch. 149 scholars. Pop. 431.

LOWELL, city, and semi-capital of Middlesex co., Mass., 25 n. n. w. Boston, 444 W., in the rapidity of its growth, and the extent of its population and manufactures, is a remarkable place; and well deserves the appellation, "the Manchester of America." An example of an equally rapid growth has never else been exhibited in the United States. It lies on the s. side of the Merrimac, below Pawtucket falls, and at the junction of Concord r. with the Merrimac. In 1820 it constituted a part of Chelmsford, and the present territory of Lowell then contained less than 200 inhabitants, and the valuation of property did not exceed $100,000. In 1826 it was incorporated as a town; and having received a small addition from Tewksbury, it obtained, in 1836, the charter of a city. The population in 1830 was 6,474; in 1840, 20,796, showing an increase in 10 years of 14,322. The assessors' valuation of property in 1840 was $13,400,000.

The water power at this place is very extensive and easily available. It is produced by a canal 60 feet wide, 8 feet deep, and a mile and a half in length, commencing at the head of Pawtucket falls, and extending to Concord river. By locks at its outlet into Concord r., it forms a boatable passage around the falls in the Merrimac. From the main canal, the water is carried by lateral canals to mills and manufactories, where it is needed, and is then discharged, either into the Merrimac or the Concord. The entire fall is 30 feet. Before the project was entertained of using this water for hydraulic purposes, a canal existed, made by a corporation created in 1792, for the transportation of "boats, rafts, and masts around the falls." About the year 1820, this canal was purchased by a company, who, under the original charter and name of "Proprietors of locks and canals on Merrimac river," in 1833 commenced enlarging and deepening the canal, and putting it in a suitable condition to supply such manufactories as might be erected. They are the bottom corporation, or root, of nearly all the manufacturing establishments in Lowell. They own the Pawtucket canal, which supplies all the water power, and have purchased all the lands adjoining the river on both sides of the falls. The company is landlord and grantor of nearly all the other corporations. They have an extensive machine shop, of brick, 5 stories high, and 250 feet long; an iron foundry, a saw mill, a planing machine, with ample workshops, furnaces, and outbuildings. They give constant employment to the most skilful mechanics, who manufacture the machinery for the mills, and cars and locomotives for railroads, which are sent to every part of the Union. When a new company is formed, it contracts with the "Proprietors of Locks and Canals," for land and for water power, sufficient to drive the contemplated number of spindles; for which an annual rent is paid. They then contract with the Proprietors to erect the desired number of mills, and to fill them with machinery ready for running; and to erect counting, ware, and boarding houses, sufficient for all operatives to be employed in the mills. For the whole, a gross sum is paid; and the new company has little concern in the matter, excepting to see that every thing is done according to contract, until the first mill is ready to run. This arrangement is found advantageous to both parties. The machine shop can furnish machinery complete for a mill of 5,000 spindles, in 4 months. All the mills, ware, counting, and boarding houses, excepting the boarding houses of the oldest company, are of brick, neatly and substantially built.

Eleven incorporated manufacturing companies in this city, with an aggregate capital of $10,500,000, are supplied with water by the Pawtucket canal, from the original company, above named. The whole number of mills which belong to the 11 corporations, exclusive of print works, is 32; the number of spindles, 166,044; and 5,183 looms. Females employed, 6,430; males, 2,077. Very few children are employed, probably not 900, under 15 years of age. The companies produce 58,263,000 yards of cloth annually. They consume 19,255,000 pounds of cotton, or 53,340 bales a year. Two companies have print works and dye houses, and together produce 13,780,000 yards of dyed and printed cloth annually.

The goods manufactured at Lowell are sheetings, flannels, drillings, prints, shirtings, negro-cloth, carpets, rugs, broadcloths, water-proof woollens, and cassimeres.

For manufacturing purposes, 900 chaldrons of smiths' coal are consumed in a year; 11,460 tons of anthracite coal; 500,000 bushels of charcoal; 3,510 cords of wood; 3,000 barrels of flour for starch; 600,000 pounds of starch; 65,289 gallons of oil, of which 5,000 gallons are olive oil.

Besides the above named companies, there are in the city, the Lowell Bleachery, with a capital of $50,000; Whitney Mills, capital $100,000, for the manufacture of milled blankets; and extensive powder mills, which make superior gunpowder. There are also various mills and manufactories, owned by individuals. New companies and manufactories are continually springing up; and much water power is unimproved.

The average wages of female operatives, exclusive of board, is 3 dollars a week, but some of them earn double that; the males, on an average, 80 cents a day, exclusive of board. All the corporations and private companies pay off their hands once a month, but on different days. The whole amount of wages paid to operatives in each month is $160,000 an average; a very considerable portion of which is deposited by the receivers in the "Lowell Savings Institution."

A railroad from Lowell to Boston, 26 miles, was completed in 1835, which is very thoroughly constructed. Andover Branch railroad extends from it, 10 miles from the city, and goes to Dover, New Hampshire. The Lowell and Nashua railroad extends 9 ma. to New Hampshire line. The Merrimac canal leaves the Merrimac, 2 miles above Lowell, and proceeds to Boston harbor.

Among the literary institutions, the Lyceum, for procuring courses of lectures, and for debates, has existed a number of years; and more recently, the Lowell Institute has been formed, for similar purposes. But the most remarkable institution is the Mechanics' Association, formed by intelligent mechanics, and incorporated many years ago. They have a costly brick edifice, called Mechanics' Hall, which has a fine lecture room, in which courses are annually delivered, together with a handsome library, and an extensive reading room, which is always open, and a fine mineralogical cabinet.

The citizens of Lowell have taken a great interest in the cause of education. The whole amount raised in 1840 for schools by taxation was $17,500. Besides this, the city erected an elegant edifice for a high school, which cost $28,000; and 2 houses for grammar schools, which cost together $30,000. There are 29 public free schools. There are 6 grammar schools, besides the two above mentioned. About one eighth of the population is Catholic, but they have entered, with spirit, into the business of education. The whole number of pupils in all the schools is over 4,000.

There are 2 newspapers in the place, each published tri-weekly; 2 weekly papers from the same offices, and 3 other weekly papers devoted to religion and literature. A magazine, called "the Offering," is issued, consisting of original communications, chiefly by the young ladies in the factories, under the general superintendence of a clergyman, which is very respectable.

There are 15 congregations with settled ministers, and several others which constantly worship in halls, and the churches are well attended. It is abundantly proved by this splendid model of American manufacturing cities, that this employment has no necessary tendency to depress the intellect, or to corrupt the morals.

The Lowell Bank, with a capital of $250,000, was chartered in 1828. The Savings Bank was chartered in 1829, and has its office at the Lowell Bank. The Railroad Bank was chartered in 1831, with a capital of $900,000, to facilitate the financial affairs of the manufacturing companies, most of which pay their operatives in its bills.

The territory of Lowell does not exceed 2 sq. square. The Indian name of it was Wamsit, the seat of a tribe of praying Indians, at the breaking out of Philip's war, in 1765. It was named in honor of Francis C. Lowell, of Boston, distinguished for his efforts to introduce the cotton manufacture into the United States.

That a place which, 30 years since, had not a "local habitation, nor a name," should have become the second place in population in Massachusetts, the fourteenth in the United States, larger than any city s. of the Potomac, excepting Charleston and New Orleans, is proof of what manufactures, properly conducted, can accomplish. Nor have these manufacturers benefited themselves more than they have promoted the public interest. Cottons which, 20 years since, would have cost 30 cents a yard, can now be purchased for 6 cents; and such establishments as those at Lowell, have wrought this change.

There were in 1840, 191 retail stores, capital $373,300; 5 lumber yards, cap. $19,000; 1 furnace, cap. $35,300; 4 fulling m., 8 woollen fac., cap. $551,300; 26 cotton fac. 166,000 sp., 3 dyeing and printing estab., total cap. $8,000,000; 3 powder m., cap. $150,000; 1 paper fac., capital $8,000; 1 flouring m., 3 grist m., 1 saw m., cap. $50,000; 2 printing offices, 2 binderies, 3 weekly, 2 semi-weekly newspapers, and 1 periodical, cap. $10,000. Total cap. in manufac. $8,837,460. 7 acad. 1,311 students, 28 sch. 4,306 scholars.

MADISON, p-v., and capital of Dane co., and of the ter. of Wisconsin, 90 n. e. Galena, 90 w. Milwaukee, 847 W. It is beautifully situated on a peninsula, between the 3d and 4th lake of the chain called the Four Lakes, on a gentle swell of ground, from which there is a regular descent each way to the water. It is regularly laid out, with a central square of 914 feet on a side, in the centre of which is the state house, erected by the general government. It is a spacious stone edifice, 3 stories high above the basement, with a handsome dome; and can be seen from the distance of 10 miles in every direction. The square is surrounded by a fence, with 16 gates, for which congress has appropriated $1,000. It contains a jail, several places of worship, 2 printing offices, each of which issues a weekly newspaper, 10 or 12 stores, 60 dwellings, and, in 1840, 376 inhabitants. In June, 1837, the contractor with 40 men and 5 females arrived here, having, in 11 days, cut their way through the wilderness, from Milwaukee, and commenced the building of the capital. This distance is now travelled in 2 days. The growth of the place has been rapid, having chiefly been since the spring of 1841, and its prosperity is substantial.

MAINE.

MAINE, the northeastern of the United States, is bounded n. by Lower Canada; E. by New Brunswick, from which it is separated by the St. Croix river, and a line due n. from the monument, at the source of the St. Croix river, as designated and agreed to by the commissioners, under the 5th article in the treaty of 1794, between the governments of the United States and Great Britain; thence n., following the exploring line run and marked by the surveyors of the two governments in the years of 1817 and 1818, under the 5th article of the treaty of Ghent, to its intersection with the St. John's river, and to the middle of the channel thereof; thence up the middle of the main channel of said river St. John, to the mouth of the river St. Francis; thence up the middle of the channel of the said river St. Francis, and through the lakes through which it flows to the outlet of the lake Pohenagamook; thence southwesterly, in a straight line to a point in the n. w. branch of the river St. John, which point shall be 10 miles distant from the main branch of the St. John, in a straight line, and in the nearest direction; but if the said point shall be found to be less than 7 miles from the nearest point or crest of the highlands, that divide the rivers which empty themselves into the river St. Lawrence from those which fall into the river St. John, to a point 7 miles in a straight line from the said summit or crest; thence in a straight line in a course about s. 8° w. to the point where the parallel of lat. 46° 25' n. intersects the s. w. branch of the St. John; thence southerly by the said branch to the source thereof in the highlands at the Metjarmette portage; thence down along the said highlands which divide the waters which empty themselves into the St. Lawrence from those which fall into the Atlantic ocean, to the head of Hall's stream; thence down the middle of said stream till the line thus run intersects the old line of boundary surveyed and marked by Valentine and Collins previously to the year 1774, as the 45° of n. lat., and which has been known and understood to be the line of actual division between the states of New York and Vermont on the one side, and the British province of Lower Canada on the other; and from the said point of intersection w. along said dividing line, as heretofore known and understood, to the Iroquois, or St. Lawrence river. Such are the terms of the late treaty, now ratified by both governments, and which has happily settled a controversy of a quarter of a century. The line designated as the old line, run as the 45° of n. lat., is found to be about 1 mile n. of the true line of 45° n. lat. Maine is bounded s. by the Atlantic ocean. This state lies between 43° 5' and 47° 20' n. lat., and between 66° 50' and 70° 55' w. lon. It is computed to contain 30,000 sq. miles, or 19,309,000 acres. It was under the jurisdiction of Massachusetts until 1820, when it was made an independent state. The population in 1790, was 96,540; in 1800, 151,719; in 1810, 228,705; in 1820, 298,335; in 1830, 399,955; in 1840, 501,793. Of these 252,989 are free white males; 247,449 do. females; free colored males, 720; do. females, 635. Employed in agriculture, 101,630; in commerce, 2,921; manufactures, 31,579; navigating the ocean, 10,091; learned professions, 1,689.

Augusta, at the head of sloop navigation on the Kennebec river, 50 miles from its mouth, is the seat of government.

This state is divided into 13 counties, which, with their population and capitals, are as follows: YORK, 54,024, Alfred; CUMBERLAND, 68,658, Portland; LINCOLN, 63,517, Wiscasset; HANCOCK, 23,605, Ellsworth; WASHINGTON, 23,327, Machias; KENNEBEC, 55,823, Augusta; OXFORD, 33,351, Paris; SOMERSET, 33,912, Norridgewock; PENOBSCOT, 45,705, Bangor; WALDO, 41,509, Belfast; PISCATAQUIS, 13,138, Dover; FRANKLIN, 20,801, Farmington; AROOSTOOK, 9,413, Houlton. These counties contain about 498 townships, or settlements, some of which have but few inhabitants.

Maine is an elevated country, but generally uneven and hilly rather than mountainous. On the western side of the state, east of the White mountains in New Hampshire, an irregular chain of highlands extends eastwardly to the north of the sources of the Kennebec and Penobscot rivers, and passing south of the sources of the Aroostook river terminates on the eastern boundary of the United States, at an elevated peak, denominated Mars Hill. This chain of highlands the British claimed as the most northern boundary of the United States. Katahdin mountain is the most elevated summit of the chain. This peak is about 70 miles n. of Bangor, between the e. and w. branches of the Penobscot river. It is 5,335 feet high. Another chain of highlands extends in a n. w. direction from near the n. w. source of Connecticut river, dividing the waters which flow northwardly into the St. Lawrence, from those which flow southwardly into the Atlantic ocean and the bay of Fundy, which is a branch of it. This is a continuous, though somewhat irregular chain, probably nowhere less than 1,400 feet high, and is clearly the northern boundary of the United States, as settled by the treaty of 1783. Where the new road from Hallowell to Quebec crosses this chain, it is 2,000 feet high. Though not very elevated, the interior of Maine rises so rapidly from the seacoast as to preclude the flow of the tide far inland, though few other states of the Union are more completely traversed by navigable rivers.

The rest of Maine is hilly, though the hills are not generally very elevated. The tract of country along the seacoast, to the extent of from 10 to 20 miles from it, and to a greater width in the s. w. part, is very various, and generally rather a poor soil, though in some places it is tolerably fertile. The best land in the state is between the Penobscot and Kennebec rivers, where it is excellent. The mountainous region in the n. w. has a poor soil. East of the Penobscot river, the soil is not of a superior quality, excepting about the sources of the St. John's river and its tributary streams.

The principal productions are grass, Indian corn, wheat, barley, rye, and flax. The uncleared lands are of great extent, and furnish an immense amount of pine and other lumber, which, in the form of masts, plank, boards, and timber, is exported to a great extent, particularly from the territory bordering on and e. of the Penobscot river. From other parts of the state near the navigable rivers, a great amount of wood for fuel is sent to Boston and the other principal towns on the shore of Massachusetts. Fish, potatoes, beef, and pork, are also extensive articles of export.

According to the statistics of the census of 1840, there were in Maine 59,208 horses and mules, 337,255 neat cattle, 649,264 sheep, 117,386 swine. There were produced, 848,166 bush. of wheat, 355,161 of barley, 1,076,409 of oats, 137,941 of rye, 950,528 of Indian corn, 10,392,390 of potatoes, 801,358 tons of hay, 1,465,551 pounds of wool, 257,464 of sugar. The value of the products of the dairy was $1,496,902, and of lumber $1,808,683. The amount of wheat and Indian corn had been greater in some previous years.

Previously to the year 1807, when the wars in Europe gave to the United States a great share of the carrying trade of the world, commerce was so profitable, and the facilities for carrying it on in Maine were so great, that agriculture was greatly neglected for this superior source of wealth; but afterward, when an embargo, and non-intercourse, and war, crippled the resources of commerce, the inhabitants of Maine were driven from the seaboard on to the lands in the interior; and from that time the agricultural resources of the state have been more extensively developed. Much of the land is well adapted to grazing, and cattle and sheep are raised in great perfection. Sometimes the crop of Indian corn suffers from the shortness of the season. Among the fruits, apples, pears, plums, and melons, succeed well.

The facilities which Maine enjoys for commerce are very great. The rivers are extensively navigable, and numerous bays and inlets on the coast, protected as they often are by islands, furnish more good harbors than are found in any other state in the Union. Ships are extensively built, not only for their own use, but for a foreign market. The fisheries furnish employment to many of the inhabitants, and are not only a source of wealth, but a nursery of seamen. Lime is exported, chiefly from Thomaston, to the amount of about $1,000,000 annually. A fine building granite, chiefly from Hallowell, which is of a light color, is also extensively exported. Maine, in point of shipping, is the third state in the Union.

The climate of Maine, though subject to great extremes of heat and cold, is generally favorable to health. The cold of winter, though severe, is steady, and is less injurious to the constitution than the sudden changes so frequent in many parts of the country. Near the ocean the heat of summer is greatly tempered by the sea breezes. The season of vegetation, at its greatest length, extends from April 21st to October 16th, though the vigor of vegetation does not continue more than three months and a half. In July 9th, 1838, the thermometer rose to 100° above zero, and on January 26th, 1837, it sunk to 27° below zero, which may be regarded as the extremes of temperature. Such extremes are of short continuance.

Maine has a number of fine rivers. Among these is the Penobscot, 250 miles long, and navigable for large ships to Bangor, 52 miles from the ocean. The tide here rises from 20 to 25 feet, and is of itself sufficient to float large ships, and greatly facilitates the entrance and departure of vessels. The Kennebec has a course of about 250 miles, and is navigable for large ships to Bath, 13 miles from the ocean; and for vessels of 150 tons to Hallowell, 40 miles from the sea; and for sloops of 100 tons 2 miles further, to Augusta; and for boats to Waterville, 18 miles above Augusta. The Androscoggin rises in New Hampshire, but runs chiefly in Maine, and unites with the Kennebec, 20 miles from the ocean. The Saco rises in the White mountains in New Hampshire, but soon enters Maine, and, pursuing a southeastwardly direction, discharges itself into Saco bay. It is navigable for ships 6 miles to Saco falls. The Damariscotta is chiefly an arm of the sea, has a tide of 10 feet, and is navigable for large vessels 18 miles to Nobleboro. The Sheepscot is a small river, with a large bay at its mouth, which forms the harbor of Wiscasset, one of the finest in the state. All these, above the navigation for vessels, as well as many others, have numerous falls, and furnish many excellent mill seats. The Piscataqua river forms the boundary of Maine on the west, but runs chiefly in New Hampshire.

Maine has numerous lakes and ponds in the interior. The largest lakes are Moosehead, which is 50 miles long, and from 10 to 15 broad; and Umbagog, which lies partly in New Hampshire, and is 18 miles long and 10 broad. But so numerous are the smaller lakes and ponds, that it is computed that one tenth of the surface of the state is covered with water.

The coast of Maine abounds with islands, the largest of which is Mount Desert, in Frenchman's bay, and is 15 miles long and 12 broad. Long island, Deer island, and Fox islands, are on the w. side of Penobscot bay. The principal bays are Penobscot, 30 miles long and 18 wide; Casco bay, extending 20 miles between Cape Elizabeth and Cape Small Point, containing many islands; and Passamaquoddy bay, lying between Maine and New Brunswick, 6 miles deep and 12 wide. The shores of Maine are bold and rocky, and have many inlets.

The most commercial cities and towns are Portland, (city,) on Casco Bay, the third in commercial importance in New England; Bangor, (city,) on the Penobscot; Hallowell, on the Kennebec; Thomaston, on the St. George river; Bath, on the Kennebec; Belfast, on a branch of Penobscot bay; and Wiscasset, on a bay at the mouth of the Sheepscot. Besides these, the other large towns are Augusta, Gardiner, Brunswick, Waldoborough, Frankfort, Prospect, Bucksport, Camden, Gorham, Wells, and Eastport.

The exports of Maine for the year ending September, 1840, were $1,018,269, and the imports were $622,762. There were in Maine, in 1840, 70 commercial and 14 commission houses engaged in foreign trade, employing a capital of $1,646,926; and 2,320 retail drygoods and other stores, with a capital of $3,973,593; 2,068 persons were employed in the lumber trade, with a capital of $305,850; 123 persons were employed in internal transportation, who, with 56 butchers, packers, &c., used a capital of $95,150; 3,610 persons were engaged in the fisheries, with a capital of $526,967.

Though manufactures are not a primary object of attention in Maine, they have not been neglected. The amount of home-made or family manufactures in 1840, was $304,397. There were 24 woollen manufactories employing 532 persons, producing goods to the amount of $412,366, and employing a capital of $316,105; 6 cotton manufactories, with 29,736 spindles, employing 1,414 persons, producing goods to the amount of $970,397, with a capital of $1,393,000; 16 furnaces produced 6,122 tons of cast iron, and 1 forge for bar iron, employing 48 persons, and a capital of $185,950; 15 persons produced 50,000 bushels of salt, with a capital of $25,000; 280 persons produced granite and marble to the amount of $98,720; 6 paper manufactories employed 89 persons, producing to the amount of $64,000, with a capital of $20,600; 37 persons manufactured tobacco to the amount of $18,150, with a capital of $6,050; hats and caps were made to the value of $74,174, and straw bonnets to the value of $8,807, together employing 212 persons, and a capital of $23,050; 395 tanneries employed 754 persons, and a capital of $571,793; 530 other leather manufactories, as saddleries, &c., produced articles worth $443,846, and had a capital of $191,717; 21 potteries employed 31 persons, and manufactured articles to the amount of $30,850, with a capital of $11,353; 864 persons manufactured bricks and lime to the amount of $261,586, with a capital of $300,822; 339 persons produced machinery to the amount of $69,752; 119 persons produced hardware and cutlery to the amount of $65,555; 4 ropewalks, employing 34 persons, produced cordage to the amount of $32,660, with a capital of $23,000; 779 persons produced wagons and carriages to the amount of $174,310, and employed a capital of $75,012; flouring, saw, and other mills, employed 3,630 persons, producing manufactures to the amount of $3,161,592, with a capital of $2,900,565. Ships were built to the amount of $1,844,902; furniture was manufactured to the amount of $204,875, employing 1,453 persons, and a capital of $668,558; 34 brick, and 1,674 wooden houses were erected, employing 2,482 persons, and cost $733,067; 34 printing offices, 14 binderies, 3 daily, 2 semi-weekly, 30 weekly newspapers, 5 periodicals, the whole employing 196 persons, and a capital of $63,200. The whole amount of capital employed in manufactures in the state was $7,147,224.

Maine has a number of respectable literary institutions. The principal is Bowdoin College, at Brunswick, which received its name from the Hon. James Bowdoin, its founder. It was founded in 1794, and went into operation in 1802, has been liberally endowed by its founder, by Massachusetts, and by Maine, and is a flourishing institution. It has 11 instructors, 165 students, and 20,000 volumes in its libraries. Waterville College was founded in 1820, and is under the control of the Baptists. It has 6 instructors, 65 students, and 7,000 volumes in its libraries. The Bangor Theological Seminary was established in 1816, is under the direction of the Congregationalists, and gives a classical and theological education, preparatory to the gospel ministry. It has 3 instructors, 43 students, and 7,000 volumes in its library. The Methodists have an institution at Readfield, denominated the Maine Wesleyan Seminary, founded in 1822. In all these institutions there were in 1840, 266 students, which is something less than the above aggregate, which is of a later date. There were in the state in 1840, 86 academies, with 8,477 students, and 3,385 primary and common schools, with 164,477 scholars. Notwithstanding these facilities for education, there were 3,241 persons over 20 years of age who could neither read nor write.

The three principal religious denominations in Maine are the Baptists, the Methodists, and the Congregationalists. In 1836 their numbers were as follows: Baptists, 232 churches, 145 ordained ministers, 15,000 communicants; Methodists, 115 travelling preachers, 15,493 communicants; Congregationalists, 161 churches, 119 ministers, 12,370 communicants. Besides the above, there are some Free-Will Baptists, Friends, Universalists, Unitarians, Roman Catholics, and Episcopalians.

There were on the 1st of January, 1840, 48 banks in Maine, with an aggregate capital of $4,671,500, and a circulation of $1,224,658. At the close of 1840 the state debt amounted to $1,687,367.

There is a state prison at Thomaston, where the convicts are extensively employed in quarrying and cutting stone.

Maine has executed and projected several important works of internal improvement. The Cumberland and Oxford canal was completed in 1829. This canal connects Portland with Sebago Pond, is 20½ miles long, and has 25 locks. By another lock in Saco river, it is extended through Brandy and Long ponds, making its whole length 50 miles, and its whole cost about $250,000. Bangor and Orono railroad was completed in 1836, and connects the two places, being 12 miles long. The Portland, Saco, and Portsmouth railroad was incorporated in 1837, and connects with the railroad from Boston to Portsmouth. A railroad has been projected from Portland to Bangor, a distance of 132 miles, to complete the great chain of railroads along the seaboard. Several routes have been explored from the seaboard to Quebec, the nearest and least expensive of which is from Belfast; but it is not probable that such a work will soon be completed.

Maine became an independent state in 1820, having previously belonged to Massachusetts. The governor is chosen annually by the people, and has a salary of $1,500. The senate and house of representatives are also elected annually by the people. The number of the senate cannot be less than 20, nor more than 31. The number of representatives cannot be less than 100, nor more than 300. Seven councillors are elected by the legislature to advise the governor in his executive duties. The judges of the supreme court are appointed by the governor and council, and hold their offices during good behavior, or until they are 70 years of age.

The first permanent settlement in Maine was made in Bristol, which lies on the east side of Demariscotta river, at Pemaquid point. In 1635, the District was granted by the British crown to Sir Ferdinando Gorges, who appointed a governor and council. In 1652, the state of Massachusetts purchased the territory of the heirs of Gorges for $5,334. It was annexed to Massachusetts in 1691, by a charter from William and Mary, and remained under its jurisdiction until it became an independent state.

MANDANA, p-o., Skenesateles t., Onondaga co., N. Y.

MANDAN, district, is a territory of the United States, included between the British Possessions on the n., Wisconsin ter. on the e., the Indian ter. on the s., of which the n. fork of Platte r. may be considered the boundary, and the Rocky mountains, separating it from Oregon ter., on the w. It contains about 300,000 square ms., being about 520 ms. from n. to s., and 600 from e. to w. This extensive region has been but imperfectly explored. The surface is chiefly an elevated plain, or table land, consisting of vast prairies, on which large herds of the bison, elk, and deer, range; and though the soil is generally light and thin, it affords abundant grass and herbage for their support, and it is undoubtedly capable of supporting an equal number of domestic cattle. The principal rivers are the Missouri and Yellow Stone, with their numerous branches, including their sources. The largest branch of the Yellow Stone is the Big Horn, which rises in the s. w. part of the ter. The source of the Missouri in this ter. is about 3,100 ms. above its junction with the Mississippi, in about 43° 30' n. lat. Within about  $\frac{1}{2}$  of a mile from this point are found the head waters of the n. branch of Lewis's r., which flows into the Columbia r. The principal elevations e. of the Rocky mountains are the Black hills, covered with shrubby cedars, which commence in the s. part of the ter., extending n. e. The most interesting feature of this region is the capacity which it affords for a pass and a road across the Rocky mountains. It appears that all the points of departure are situated in the vicinity of the Black hills, between the 43d and the 45th parallels of latitude; and that among these passes across the mountains, there is one, and probably but one, sufficiently gradual in its ascents and descents, and sufficiently open, to admit of the passage of wheel carriages, and consequently of the ready construction of a convenient and good road. This pass goes through an opening in the Black hills, at about 44° 30' n. lat., and, keeping between these hills and Big Horn mountain, it crosses the tributaries of the Yellow Stone from the s., and finally the Yellow Stone itself. It then crosses the Missouri, or rather the three forks of that r., a short distance above their junction, from whence it pursues a southwestwardly direction, until arriving at the head waters of Bitter Root r.; thence down the valley of this r., to its junction with the Salmon, or Lewis's r., and thence down the valley of this last r., to its junction with the Columbia. The point of departure above-mentioned is about 650 ms. northwestwardly from the Council Bluffs, on the Missouri; and the direction of that r., for 300 ms., is nearly parallel with the route above described, and the Missouri would afford the means of transportation for 300 miles, from the Council Bluffs, on the route. A future day may witness a good road across the Rocky mountains along this interesting route. The principal aboriginal tribes of Mandan district are the Pawnee, Riccares, Crows, Blackfeet Indians, &c. They own horses in abundance, and on them pursue the bison, and transport their baggage from place to place; and many of them are very expert horsemen. A greater part of this region is destitute of timber; but as the rivers descend toward the e., trees extensively skirt their borders. The Mandan Indians, who formerly inhabited a part of this territory, were mostly exterminated by the small-pox in 1837; and those who remained have become united with other tribes. To perpetuate their memory, their name has been attached to the district.

MARYLAND.

MARYLAND, the most southern of the middle United States, is bounded N. by Pennsylvania; E. by Delaware and the Atlantic; and S. and W. by Virginia. It is between 38° and 39° 44' N. lat., and between 75° 10' and 79° 20' W. lon., and between 2° 31' W. and 1° 59' E. from W. It is 196 miles long, and 120 broad, containing 13,959 square miles, or 8,933,760 acres, of which one fifth is water. The Chesapeake bay runs nearly through the state from S. to N., dividing it into two parts, called the Eastern Shore and the Western Shore.

The population in 1790, was 319,728; in 1800, 345,824; in 1810, 390,546; in 1820, 407,250; in 1830, 446,913; in 1840, 469,232, of which 89,495 were slaves. Of the free population 158,636 were white males; 159,061 do. females; 29,173 were colored males; 22,847 do. females. Employed in agriculture, 60,851; in commerce, 3,249; in manufactures and trades, 21,325; navigating the ocean, 721; do. canals, lakes, and rivers, 1,519; learned professions, 1,647.

This state is divided into 20 counties, which, with their population in 1840, and their capitals, are as follows: Western Shore—ALLEGHANY, 15,690, Cumberland; ANNE ARUNDEL, 29,532, Annapolis; BALTIMORE, 134,379, Baltimore; CALVERT, 9,229, Prince Frederick; CARROLL, 17,241, Westminster; CHARLES, 16,023, Port Tobacco; FREDERICK, 36,405, Frederick; HARBOR, 17,120, Bel Air; MONTGOMERY, 14,669, Rockville; PRINCE GEORGE'S, 19,539, Upper Marlboro'; ST. MARY'S, 13,224, Leonardtown; WASHINGTON, 28,850, Hagerstown. Eastern Shore—CAROLINE, 7,806, Denton; CECIL, 17,223, Elkton; DORCHESTER, 18,843, Cambridge; KENT, 10,842, Chestertown; QUEEN ANNE'S, 12,633, Centerville; SOMERSET, 19,508, Princess Anne; TALBOT, 12,090, Easton; WORCESTER, 18,377, Snowhill.

Annapolis, on the western shore of the Chesapeake, on the Severn river, is the seat of government.

In the counties on the eastern shore of the Chesapeake, the land is generally level and low, and in many places is covered with stagnant waters, which give rise, in the summer and fall, to agues and intermittent fevers, and many of the inhabitants have a sickly appearance. The soil possesses considerable fertility, and produces a beautiful white wheat, Indian corn, sweet potatoes, and tobacco. The country on the western shore of the Chesapeake, below the falls of the rivers, is level and free from stones, and is very similar to that on the eastern shore. Above the falls, the country becomes gradually uneven and hilly; and in the western part of the state it is mountainous, being crossed by different ranges, under the names of South mountain, North mountain, Sideling hill, Warrior's, Evis', Willis', and Alleghany mountains. Wheat and tobacco are the staple productions; but some cotton, of an inferior quality, is raised in the western counties, and, south of Baltimore, a bright tobacco, of superior quality, denominated hitefoot. Hemp and flax are produced in considerable quantities. The soil of the state is generally a red loam, or clay, and much of it is excellent. Apples, pears, peaches, and plums, are abundant. The forests abound with various nuts, suitable for fattening hogs, which are suffered to run wild in the woods, and, when fattened, are killed and exported in great quantities. The climate, in the mountainous region in the western part of the state, is salubrious; and in the valleys between the mountains is much fine land, adapted both to grain and to grazing.

In this state there were in 1840, 92,920 horses and mules; 225,714 neat cattle; 257,922 sheep; 416,943 swine; poultry to the value of $218,765. There were produced 3,345,783 bush. of wheat; 3,594 of barley; 3,534,211 of oats; 723,577 of rye; 73,606 of buckwheat; 8,233,086 of Ind. corn; 488,201 lbs. of wool; 2,357 of hops; 3,674 of wax; 1,036,433 bush. of potatoes; 106,637 tons of hay; 24,816,012 pounds of tobacco; 5,673 of cotton; 2,290 of silk cocoons; 36,266 of sugar. The products of the dairy amounted to $457,466; of the orchard, $105,740; of lumber, $226,977. There were made 7,585 gallons of wine.

Iron ore is found in various parts of the state, and extensive beds of coal exist between the mountains in the western part.

This state carries on an extensive trade with the other states, with the West Indies, and with Europe, principally from Baltimore. The exports consist of flour, tobacco, iron, lumber, Ind. corn, pork, flax seed, beans, and fish, particularly shell-fish.

The Potomac river, which divides this state from Virginia, is 550 miles long, and navigable about 300 miles to Washington city. It is 7½ miles wide at its mouth, and 1½ at Alexandria, 290 miles from its mouth. The Susquehanna is a large river, which enters into the head of the Chesapeake bay in this state. It is 1½ mile wide at its mouth, but is navigable only 5 miles, being, above that, much obstructed by falls and rapids. The Patuxent is a small river, navigable, however, 14 miles to Baltimore for large ships. The Patuxent is 110 miles long, and is navigable for 50 miles for vessels of 250 tons. The other rivers are Elk, Sasafra, Chester, Choptank, Nanticoke, and Pocomoke.

The Chesapeake bay is 270 miles long, and from 7 to 20 wide; and, by its deep water and numerous inlets, furnishes many fine harbors.

Baltimore is much the largest place in the state, and is the third in population in the United States. This state possesses great facilities for inland and foreign trade, and has an extensive commerce. The other principal towns are Frederick, Hagerstown, and Annapolis.

The exports of this state in 1840 amounted to $5,768,763, and the imports to $4,910,746. There were in the state 70 commercial and 117 commission houses engaged in foreign trade, employing a capital of $4,414,000; 2,562 retail drygoods and other stores, with a capital of $9,246,170; 1,330 persons engaged in the lumber trade, employing a capital of $307,300; 103 persons employed in internal transportation, who, with 211 butchers, packers, &c., employed a capital of $23,880; 7,814 persons employed in the fisheries, with a capital of $88,947.

The principal manufactures were of home-made or family articles, to the amount of $176,050; 39 fluting mills and 29 woollen manufactories, employing 388 persons, producing articles to the amount of $235,900, and employing a capital of $117,630; 21 cotton manufactories, with 41,182 sp., employing 2,284 persons, producing articles to the amount of $1,150,580, and employing a capital of $1,304,400; 13 rope factories employed 198 persons, and produced articles to the amount of $141,050; 12 furnaces, producing 8,876 tons of cast iron, and 17 forges, &c., producing 7,900 tons of bar iron, the whole employing 1,782 persons, and a capital of $795,650; 17 paper manufactories produced to the amount of $195,100, and other paper manufactories $3,000, the whole employing 171 persons, and a capital of $95,400; 93 persons produced 1,865,240 pounds of soap, and 731,446 do. of tallow candles, and 35,000 do. of spermaceti candles, employing a capital of $98,600; 73 distilleries produced 366,213 gallons, and 11 breweries produced 828,140 gallons, the whole employing 199 persons, and a capital of $185,790; hats and caps were manufactured to the amount of $153,456, and straw bonnets to the amount of $13,900, the whole employing 205 persons, and a capital of $76,630; 161 tanneries employed 1,035 persons, and a capital of $713,655; 408 saddleries, and other manufactories of leather, produced articles to the amount of $1,050,275, with a capital of $494,187; 1 glass house, employing 37 persons, produced articles to the amount of $40,000, with a capital of $30,000; 23 potteries employed 90 persons, producing to the amount of $60,240, with a capital of $25,120; 5 powder mills employed 47 persons, and produced 669,125 pounds of gunpowder, with a capital of $46,000; 53 persons produced drugs and paints to the amount of $90,100, with a capital of $85,100; 6 sugar refineries produced $176,000; 102 persons produced confectionery to the amount of $73,450; 278 persons manufactured tobacco to the amount of $238,000, with a capital of $125,100; 247 persons manufactured granite and marble to the amount of $152,750; 1,042 persons produced bricks and lime to the amount of $409,456; 723 persons produced machinery to the amount of $348,165; 36 persons manufactured hardware and cutlery to the amount of $15,670; 690 persons produced carriages and wagons to the amount of $357,622, with a capital of $154,955; 189 flouring mills produced 466,708 barrels of flour, and, with other mills, employed 898 persons, producing articles to the amount of $3,267,250, and employed a capital of $4,069,671; ships were built to the amount of $279,771; 834 persons manufactured furniture to the amount of $305,360, with a capital of $339,336; 369 brick or stone houses, and 592 wooden houses, were built, employing 2,026 persons, and cost $1,078,770; 48 printing offices, and 15 binderies, 7 daily, 7 semi-weekly, and 28 weekly newspapers, and 7 periodicals, employed 376 persons, and a capital of $159,100. The whole amount of capital employed in manufactures in the state amounted to $6,450,284.

Washington College, at Chestertown, was established in 1782; St. John's College, at Annapolis, in 1784. These two subsequently formed a university. St. Mary's College, at Baltimore, was founded in 1799, by the Catholics. The Baltimore Medical School was founded in 1807. In 1812 there were connected with it the faculties of general science, law, and divinity, and it received the name of the University of Maryland. Mount St. Mary's College was established near Emmetsburg, in 1830, by the Catholics. These institutions had, in 1840, about 400 students. Besides, there were 127 academies and grammar schools, with 4,178 students; and 567 primary and common schools, with 16,968 scholars. There were 11,665 white persons, over 20 years of age, who could neither read nor write.

The first settlers of this state were Roman Catholics, and they are still numerous. They have an archbishop, who is metropolitan of the United States, and 60 churches. The Episcopalians have 77 ministers; the Presbyterians 25; the Baltimore Methodist Conference, which extends into some other states, has 173 travelling preachers; the Baptists have 20 ministers; the German Reformed 9; and there are some Lutherans, Friends, Unitarians, &c.

There were in this state in 1840, 13 banks, with an aggregate capital of $9,106,031, and a circulation of $2,328,525. At the close of 1840, the state debt amounted to $15,109,086.

There is a state penitentiary in Baltimore, first occupied in 1829.

The constitution of this state was formed in 1776, but has been frequently amended since that time. The governor is chosen annually by the joint ballot of both houses of the legislature, and is eligible only 3 years in 7. He must be 25 years of age, and have resided in the state 5 years. The senators are 15 in number, 9 for the western and 6 for the eastern shore; they must be 25 years of age, have resided in the state 3 years, and are chosen for 5 years. The representatives must be 25 years of age, and have resided one year in the county for which they are chosen immediately preceding the election. They are 80 in number; 4 from each of the 19 counties, and two each from the cities of Baltimore and Annapolis. The council consists of 5 members elected by the legislature to advise the governor, and sanction or negative the executive appointments. They must be 25 years of age, and are chosen for 3 years. The governor has no veto upon the acts of the legislature. The judiciary consists of a chancellor and judges, who hold their offices during good behavior, but are removable by impeachment before the legislature by a vote of two thirds of the members.

Every free white male citizen, over 21 years of age, who has resided one year in the county, or in the city of Annapolis or Baltimore next preceding the election, enjoys the right of suffrage.

Two of the greatest works of internal improvement in the United States have been projected and commenced by Maryland. The first is the Chesapeake and Ohio canal, commencing at Georgetown, District of Columbia, and to extend to Cumberland, on the Potomac, and thence by Wills creek and the Youghiogheny and Monongahela rivers to Pittsburgh, a distance of 341½ miles. It would require a tunnel through the Alleghany mountains 4 miles and 80 yards in length. The whole amount of lockage will be 3215 feet. The estimated cost is $9,347,408. The state of Maryland has subscribed $3,000,000, and the United States $1,000,000, toward the completion of the undertaking. A charter was granted by Virginia in 1824, and confirmed by Maryland and the Congress of the U. S. in 1825, and the work was commenced in 1828. It has been nearly completed from Georgetown to Cumberland, 185 miles, and has been extended to Alexandria.

The second great work is the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, designed to extend from Baltimore to Wheeling, on the Ohio, 360 miles. It was incorporated by the legislature of Maryland, Virginia, and Pennsylvania, in 1827, and commenced July 4th, 1828. The state of Maryland has subscribed to the stock $3,000,000, and the city of Baltimore $3,000,000. It is completed from Baltimore to Cumberland. The Washington Branch extends 30½ miles from Patapsco river to Washington. The Baltimore and Port Deposit railroad extends 36 miles from Baltimore to Havre de Grace. The Baltimore and Susquehanna railroad extends 56 ms. from Baltimore to York, Pa. The Reisterstown Branch railroad commences 6 ms. from Baltimore, and extends 8 ms. to Reisterstown. The Wilmington and Susquehanna railroad extends from Havre de Grace, 32 ms., to Wilmington, Del. The Annapolis and Elkridge railroad extends 194 miles from Washington Branch to Annapolis.

The original charter of Maryland was granted to Cecilius Calvert, (Lord Baltimore), in 1632. It was originally included in the patent of the South Virginia Company, and was considered as belonging to Virginia, until the above date. It was called, by its proprietor, Maryland, in honor of Henrietta Maria, queen of Charles I. The proprietor was a Catholic, and planted the first colony, consisting of 300 Roman Catholics, in 1634, on the n. side of the Potomac, at a town called St. Mary's. Previously to the grant to Calvert, a few emigrants had settled in the country, at the head of whom was a man by the name of Claiborne, who raised a rebellion against the proprietor, and instigated the Indians against the settlers, and gave them much trouble. Calvert offered to every emigrant fifty acres of land in fee, and without regard to religious persuasion; and as a free toleration was granted, the colony was increased. The constitution of Maryland was settled in 1650; the legislature was divided into two houses, and the province into 3 counties. Under Cromwell the Calvert family were deprived of the government, but were reinstated by Charles II. at the restoration. They were deprived again under William and Mary, and Maryland continued a royal government until 1716. The Calvert who held the claims of his family then renounced the Roman Catholic religion, and was reinstated in his rights. At the commencement of the revolution, the authority fell into the hands of the people, who, in 1776, formed their constitution. From the first, they were active in resisting the acts of British oppression, and bore their part in the trials and hardships and dangers of the revolutionary war. In convention, April 28th, 1788, they adopted the constitution of the United States,—yeas 63, nays 12; majority 51.

MASSACHUSETTS.

MASSACHUSETTS, one of the eastern United States, is bounded n. by Vermont and New Hampshire; e. by the Atlantic; s. by the Atlantic, Rhode Island, and Connecticut; and w. by New York. It lies between 41° 23' and 43° 59' n. lat., and 69° 50' and 73° 10' w. lon. It is 190 miles long and 90 broad, containing about 7,500 sq. ms., or 4,800,000 acres. The population in 1790 was 323,727; in 1800, 422,845; in 1810, 472,040; in 1820, 523,287; in 1830, 610,406; 1840, 737,699. Of these 360,679 were free white males; 368,351 do. females; 4,654 free colored males; 4,015 do. females. Employed in mining, 499; in agriculture, 87,837; in commerce, 8,063; in manufactures and trades, 65,176; navigating the ocean, 27,153; do. rivers, &c., 373; learned professions, 3,804.

The capital, and the largest town in New England, is Boston, situated on a small peninsula in Boston bay.

This state is divided into 14 counties, which, with their population in 1840, and capitals, are as follows: SUFFOLK, 95,773, Boston; ESSEX, 94,967, Salem, Newburyport, and Ipswich; MIDDLESEX, 106,611, Cambridge, Concord, and Lowell; WORCESTER, 95,213, Worcester; HAMPSHIRE, 20,897, Northampton; HAMPDEN, 37,366, Springfield; FRANKLIN, 28,812, Greenfield; BERKSHIRE, 41,745, Lenox; BRISTOL, 60,164, New Bedford and Taunton; PLYMOUTH, 47,373, Plymouth; BARNSTABLE, 32,548, Barnstable; DUKES, 3,958, Edgartown; NANTUCKET, 9,012, Nantucket; NORFOLK, 53,140, Dedham.

There are several ranges of mountains, which come from Vermont and New Hampshire, and cross the western part of the state into Connecticut. To the e. of these mountains the country is hilly, except in the southern counties, where it is level and sandy. On the seacoast, the land is generally poor, particularly in the s. e., but by a skilful cultivation, it is made in many parts to produce well. The rest of the state has generally a strong, good soil, well adapted to grazing and to grain. The lands in the valleys of the Connecticut and Housatonic rivers have an excellent soil. In no state in the Union has agriculture been more improved than in Massachusetts. The principal productions are grass, Indian corn, rye, wheat, oats, and potatoes. Beef, pork, butter, and cheese, of an excellent quality, are extensively produced. Apples are found in great quantities, and are extensively made into cider. Peaches, pears, plums, and cherries are cultivated with success. In 1840 there were in this state, 61,484 horses and mules; 282,574 neat cattle; 378,226 sheep; 143,281 swine; poultry to the amount of $178,157; there were produced 157,923 bushels of wheat; 165,319 of barley; 1,319,680 of oats; 536,014 of rye; 87,000 of buckwheat; 1,809,192 of Indian corn; 941,906 pounds of wool; 254,795 of hops; 5,385,652 bushels of potatoes; 569,395 tons of hay; 2,432 of hemp and flax; 1,741 pounds of silk cocoons; 579,227 of sugar. The value of the products of the dairy was $2,373,299; of the orchard, $389,177; of lumber, $344,845.

Massachusetts is a great commercial state. The fisheries of the United States are chiefly carried on by her citizens. The principal articles of export are fish, beef, pork, lumber, flax seed, whale oil, spermaceti, and her manufactures. Marble is extensively exported from West Stockbridge, and granite from Quincy.

Her manufactures of cotton cloths, boots and shoes, leather, wrought and cast iron, woollen cloths, straw bonnets, hats, cabinet work, paper, and oil, are extensive. Lowell, which was unknown by name 20 years ago, has become the Manchester of America, and, supported by its manufactures, has become the second place in population in the state. Muskets are extensively manufactured at the national armory in Springfield. In its shipping, Massachusetts is the first state in the Union, and has one third of the whole tonnage of the country.

The state debt at the close of 1840 was $5,149,137.

The climate of this state, is favorable to health, and about 1 in 7 of the inhabitants live to 70 years of age. The extremes of temperature are from 20 degrees below to 100 degrees above zero; but such extremes are rare and of short continuance.

The principal rivers are the Connecticut, which has a winding course of 50 miles in this state. Deerfield and Westfield rivers enter it from the west, and Miller's and Chickapee rivers from the east. The Housatonic rises in Berkshire county, in the western part of the state, and flows into the state of Connecticut. The Merrimac has a course of 50 miles in the n. e. part of the state, and enters the ocean at Newburyport. It is navigable for large vessels, 15 miles to Haverhill.

Massachusetts bay extends from Cape Ann on the n., 40 miles, to Cape Cod on the s., and includes Boston and Cape Cod bays. Buzzard's bay, on the s. shore of the state, is 30 miles in length. Boston harbor is one of the finest in the world, easy of entrance, safe and capacious, and easily and well defended. New Bedford, on Buzzard's bay, has a fine harbor. The other commercial towns are Salem, Newburyport, Gloucester, and Nantucket. The other principal towns are Lowell, Plymouth, Worcester, Springfield, Pittsfield, and Northampton.

There are several important islands off the s. shore of Massachusetts. The largest is Nantucket, 15 miles long and 11 broad, which of itself constitutes a county of its own name. Martha's Vineyard, to the w. of Nantucket, is 20 miles long, and from 2 to 10 broad. This, with Elizabeth islands, in Buzzard's bay, and some other small islands, constitutes Dukes county.

The exports of this state in 1840 amounted to $10,186,261, and the imports to $16,512,858.

There were in 1840, 241 commercial and 123 commission houses engaged in foreign trade, employing a capital of $13,881,517; and 3,625 retail drygoods and other stores, with a capital of $12,705,038; the lumber trade employed 3,432 persons, and a capital of $1,022,360; internal transportation employed 799 persons, and with 490 butchers, packers, &c., employed a capital of $407,350; the fisheries employed 16,000 persons, and a capital of $11,725,850.

The manufactures of Massachusetts are not less distinguished than its commerce. The value of family and home-made manufactures in 1840 was $231,942; there were 207 falling mills, and 144 woollen manufactories, employing 5,076 persons, producing goods to the amount of $7,089,898, and employing a capital of $4,179,850; 278 cotton manufactories, with 665,095 spindles, employing 20,928 persons, producing articles to the amount of $16,553,423, and employing a cap. of $17,414,989; 48 furnaces produced 9,333 tons of cast iron, 67 forges, rolling mills, &c., produced 6,004 tons of bar iron, the whole employing 1,097 persons, and a capital of $1,232,875; 83 paper manufactories, employing 967 persons, produced articles to the amount of $1,659,930, and other paper manufactories to the amount of $56,700, and the whole employed a capital of $1,082,800; 463 persons produced salt to the amount of $376,596 bushels, with a capital of $502,980; hats and caps were manufactured to the amount of $918,438, and straw bonnets to the amount of $821,646, the whole employing 6,656 persons, and a capital of $602,292; 355 tanneries employed 2,446 persons, and a capital of $1,024,699; paints and drugs were produced to the amount of $405,725, and turpentine and varnish to the amount of $25,880; 1,532 saddleries, and other leather manufactories, produced articles to the amount of $10,553,895, and employed a capital of $3,318,544; 4 glass houses, employing 372 persons, produced articles to the amount of $471,000, with a capital of $277,000; 20 potteries, employing 71 persons, produced articles to the amount of $44,450, with a capital of $27,975; 2 sugar refineries produced articles to the amount of $1,085,000; chocolate was manufactured to the amount of $31,500; and confectionery to the amount of $137,300; 14 powder mills employed 69 persons, and produced 2,315,215 pounds of gunpowder, with a capital of $255,000; 913 persons produced machinery to the amount of $926,975; 1,109 persons produced hardware and cutlery to the amount of $1,881,163; 37 distilleries produced 5,177,910 gallons, and 7 breweries produced 489,800 gallons, employing 154 persons, and a capital of $963,100; 397 persons produced 50 cannon and 23,652 small-arms; 1,402 persons produced carriages and wagons to the amount of $803,999, with a capital of $334,660; 274 persons wrought granite and marble to the amount of $217,180; and 758 persons manufactured bricks and lime to the amount of $310,796; mills of various kinds employed 1,808 persons, and manufactured to the amount of $1,771,185, with a capital of $1,440,152; ships were built to the amount of $1,349,994; 51 rope walks employed 672 persons, producing articles to the amount of $852,200, with a capital of $555,100; furniture employed 2,424 persons, producing $1,090,006; 246 persons manufactured musical instruments to the amount of $243,760, with a capital of $555,100; 324 brick and 2,249 wooden houses employed 2,947 persons, and cost $2,767,134. There were 102 printing offices, 73 binderies, 10 daily newspapers, 67 weekly, and 14 semi-weekly, and 14 periodicals, the whole employing 923 persons, and a capital of $416,200. The whole amount of capital employed in manufactures was $41,774,446.

Massachusetts has 3 colleges and 2 theological seminaries. Harvard University, at Cambridge, is the oldest and best endowed institution of the kind in the United States, having been founded in 1633, eighteen years after the first tree was felled, and the first log house was erected in the wilderness by the Pilgrim Fathers of New England. Williams College, at Williamstown, in the n. e. corner of the state, was founded in 1793, and is a flourishing institution. Amherst College was founded in 1821, and has had an unexampled growth, ranking with the first colleges in New England. The Theological Seminary, at Andover, is the best endowed, and one of the most flourishing institutions of the kind in the United States, and is under the direction of the Congregationalists. The Baptists, also, have a flourishing theological institution at Newton. All these institutions had, in 1840, 769 students. There were in the state, 251 academies and grammar schools, with 16,746 students; 3,362 primary and common schools, with 160,257 scholars. There were 4,448 persons over 20 years of age who could neither read nor write. These, as is the case in most of the states, are principally made up of foreign immigrants.

The principal religious denominations are the Congregationalists, the Baptists, the Methodists, the Episcopalians, and the Universalists. In 1836, the Orthodox Congregationalists had about 350 churches, 320 ministers, and 50,000 communicants. The Unitarians had about 120 ministers; the Baptists had 129 churches, 160 ministers, and 20,200 communicants. The Episcopalians had 1 bishop and 37 ministers; the Universalists had 100 congregations and 44 ministers. Besides these, there are a few Presbyterians, Christians, Roman Catholics, and Friends, and some others.

In November, 1839, Massachusetts had 118 banks, with an aggregate capital of $24,485,600, and a circulation of $7,875,323.

This state has a penitentiary at Charlestown.

Massachusetts has been fully awake to the subject of internal improvement. The Middlesex canal, connecting the Merrimack river, 2 miles above Lowell, with Boston harbor at Charlestown, is 27 miles long, and was completed in 1808, at a cost of $523,000. This was the first canal, of any considerable length, attempted in the United States. The Hampshire and Hampden canal continues the Farmington canal from the n. line of Connecticut, 22 miles, to Northampton, making the whole length of the canal from New Haven 76 miles. Blackstone canal, 45 miles long, connects Worcester with Providence, R. I., and was completed in 1823, at a cost of $600,000. Quincy railroad, completed in 1827, for the transportation of granite from the quarry, 3 miles, to Neponset river, was the first work of the kind in the United States; so late has been this species of improvement. The rails are of timber, faced with iron. Boston and Lowell railroad is 25 miles long, with a branch from Wilmington to Haverhill, 18 miles, and is extended to Dover, N. H. From Lowell, the road is continued, 15 miles, to Nashua, and thence to Concord, N. H. From Haverhill the road is continued through New Hampshire to Maine. The Eastern railroad extends, 33 miles, from Boston to Newburyport, and is extended to Portsmouth, N. H., and thence to Portland, Me. Boston and Providence railroad was incorporated in 1831, and opened in 1835, is 42 miles long, with a branch of 2 miles to Dedham, and another of 11 miles to Taunton, which, under the name of the Old Colony railroad, is continued to New Bedford. The Worcester railroad, 43 miles, constitutes a section of the great Western railroad, which is extended to Albany. The Worcester and Norwich railroad extends 59 miles, and connects with a steamboat navigation to the city of New York.

The government of Massachusetts consists of a governor, lieutenant-governor, senators, and representatives, chosen annually by the people, and they meet annually at Boston, on the first Wednesday of January. The senate consists of 40 members, chosen by districts. From these, a council of 9 members is elected, by joint ballot of the legislature. By a modification of the constitution in 1837, it was ordained that every town having 300 ratable polls at the last preceding decennial census of polls, may elect 1 representative; and for every 450 more, one additional representative. In towns of less than 300 polls, multiply the polls of the last census by 10, and divide by 300, and the quotient will show the number of years in the decennial period that they shall be allowed to send a representative. Where there is a surplus of polls over a sufficiency for one or more representatives, multiply the surplus by 10, and divide by 450, and the quotient will show how many years of the decennial period they shall be allowed an additional representative.

The Plymouth colony was first settled by the Puritans, who landed in Plymouth in December, 1620. In 1633 the foundation of the Massachusetts colony was laid by the settlement of Salem and Charlestown, and in 1630, of Boston. In 1692, these colonies were united, and have so continued ever since, under the name of Massachusetts. The American revolution began at Boston and in the vicinity, and this state bore a prominent part in that memorable struggle. The first regular battle, that of Breed's Hill, commonly called Bunker Hill, in Charlestown, was fought on the 17th of June, 1775. On the 17th of March, 1776, the British were compelled to evacuate Boston. In 1780, a convention of delegates formed the present state constitution. This was revised, with some modifications, in 1820. In 1783, slavery was abolished by law. In 1786, a serious disturbance took place, denominated Shay's rebellion, which was, after some time, quelled. This state voted in convention, February 6th, 1788, to adopt the constitution of the United States: years 187, days 168; majority 19.

MASSANUTTEN, p-o., Page co., Va., 138 n. w. Richmond, 106 W. Near it is a beautiful sheet of water on Massanutten mountain, which has an unbroken fall of near 50 feet, below which the water flows in a deep chasm of limestone rock, with banks nearly perpendicular. The fall presents a beautiful spectacle.

MASSENNA, p-t., St. Lawrence co., N. Y., 247 n. n. w. Albany, 524 W. The surface is slightly rolling; soil, rich loam. Watered by Racket and Grass rivers, affording water power, which flow into the St. Lawrence r. that bounds it on the n. It contains a sulphur spring of some celebrity. The v. contains 1 Baptist church, 4 stores, 2 grist m., 3 saw m., 1 clothier's works, 2 tanneries, 50 dwellings, and about 300 inhabitants. The country through which it flows is covered with grass, excepting narrow lines of wood on the r. Live oak is found on its borders. The r. passes through a lake of the same name. It has but 3 feet of water on the bar at its mouth.

MEROM, p-v., capital of Sullivan co., Ia., 103 s. w. by w. Indianapolis. Situated on the e. side of Wabash r. It contains a court house, jail, several stores and dwellings.

MERRILLSVILLE, p-o., Franklin t., Franklin co., N. Y., 174 n. by w. Albany, 549 W.

MERRIMAC, r., N. H., is one of the large rivers of New England. It is formed by the union of Pemigewasset r., which rises near the Notch in the White mountains, with Winnepesaukee r., which proceeds from Winnepesaukee lake. The junction takes place at Sanbornton, 70 ms. below the source of the former, which is the main stream. Its general course is s. by e. until it enters the state of Mass., where it curves to a general course of nearly n. e. and e., until it falls into the Atlantic, a little below Newburyport. It is navigable for vessels of 200 tons to Haverhill. By means of the Middlesex canal from Chelmsford to Boston harbor, and canals and locks around the falls, a boat navigation is opened to Concord, N. H. Bow canal, a few miles below Concord, completed in 1812, cost $20,000; 6 miles further down, Hooksett canal cost $15,000, overcoming a fall of 17 feet; 8 miles below, Amoskeag canal cost $50,000, overcoming a fall of 45 feet; below Amoskeag canal, the r., for 9 miles, is converted into the Union canal, overcoming 6 distinct falls; 5 ms. below are Cromwell's falls, made passable by a canal. The Union canal, including that of Cromwell's, cost $50,000. 15 ms. below, in Mass., Wicasset canal cost $14,000; 3 ms. below is the entrance of the Middlesex canal. There is a number of bridges over the Merrimac.

MERRIMAC, county, N. H. Centrally situated toward the s. part of the state, and contains 816 sq. ms. Organized in 1823. The surface is uneven, and in the n. parts mountainous; the soil is generally fertile. Drained by Merrimac r. and its branches. Capital, Concord. There were in 1840, neat cattle 35,911, sheep 80,506, swine 12,285; wheat 80,612 bush. produced, rye 46,706, Ind. corn 183,984, buckwheat 8,688, barley 3,251, oats 173,232, potatoes 685,370, sugar 62,940 pounds; 113 stores, cap. $333,950; 12 fulling m., 3 woollen fac., 3 cotton fac. 11,768 sp., 35 tanneries, 3 distilleries, 1 glass fac., 3 potteries, 42 grist m., 105 saw m., 1 oil m., 5 paper fac., 10 printing offices, 6 binderies, 1 periodical, 6 weekly newspapers. MICOSUKEE, p-o., Leon co., Flor.

MICHAELSVILLE, p-v., Harford co., Md., 62 n. by E. Annapolis, 70 W.

MICHIGAN, lake, Mich. This is the largest lake which lies wholly in the United States, being about 330 miles long and 60 broad, containing about 16,981 sq. ms. or 10,868,000 acres. Its e. coast is generally sandy, but little indented with bays or inlets. The principal bays are Green bay, on the n. w., and Great and Little Traverse bays, on the e. It is connected with Lake Huron by the Straits of Mackinac. Its waters are deep, and it affords excellent fish. It contains several islands in its n. part.

MICHIGAN.

MICHIGAN, one of the western United States, consists of two peninsulas; the principal of which, or Michigan proper, is bounded n. by the Straits of Michilimackinac, which connect Lake Michigan to Lake Huron; e. by Lake Huron, St. Clair river, Lake St. Clair, Detroit river, and Lake Erie, which separate it from Upper Canada; s. by Ohio and Indiana; and w. by Lake Michigan. This main portion of the state is 288 miles long, and, at a medium, 190 miles broad, containing 38,000 square miles, or 24,320,000 acres. But Michigan contains another and entirely distinct peninsula, lying n. w. of the former, bounded n. by Lake Superior; on the e. by St. Mary's river; on the s. by Lake Michigan, Green Bay, and Menomonee river; and w. by Montreal river, which enters Lake Superior. This portion of the state is about 320 miles long, and from 30 to 160 broad, containing about 28,000 square miles; making the whole territory of the state about 66,000 square miles. In 1810, the population was 4,528; in 1820, 9,048; in 1830, 31,639; in 1840, 212,267. Of these, 113,395 were white males; 96,165 do. females; 393 colored males; 314 do. females. Employed in agriculture, 56,521; in commerce, 728; in manufactures and trades, 6,890; navigating the ocean, 24; do. canals, lakes, and rivers, 166; mining, 40; learned professions, 904.

There were in 1840, 32 organized counties, which, with their population and capitals, were as follows: ALLEGAN, 1,783, Allegan; BARRY, 1,078, Hastings; BERRIEN, 5,011, St. Joseph; BRANCH, 5,715, Branch; CALHOUN, 10,599, Marshall; CASS, 5,710, Cassopolis; CHIPPEWA, 534, Sault St. Mary; CLINTON, 1,614, De Witt; EATON, 2,379, Charlotte; GENESSE, 4,268, Flint; HILLDALE, 7,240, Jonesville; INGHAM, 2,498, Vevay; IONIA, 1,923, Ionia; JACKSON, 13,130, Jackson; KALA MAZOO, 7,380, Kalamazoo; KENT, 2,587, Grand Rapids; LAPEER, 4,265, Lapeer; LENAWEE, 17,889, Adrian; LIVINGSTON, 7,430, Howell; MACOMB, 923, Mt. Clemens; MICHELIMACKINAC, 9,716, Mackinac; MONROE, 9,922, Monroe; OAKLAND, 23,646 Pontiac; OCEANA, 208, Oceana C. H.; OTTAWA, 496, Grand Haven; SAGINAW, 892, Saginaw; ST. CLAIR, 4,606, St. Clair; ST. JOSEPH, 7,068, Centreville; SHIAWASSEE, 2,103, Corunna; VAN BUREN, 1,910, Pawpaw; WASHTENAW, 23,571, Ann Arbor; WAYNE, 24,173, Detroit. There are several new counties unorganized.

Detroit, situated on the w. side of the Detroit river, is the seat of government.

The surface of the lower or southern peninsula is generally level, having few elevations which may be denominated hills. The interior is gently undulating, rising gradually from the lakes to the centre of the peninsula. This central region may be regarded as a table land, elevated about 300 feet above the level of the lakes, covered with fine forests of timber, oak plains, and beautiful prairies. Along the eastern shore of Lake Michigan are sand hills, thrown by the winds into innumerable fantastic forms, sometimes covered with stunted trees and scanty vegetation, but most generally bare. On the shore of Lake Huron are some high sand bluffs. The point formed by Lake Huron and Saginaw bay is generally low and swampy. A large part of the soil of this peninsula is fertile, and well adapted to the purposes of agriculture. The forest trees present a great variety; oak, hickory, walnut, ash, linden, sugar maple, elm, poplar, and pine. The soil is well adapted to wheat, rye, oats, barley, flax, hemp, garden vegetables, and grasses. No part of the United States is better supplied with fish, aquatic fowls, and wild game. The fish are chiefly the white fish and salmon trout, both of which are taken and put up in large quantities for exportation. The trout weigh from 10 to 70 pounds, and the white fish are equally large.

Of the northern peninsula, Mr. Schoolcraft says, "portions of it are the mere development of sublime scenery, which appertains to that comparatively elevated portion of the continent. Mountains and lakes, plains, rivers, and forests, spread over it, with a boldness of outline, which may be said to constitute almost a peculiar type of North American geography. This division embraces the mineral district of the region. Much of it falls under the influence of causes which render it of little or no value in an agricultural point of view; but it may be regarded as the seat of future mineral operations. Accuracy with respect to either kind of soil, either in acres or miles, must be the result of exploration and survey. The northern shores of Lake Michigan and Huron, as far as Point Detour, are exclusively limestone, where rock is at all visible, and this rock is characterized by the usual indications of gypsum and brine springs. The growth of trees in this newly acquired boundary is as various as the soils, and is, in general, an accurate index of its fertility. The sugar maple is interspersed throughout the tract, being separated by the sand plains, the mountain masses, and by tracts of spruce lands. This tree, however, forms so considerable a portion of the growth, that the natives can always, by a timely removal of their camps, rely on the manufacture of sugar. The beech tree is found as far north as Point Iroquois, at the outlet of Lake Superior. I regard the white oak, however, as a surer test of climate and soil together, than any other of our forest trees. I doubt whether this tree ever attains to its full size in a climate not decidedly congenial to agriculture. The rock maple and red oak are found, at intervals, throughout the northwest; I have seen both species at the sources of the Mississippi, but have not observed the beech north of the locality mentioned, nor the white oak north of the Straits of Mackinac. The interior abounds in minor lakes, and enjoys a singular advantage of intercommunication by streams and portages. The areas included between the three great lakes north of Mackinac, which will probably hereafter be denominated the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, embraces the present settlements at Mackinac and Sault St. Mary. Taking the whole extent of the annexed territory from Menomonee river, following the curves of the coast to the northwest limits of the state, the mouth of Moniaw or Montreal river of Lake Superior, it affords not less than 720 miles of additional coast navigation; and embraces, in the distance, several large bays and excellent harbors. About 40 large and 60 small streams discharge their waters into the three lakes constituting portions of the boundary."

The southern peninsula of Michigan is drained by several large rivers and numerous smaller streams, which rise near the middle between the lakes, and pass off in an easterly and westerly direction, with the exception of the Cheboigan, and three or four smaller streams, which flow in a northerly direction. The larger streams are navigable by boats and canoes nearly to their sources. Raisin and Huron r. flow into Lake Erie; Rouge into the Detroit strait; Clinton and Black rivers into the Strait of St. Clair. Saginaw river, formed by the junction of Titibawasese, Hare, Shiawasee, Flint, and Cass rivers, enters into Saginaw bay. Thunder Bay river and Cheboigan, with several smaller streams, flow into the northern part of Lake Huron. St. Joseph, Kalamazoo, Grand, and Maaskegon rivers, and several smaller streams, flow in a westerly direction into Lake Michigan. The counties of Oakland, Livingston, Washtenaw, Barry, Jackson, and Kalamazoo abound with small clear lakes, well stocked with fish.

There were in the state in 1840, 30,144 horses and mules; 185,190 neat cattle; 99,618 sheep; 295,890 swine; poultry to the value of $62,730. There were produced 2,157,106 bushels of wheat; 127,502 of barley; 2,114,051 of oats; 34,236 of rye; 113,592 of buckwheat; 2,277,039 of Indian corn; 153,375 pounds of wool; 11,381 of hops; 4,533 of wax; there were produced 2,109,205 bushels of potatoes; 130,805 tons of hay; 755 of hemp and flax; 1,602 pounds of tobacco; 266 of silk cocoons; 1,329,784 of sugar; the products of the dairy were estimated at $301,052; and of the orchard at $16,075; and of lumber at $392,325.

Michigan lake is the largest lake that lies wholly within the United States, being 360 miles long and 60 broad, containing 17,000 square miles, including Green bay, a large branch of it in the n. w. The Straits of Michilimackinac, 40 miles long, connect this lake with Lake Huron. Saginaw bay is a large branch of Lake Huron, 60 miles long by 33 miles wide.

Detroit is much the largest and most commercial place in the state. A large number of steamboats and other vessels ply between this place and Buffalo, and other places on the lakes. The other principal places are Monroe, on the River Raisin; Pontiac, on the Clinton, 16 miles n. w. of Detroit; Adrian, Ypsilanti, Ann Arbor, Kalamazoo, Marshall, and Jackson, in the interior; and St. Joseph, on Lake Michigan.

The exports of Michigan in 1840, amounted to $162,229; and the imports to $133,610. There were 26 commission houses engaged in foreign trade, with a capital of $177,500; 612 retail dry-goods and other stores, with a capital of $2,223,988; 312 persons employed in the lumber trade, with a capital of $45,600; 453 persons employed in the fisheries, (lake), with a capital of $28,640.

The Michigan University, at Ann Arbor, has departments of literature, science, and the arts, of law, and of medicine. It is designed to have academic branches spread over the state, and they have been already established at Detroit, Pontiac, Monroe, Niles, Kalamazoo, Grand Rapids, Jackson, White Pigeon, and Tecumseh. This institution has been well endowed by large grants of lands. Marshall College, at Marshall, has been established; and St. Philip's College, near Detroit, is a Catholic institution. These institutions had, in 1840, 158 students. There were in the state 12 academies, with 485 students; and 975 common and primary schools, with 29,701 scholars. There were in the state 2,173 white persons over 20 years of age who could neither read nor write.

In 1836, the Presbyterians had 42 churches and 19 ministers; the Baptists had 17 churches and 11 ministers; the Roman Catholics 1 bishop and 18 ministers; the Episcopalians: 1 bishop and 4 ministers; and the Methodists were considerably numerous.

At the commencement of 1840, there were in this state 9 banks, and 1 branch, with an aggregate capital of $1,229,200, and a circulation of $361,226. At the close of 1840, the state debt amounted to $6,011,000.

The governor and lieutenant-governor are chosen at the same time, for 2 years, by the people. The senators are chosen for 2 years, and one half of them annually, and they consist of one third the number of representatives. The representatives are chosen annually, and their number cannot be less than 48 nor more than 100, and are with the senators apportioned among the counties, according to the number of white inhabitants. The judges of the supreme court are appointed by the governor, with the advice and consent of the senate, for the term of 7 years. Judges of inferior courts are elected by the people for 4 years. Every white male citizen, over 21 years of age, who has resided six months next preceding election in the town where his vote is offered, has the right of suffrage. Slavery, lotteries, and the sale of lottery tickets, are prohibited. The legislature meets annually at Detroit until 1847, when the seat of government will be permanently fixed.

Michigan has projected and commenced an extensive system of internal improvements. The Central railroad extends from Detroit 44 miles to Ann Arbor, and when completed is designed to extend 194 miles to St. Joseph, on Lake Michigan. The Erie and Kalamazoo railroad extends from Toledo 33 miles to Adrian. This road is designed to be continued until it meets the Central railroad, which it will leave at Kalamazoo and terminate at Allegan. The whole distance from Toledo to Kalamazoo is 183 miles. The Ypsilanti and Tecumseh railroad leaves the Central railroad at Ypsilanti, and connects with the Erie and Kalamazoo railroad at Tecumseh, 25 miles. The Detroit and Pontiac railroad extends from Detroit 25 miles to Pontiac. Numerous other railroads have been laid out and commenced; and also the Clinton and Kalamazoo canal is designed to unite the waters of Lake Michigan and St. Clair. The whole length is 216 miles, and is estimated to cost $2,250,000. But this, with several other proposed canals, are for the present suspended.

The French built a fort and made a settlement at Detroit in 1647, and subsequently at Mackinaw. Many of the Hurons, a native tribe in this region, were converted to the Catholic faith by the Jesuits. By the treaty of peace between Great Britain and France in 1763, this country came into the possession of the English. The post at Detroit was resigned to the United States by the English in 1796. In 1805 this state was erected into a distinct territory, and a correspondent government was appointed. The British gained a temporary possession of the country in 1812-13, but it was soon recovered by the Americans under Gen. W. H. Harrison. In 1836 Michigan was admitted to the Union.

MISSIONARY STATION, p-o., Floyd co., Ga., 173 n. w. Milledgeville, 674 W. Situated on the Coosa r.

MISSISQUE, r., Vt., rises in Orleans co., and pursuing a n. E. course, passes into Canada, and after running several ms., returns into Vt., and pursues a s. w. and w. course, until it enters Missisquoi bay, a branch of Lake Champlain, in Highgate, near the Canada line. It has several rapids and falls, affording extensive water power. It is navigable for vessels of 50 tons, 6 miles, to Swanton falls. Through most of its course, it is wide and shallow, with a moderate current. It is 75 ms. long.

MISSISSINewa, r., Ia., rises in the state of Ohio, and running in a n. w. direction, it falls into the Wabash r., a little above Peru. In its upper parts it furnishes good mill sites, and in its lower parts it is navigable for boats of 10 tons, in time of high water.

MISSISSIPPI, an immense river of the United States, derives importance from its great length; the vast and fertile regions which, with its tributaries, it drains, and the extent to which it is navigable. It rolls a mighty volume of water to the ocean, bearing to its destined market a vast amount of produce of one of the most fertile regions on the globe, and returning to these regions the productions of other portions of the United States, and of foreign countries, which they need for their convenience and comfort. The most probable derivation of its name is Misissipi, which, in the Algonquin Indian language, which prevails in its upper parts, means Great river. Its extreme source, according to the explorations of Schoolcraft, July 13th, 1833, is Itasca lake, 47° 10' n. lat., and 95° 54' w. lon., at an elevation of 1,500 feet, and the distance of 3,160 miles, above the Gulf of Mexico. Itasca lake is a beautiful sheet of water, lying among hills surmounted by pines. The outlet of the lake is 10 or 12 feet broad, and from 12 to 18 inches deep. Its course is then northwardly and northeastwardly, and it passes through lakes Irving and Travers, and it then passes eastwardly and southeastwardly, and through some small lakes, to Lake Cass. This lake is of considerable extent, and contains a large island, 182 ms. below its source, and 1,330 feet above the Gulf of Mexico. Its course is w. to Lake Winnipeg, then s. w. through Little Winnipeg lake, until it receives Leech lake fork, the outlet of a considerable lake of the same name. The most northern point attained by the river is a few minutes short of 48°; it then pursues a winding course eastwardly, passing through some small lakes, until it attains a southwardly direction. The average descent of the Mississippi, from its source to its entrance into the Gulf of Mexico, is a fraction over 5 inches per mile. The whole country about the sources of the Mississippi appears to be considerably elevated table land, abounding in small lakes of pure water, and fed chiefly by springs. The first considerable falls in the river are those of Pechagama, where it descends 20 feet in 300 yards. There is no perpendicular fall, but a rapid which entirely obstructs navigation. The river is compressed to the width of 80 feet, and is precipitated over a rugged bed of sandstone, the rocky channel being inclined at an angle of from 35° to 40°. The surrounding view is wild and picturesque. An island, covered with spruce and cedar, divides the channel nearly in the middle, at the commencement of the fall. The next considerable falls in the river, are those of St. Anthony. The river here has a perpendicular descent of 17 feet, and a formidable rapid above and below. An island, at the brow of the precipice, divides the current into 2 parts, the largest of which passes on the w. side of the island. The rapid below the chute is filled with large fragments of rock, in the interstices of which some alluvial soil has accumulated, which nourishes a stunted growth of cedars. The rapid above the falls has a descent of about 10 feet in the distance of 300 yards. The rapid below the falls extends half a mile, in which the river descends 15 feet. The entire fall, in three fourths of a mile, is 65 feet. Without the grandeur of Niagara, these falls are extremely picturesque and beautiful. But during the spring floods, they become grand as well as beautiful. The width of the Mississippi, for 13 miles above the falls, is half a mile; below, it is contracted to 200 yards. A little below the falls of St. Anthony enters the St. Peter's river, from the w., which is the largest tributary of the Upper Mississippi. For 200 ms. above its entrance, it is 100 yards wide, with a great depth of water. About lat. 44° the St. Croix enters the Mississippi from the e., which is said to be navigable for boats 200 ms. About 15 ms. below the entrance of St. Croix r., the Mississippi expands into a beautiful sheet of water, called Lake Pepin, 25 ms. in length. At its termination, the Chippewa r. enters the Mississippi, after a course of about 300 ms. In 42° enters the Wisconsin from the e., forming an easy communication with Lake Michigan. Near 40°, on the w. side, the Des Moines enters, 150 yards wide. A few ms. above the mouth of this river are rapids, 9 ms. in length, forming an impediment to navigation, when the river is low. In 39° the Illinois enters from the e., 400 yards wide, and navigable for boats more than 300 ms. A little below 39° enters the majestic Missouri from the w., which is longer, and discharges more water, than the Mississippi; and had it been as early explored, it would probably have been regarded as the parent stream. Its waters are turbid, and change the appearance of the Mississippi. In 36° the Kaskaskia enters from the e., and is navigable for more than 100 ms., passing through a beautiful country. Between 37° and 36°, 1,005 ms. above New Orleans, the "Belle Riviere," or the beautiful Ohio, enters from the e., and is much the largest eastern branch; and, from the densely populated and flourishing country on its borders, must be considered, at present, as the most important tributary of the Mississippi. Between 35° and 34° enters the St. Francis from the w., 200 yards wide, and supposed to be navigable 300 miles. White r. enters on the same side, in about 34°, probably about 1,200 ms. long. The Arkansas, from the w., enters between 34° and 33°, 618 ms. above New Orleans, and is 500 yards wide, and supposed to be 2,500 ms. long. The Yazoo enters on the e. side, between 33° and 32°, and is from 200 to 300 yards wide. At 31° the Red river comes in from the w. It is as large, and discharges as much water as the Arkansas, and is navigable for steamboats. Here the Mississippi carries its greatest volume of water, as immediately below this, and at intervals, it divides into several large outlets. From an old bed of the river, which communicates with both the Mississippi and Red rivers, the Atchafalaya discharges a great amount of water into the Gulf of Mexico. A little below Baton Rouge, on the e. side, the Iberville goes off, and passing through lakes Maurepas, Pontchartrain, and Borgne, enters the Gulf of Mexico. Between Atchafalaya and N. Orleans, pass off Plaquemine and Bayou Lafourche, on the w. side, the former joining the Atchafalaya, and the latter entering the Gulf of Mexico. The average width of the Mississippi, below the Missouri, is about a mile; but the large rivers which enter it greatly increase its depth. Its medial current is about 4 ms. an hour. At the head of the Delta, the depth is from 75 to 80 feet; at New Orleans it is 100. At the distance of 105 ms. below New Orleans, by the course of the river, but 90 in a direct course, this majestic river enters the Gulf of Mexico, by several mouths, the principal of which are called the Belize, or Northeast Pass, in 29° 7' n. lat., and 89° 10' w. lon., and the Southwest Pass, in 29° n. lat., and 89° 25' w. lon. Draining a country of over 1,000,000 square miles in extent, it would naturally be expected that its spring floods would be vast; and in consequence of them, it overflows its banks at that season to a great extent. From the sources to the mouth of the Missouri, the flood commences in March, and does not subside before the last of May, at an average height of 15 feet. From the Missouri to the Ohio, it rises 25 feet; and below the Ohio, for a great distance, 50 feet. At every flood it overspreads a country, chiefly on its western side, from 10 to 30 ms. wide, 500 ms. from its mouth. This river is extremely winding in its course, and sometimes a bend will occur of 30 miles in extent, in which the distance across the neck will not exceed a mile. This circumstance undoubtedly impedes the current, and thus favors navigation. The mighty volume of water often carries away a large mass of earth, with its trees, from a projecting point, and frequently endangers vessels. Trees also are often bedded in the mud, projecting their tops, producing snags and sawyers, as they are called, dangerous to navigators. The whirls, or eddies, which are produced by the tortuous course of the river and its projecting points, render the navigation to a degree difficult and dangerous. Vessels are often from 5 to 30 days in ascending from the mouth of the river to New Orleans, though with a favorable wind, they will often descend in 13 hours. Before the introduction of steamboats, it required 8 or 10 weeks to go from New Orleans to the Illinois. Boats of 40 tons ascend the river to the falls of St. Anthony, more than 2,000 miles from its mouth. The use of steamboats has entirely changed the navigation of the Mississippi; and they have nearly superseded all other vessels for ascending the river. Large flat-bottomed boats, denominated arks, which are not designed to return, are extensively used for transportation down the river. The first steamboat on the western waters was built at Pittsburgh, in 1811; there are now more than 300 on the Mississippi and its tributaries, many of them of great burden. The passage from Cincinnati to New Orleans and back has been made in 19 days. Large ships seldom ascend above Natchez. There are no tides in the Mississippi.

MISSISSIPPI.

MISSISSIPPI, one of the southern United States, is bounded n. by Tennessee; e. by Alabama; s. by the Gulf of Mexico and Louisiana; and w. by Pearl and Mississippi rivers, which separate it from the state of Louisiana and Arkansas. It is between 30° 10' and 35° n. lat., and between 80° 30' and 81° 35' w. lon., and between 8° and 11° 30' w. lon. from W. It is 339 miles long from n. to s., and 150 broad from e. to w., containing 45,760 square miles, or 29,286,400 acres. The population in 1816 was 45,929; in 1820, 75,448; in 1830, 136,806; in 1840, 375,651, of which 195,311 were slaves. Of the free population 97,256 were white males; 81,818 do. females; 715 were colored males; 654 do. females. Employed in agriculture, 139,794; in commerce, 1,303; in manufactures and trades, 4,151; navigating the ocean, 33; do. rivers, canals, &c., 100; learned professions, 1,506.

This state is divided into 56 counties, which with their population in 1840, and their capitals, were as follows: Northern District—ATTALA, 4,303, Kosciusko; BOLIVAR, 1,356, Bolivar; CARROLL, 10,481, Carrollton; CHICKASAW, 2,955, Houston; CHOCTAW, 6,010, Greensboro; COAHOMA, 1,290, Coahoma C. H.; DE SOTO, 7,002, Hernando; ITAWAMBA, 5,375, Fulton; LAFAYETTE, 6,531, Oxford; LOWNDE, 14,513, Columbus; MARSHALL, 17,526, Holly Springs; MONROE, 9,250, Athens; NOXUBEE, 9,975, Macon; OCTOBERA, 4,276, Starkville; PONOLA, 4,657, Ponola; PONTOTOC, 4,491, Pontotoc; TALLAHATCHIE, 2,985, Charleston; TIFFAH, 9,444, Ripley; TISHAMINGO, 6,681, Jasco; TUNICA, 821, Peyton; WINSTON, 4,650, Louisville; YALABUSHA, 12,243, Coffeeville. Southern District—ADAMS, 19,434, Natchez; AMITE, 9,511, Liberty; CLAIBORNE, 13,078, Port Gibson; CLARKE, 2,986, Quitman; COPIAH, 8,954, Gallatin; COVINGTON, 2,717, Williamsburg; FRANKLIN, 4,775, Meadville; GREENE, 1,636, Leakeville; HANCOCK, 3,367, Shieldsborough; HARRISON, — Mississippi City; HINDS, 19,098, Raymond; HOLMES, 9,452, Lexington; JACKSON, 1,965, Jackson C. H.; JASPER, 3,958, Paulding; JEFFERSON, 11,650, Fayette; JONES, 1,258, Ellisville; KEMPER, 7,663, DeKalb; LAUDERDALE, 5,358, Marion; LAWRENCE, 5,920, Monticello; LEAKE, 2,162, Carthage; MADISON, 15,530, Canton; NESHOMA, 2,437, Philadelphia; NEWTON, 2,527, Decatur; PERRY, 1,889, Augusta; PIKE, 6,151, Holmesville; RANKIN, 4,631, Brandon; SCOTT, 1,653, Hillsborough; SIMPSON, 3,390, Westville; SMITH, 1,961, Raleigh; WARREN, 15,820, Vicksburg; WASHINGTON, 7,287, Princeton; WAYNE, 2,120, Winchester; WILKINSON, 14,193, Woodville; YAZOO, 10,480, Benton.

The southern part of this state for about 100 miles from the Gulf of Mexico is mostly a sandy, level pine forest, interspersed with cypress swamps, open prairies, and inundated marshes, and a few hills of moderate elevation. This region is generally healthy, and by cultivation produces cotton, Indian corn, indigo, sugar, and plums, cherries, peaches, figs, sour oranges, and grapes. As you proceed further north, the country becomes more elevated and agreeably diversified, and the soil is a deep rich mold, producing abundantly, cotton, Indian corn, sweet potatoes, indigo, peaches, melons, and grapes. The natural growth of timber consists of poplar, hickory, oak, black walnut, sugar maple, cotton wood, magnolia, lime, and sassafras. The country in the north part of the state is healthy and productive; and the lands watered by the Yazoo, through its whole course, in the n. w., are very fertile. The Mississippi river, with its various windings, borders this state about 700 miles; and its margin consists of inundated swamp, covered with a large growth of timber. Back of this, the surface suddenly rises into what are called bluffs; and behind these the country is a moderately elevated table land, with a diversified surface. Cotton is the principal production of this state, as it is found to be more profitable than others to which the soil is also well adapted.

In this state there were in 1840, 109,227 horses and mules; 623,197 neat cattle; 123,367 sheep; 1,001,209 swine; poultry to the value of $369,482. There were produced 196,626 bushels of wheat; 1,654 of barley; 668,624 of oats; 11,444 of rye; 13,161,237 of Indian corn; 175,196 pounds of wool; 6,835 of wax; 1,630,100 bushels of potatoes; 83,471 pounds of tobacco; 777,195 of rice; 193,401,577 of cotton. The produce of the dairy was valued at $359,585; of the orchard at $14,458; of lumber $192,794; tar, pitch, &c., 2,248 barrels.

The climate is mild, but very variable. The extremes of heat and cold at Natchez, for 1840, were from 26 to 94 of Fahrenheit. The sugar cane and orange tree cannot be cultivated with success n. of lat. 31°

The Mississippi river washes the entire western border of this state. The Yazoo is the largest river that has its whole course in the state. It rises in the n. w. part, and after a course of 250 miles, enters the Mississippi. The Pascagoula river, after a course of 250 miles, enters the Gulf of Mexico. At its mouth it widens into a bay, on which stands the town of Pascagoula. It is navigable for a considerable distance for small vessels. The Big Black river, after a course of 200 miles, enters the Mississippi just above Grand Gulf. It has a boat navigation of 50 miles. Pearl river rises in the central part of this state and passes through it to the s., and in its lower part forms the boundary between this state and Louisiana, and enters the Rigolets between lakes Pontchartrain and Borgne. Its navigation is much impeded by shallows, sand-bars, and obstructions of timber. Homochitto is a considerable river which enters the Mississippi. Besides these there are a few other small rivers and creeks. A chain of low sandy islands, 6 or 7 miles from the shore, enclose several bays or sounds, the largest of which are Pascagoula Sound and Lake Borgne, which lies partly in Louisiana.

This state has but 60 miles of seacoast, and no harbor for that distance but that of Mississippi City, which does not admit of large vessels. The largest and most commercial place in the state is Natchez, on the e. bank of the Mississippi, situated chiefly on a high bluff, 300 feet above the level of the river, and 300 miles above New Orleans. Vicksburgh, 106 miles above Natchez, and 12 miles below the mouth of the Yazoo river, is a growing place and has an extensive trade. The other principal places are, Jackson, on Pearl river; Woodville, 18 miles from the Mississippi, in the s. w. part of the state; Port Gibson, and Grand Gulf, its port on the Mississippi; Columbus, on the Tombigbee; and Pontotoc and Hernando, in the n., and Mississippi City, on the gulf shore.

There were in this state in 1840, 7 commercial and 67 commission houses engaged in foreign trade, with a capital of $673,900; 755 retail drygoods and other stores, employing a capital of $5,004,420; 228 persons engaged in the lumber trade, employing a capital of $132,175; 40 persons employed in internal transportation, and 15 butchers, packers, &c., employing a capital of $4,250.

The amount of home-made or family articles was $682,945; there were 53 cotton manufactories, with 318 spindles, employing 81 persons, producing articles to the amount of $1,744, with a capital of $6,420; hats and caps were produced to the amount of $5,140, employing 13 persons, with a capital of $8,100; 128 tanneries employed 149 persons, and a capital of $70,870; 42 other manufactories of leather, as saddleries, &c., produced articles to the amount of $118,167, and employed a capital of $41,945; 1 pottery, employing 2 persons, produced to the amount of $1,200, with a capital of $200; 4 persons produced drugs and paints to the amount of $3,125, with a capital of $500; 2 persons produced confectionery to the amount of $10,500; 274 persons produced machinery to the amount of $242,225; 693 persons produced bricks and lime to the amount of $273,870, with a capital of $222,745; there were produced 312,084 pounds of soap, 31,957 do. of tallow candles, and 97 do. of spermaceti candles; 132 persons produced carriages and wagons to the amount of $49,693, with a capital of $34,345; 16 flouring mills produced 1,809 barrels of flour, and with other mills employed 923 persons, and manufactured articles to the amount of $486,964, with a capital of $1,219,545; vessels were built to the amount of $13,925; furniture was manufactured by 41 persons, to the amount of $34,450, with a capital of $23,610; 14 distilleries produced 3,150 gallons, and 2 breweries produced 132 gallons, employing 12 persons, and a capital of $910; 144 stone or brick houses, and 2,247 wooden houses, were built by 2,487 persons, and cost $1,175,513; 28 printing offices, and 1 bindery, 2 daily, 1 semi-weekly, and 28 weekly newspapers, employed 94 persons, and a capital of $83,510. The whole amount of capital employed in manufactures was $1,797,727.

There are three colleges in this state. Jefferson College, at Washington, 6 miles e. of Natchez, was founded in 1802, and has been liberally endowed; Oakland College, at Oakland, was founded in 1831, and is a flourishing institution; Mississippi College, at Clinton, was founded in 1830. In these institutions there were in 1840, about 250 students. There were in the state 71 academies, with 2,553 students; and 382 primary and common schools, with 8,236 scholars. There were 8,360 white persons over 20 years of age who could neither read nor write.

The Methodists and Baptists are the most numerous religious denominations in this state. In 1835, the Methodists had 33 travelling preachers, and 9,707 communicants; the Baptists had 84 churches, 34 ministers, and 3,199 communicants; the Episcopalians had 4 ministers; the Presbyterians of different descriptions had 32 churches, and 26 ministers.

In the beginning of 1840, there were 38 banks and branches in this state, with an aggregate capital of $30,379,403, and a circulation of $15,171,639. At the close of 1840, the state debt amounted to $12,400,000.

The constitution of this state was formed in 1817. The governor is elected by the people, for 2 years, on the first Monday of August. A lieutenant-governor is chosen at the same time for the same period, who is president of the senate; and, in case of the death, resignation, or absence of the governor, his duties devolve on the lieutenant-governor. The senators are elected for three years, one third of the number being chosen annually. They cannot be less than one fourth, nor more than one third of the whole number of the representatives. The representatives are elected annually on the first Monday in August, in the ratio of one to every 3,000 white inhabitants. Each county, however, is entitled to one, though the number of its inhabitants should not equal that number. The general assembly meets annually at Jackson, on the first Monday of November. Every free white male citizen of the United States, of 21 years of age, who has resided in the state one year next preceding the election, and 6 months in the county, city, or town in which he offers to vote, and is enrolled in the militia, unless exempt from military duty, or has paid a state or county tax, enjoys the right of suffrage. The judges of the supreme court are appointed by the general assembly, and hold their offices during good behavior, or until they are 65 years of age.

The following works of internal improvement have been undertaken. West Feliciana railroad extends from St. Francisville, in Louisiana, on the Mississippi, 37½ miles, to Woodville, in Mississippi, and cost $500,000. Vicksburgh and Clinton railroad extends from Vicksburgh, 45 miles, to Jackson, the capital of the state, with a branch to Raymond, 6½ miles. The New Orleans and Natchez railroad will extend through this state. The Mississippi railroad, to extend from Natchez, 112 miles, to Jackson, is finished to Malcom, a distance of 40 miles. The Jackson and Brandon railroad is 14 miles long, and connects these places. The Grand Gulf and Port Gibson railroad is 7½ miles long, connecting the two places. Several other railroads are proposed, which are those from Natchez to Woodville, 41 miles; from Manchester to Benton, 14 miles; from Princeton to Deer Creek, 20 miles; from Brandon to Mobile, and from Columbus to Aberdeen.

In 1716, the French formed a settlement where the city of Natchez now stands, and laid claim to the country as belonging to Louisiana. This colony was afterward destroyed by the Indians in the vicinity. In 1763, the country was ceded to the British. North of the 31st degree of n. lat. this territory was within the chartered limits of Georgia. In 1795, the legislature of Georgia sold 22,000,000 acres of land in this state, called the Yazoo purchase, to 4 companies, for $500,000, who subsequently sold it at an advanced price to various persons, mostly in the eastern and middle states. The next year the legislature declared the sale unconstitutional, and ordered the records of it to be burned, without refunding the money. The part of this state south of lat. 31° n. belonged to Florida, and was purchased with it by the United States, of Spain, in 1821. In 1796, this state together with Alabama were constituted a territory under the name of the Mississippi territory, and continued under this government until 1817, when this state formed a constitution, and was admitted to the Union.

MISSISSIPPI, county, Ark. Situated in the n. e. part of the state, and contains 1,000 sq. ms. It lies between Mississippi r. on the e., and St. Francis r. on the w. Drained by Whitewater r. Capital, Osceola. There were in 1840, neat cattle 3,042, sheep 76, swine 5,022; Ind. corn 107,615 bush. produced, potatoes 3,908, cotton 22,500; 1 store, cap. $14,000; 1 sch. 25 scholars. Pop. whites 900, slaves 510; total 1,410.

MISSISSIPPI CITY, p.-v., capital of Harrison co., Miss., 265 s. s. e. Jackson, 1,143 W. Situated on the Gulf coast. It contains a court house, several stores and dwellings.

MISSISSIPPI, t., Scott co., Mo. Pop. 615.

MISSOURI, a large river in the United States, rises in the Rocky mountains, and takes this name after the union of three branches, denominated Jefferson, Gallatin, and Madison, in 45° 10' n. lat., and 110 w. lon. The spring sources of the Missouri and those of the Columbia, which flows w. to the Pacific, are not more than a mile apart. At the distance of 411 miles from the extreme point of navigation of its head branches, the Missouri passes through the Rocky mountains by what is denominated the Gates, the view of which is exceedingly grand. For a distance of 6 miles, the rocks rise perpendicularly from the water's edge to the height of nearly 1,200 feet. The river is compressed to the width of 150 yards, and rushes impetuously through this great mountain passage. 110 miles below this, and 521 from its source, are the great falls, 2,575 ms. above its entrance into the Mississippi. The river descends 357 feet in 18 miles, by a succession of falls. The greatest fall is 87 feet perpendicular, and the next is 47. The width of the river is here about 350 yards, and these falls, next to Niagara, are probably the grandest in the world. The Yellowstone r., 800 yards wide at its mouth, enters the Missouri from the s. w., 521 miles from its source, and 1,880 miles from its mouth. The Chienne, 400 yards at its mouth, enters it on the s. w., 1,310 miles from its mouth. The White river, 300 yards wide, enters it on the s. w., 1,130 miles from its mouth. The James and the Big Sioux enter it from the n. e. The Platte, 600 yards wide, enters it from the s. w., 2,496 miles from its source, and 600 from its mouth, in lat. 41° 4' n. The Kansas, 233 yards wide, enters it from the s. w., 340 miles from its mouth, in lat. 39° 5', 2,756 miles from its source. Grand river enters it from the n. e., 240 miles from its mouth, and is 190 yards wide. La Mine river enters it from the s. w. Osage river, 397 yards wide, enters it from the s. w., 300 miles from its mouth, 2,963 miles from its source, in lat. 36° 45'. The Gasconade also enters it from the s. w. The Missouri enters the Mississippi 3,096 miles from its source, which added to 1,395 miles, the distance to the Gulf of Mexico, makes its whole length 4,491 miles. Through this vast length there is no substantial obstruction to the navigation, excepting the great falls. Its principal tributaries are each navigable from 100 to 800 miles. Through the greater part of its course the Missouri is a rapid and turbid stream. The fertile land on its margin, and on those of its tributaries, is not very broad, and back of this are prairies of vast extent. The country which it waters, is much of it not as inviting for settlement as that of some of the other tributaries of the Mississippi. The river is half a mile wide at its entrance into the Mississippi, but through the greater part of its course it is much wider.

MISSOURI.

MISSOURI, one of the western United States, is bounded n. by Iowa Territory; e. by Illinois, Kentucky, and Tennessee, from which it is separated by the Mississippi river; s. by Arkansas; and w. by the Indian Territory. It is between 36° and 40° 36' n. lat., and between 89° and 95° 30' w. lon., and between 13° 17' and 17° 28' w. lon. from W. It is 287 miles long, and 230 broad, containing 64,000 square miles, or 40,960,000 acres. The population in 1810, was 19,833; in 1820, 66,586; in 1830, 140,074; in 1840, 363,703, of which 58,240 were slaves. Of the free population, 173,470 were white males; 150,418 do. females; 883 were colored males; 691 do. females. Employed in agriculture, 92,408; in commerce, 2,523; in manufactures and trades, 11,100; in mining, 742; navigating the ocean, 39; do. canals, rivers, &c. 1,885; learned professions, 1,469.

This state is divided into 68 counties, which, with their population in 1840, and their capitals, were as follows: AUDRAIN, 1,949, Mexico; BARRY, 4,793, McDonald; BENTON, 4,205, Warsaw; BOONE, 13,561, Columbia; BUCHANAN, 6,237, Sparta; CALDWELL, 1,458, Far West; CALLAWAY, 11,765, Fulton; CAPE GIRARDEAU, 9,359, Jackson; CARROLL, 2,433, Carrollton; CHARITON, 4,746, Keytesville; CLARK, 2,945, Waterloo; CLAY, 8,283, Liberty; CLINTON, 2,724, Plattburg; COLE, 9,286, Jefferson City; COOPER, 10,484, Booneville; CRAWFORD, 3,561, Steelville; DAVIES, 2,736, Gallatin; FRANKLIN, 7,515, Union; GASCONADE, 5,330, Herron; GREENE, 5,372, Springfield; HOWARD, 13,108, Fayette; JACKSON, 7,612, Independence; JEFFERSON, 4,296, Hillaboro'; JOHNSON, 4,471, Warrensburg; LA FAYETTE, 6,815, Lexington; LEWIS, 6,040, Monticello; LINCOLN, 7,449, Troy; LINN, 2,245, Linneus; LIVINGSTON, 4,325, Chillicothe; MACON, 6,034, Bloomington; MADISON, 3,395, Fredericktown; MARION, 9,623, Palmyra; MILLER, 2,282, Tuscumbia; MONROE, 9,505, Paris; MORGAN, 4,407, Versailles; MONTGOMERY, 4,371, Danville; NEW MADRID, 4,554, New Madrid, NEWTON, 3,790, Neosho; PERRY, 5,760, Perryville; PETTIS, 2,930, Georgetown; PLATTE, 8,913, Platte City; PIKE, 10,646, Bowling Green; POLK, 8,449, Bolivar; PULASKI, 6,529, Waynesville; RALLA, 5,670, New London; RANDOLPH, 7,198, Huntsville; RAY, 6,553, Richmond; RIPLEY, 2,856, Van Buren; RIVES, (name changed to Henry), 4,726, Clinton; ST. CHARLES, 7,911, St. Charles; ST. FRANCIS, 3,211, Farmington; ST. GENEVIEVE, 3,148, St. Genevieve; ST. LOUIS, 35,979, St. Louis; SALINE, 5,258, Marshall; SCOTT, 5,974, Benton; SHELBY, 3,056, Shelbyville; STRODDARD, 3,153, Bloomfield; TANEY, 3,264, Forsyth; VAN BUREN, 4,693, Harrisonville; WARREN, 4,253, Wrenton; WASHINGTON, 7,213, Potosi; WAYNE, 3,403, Greenville. There have been several new counties erected since 1840.

Jefferson City, on the s. bank of the Missouri river, 15 miles above the mouth of the Osage r., is the seat of government.

This state presents a great variety of surface and of soil. Alluvial or bottom land is found on the margin of the rivers; receding from them, the land rises, sometimes almost imperceptibly, sometimes very abruptly, into elevated barrens or rocky ridges. In the interior, bottoms and barrens, naked hills and prairies, heavy forests and streams of water, may often be seen at one view, presenting a diversified and beautiful landscape. The southeast part of the state has a very extensive tract of low marshy country, abounding in lakes, and liable to inundation. Back of this, a hilly country extends as far as the Osage river. This portion of the state, though not generally distinguished for the fertility of its soil, though it is interspersed with fertile portions, is particularly celebrated for its mineral treasures. Of the minerals and fossils already discovered, the principal are lead, coal, plaster, iron, manganese, zinc, antimony, cobalt, various kinds of ochre, common salt, nitre, plumbago, porphyry, jasper, chalcedony, and marble. Lead is extensively found; a district 100 miles long and 40 broad, the centre of which is 70 miles s. w. of St. Louis, and about 35 from Herculaneum, is the part of the state where it is procured in the greatest abundance. This lead region covers an area of more than 3,000 square miles. The ore is of the richest kind, and exists in quantities more than sufficient to supply the demand of the whole United States. The iron mines are scarcely less remarkable than the lead. In St. Francis county exists the celebrated "mountain" of micaceous oxide of iron, which has an elevation of 300 feet above the surrounding plain, is a mile and a half across its summit, and yields 80 per cent pure metal. Five miles south is another magnificent pyramidal "mountain," denominated the Pilot Knob, 300 feet high, with a base a mile and a half in circumference, of the same rich species of iron ore. This pyramid is not in plates, but huge masses of several tons in weight, which yields also 80 per cent of pure metal. Washington county is a perfect bed of metallic treasures. Throughout the mineral district, are found beds of rich, red, marl clay, which proves to be the very best manure for the soil. Between the Osage and Missouri rivers, is a tract of country very fertile, and agreeably diversified with woodland and prairie, and abounding with coal, salt springs, &c. The country north of the Missouri is emphatically the "garden of the west." There is no part in the world where a greater extent of country can be traversed more easily, when in its natural state. The surface is for the most part delightfully rolling and variegated, sometimes rising into picturesque hills, then stretching away into a sea of prairie, occasionally interspersed with shady groves and shining streams. Almost every acre of this country is susceptible of high agricultural improvement. The chief productions are tobacco, cotton, Indian corn, wheat, rye, oats, barley, and grasses. Large numbers of horses, mules, horned cattle, sheep, and hogs are annually raised for exportation.

In the year 1840, there were in this state 196,133 horses and mules; 433,875 neat cattle; 348,018 sheep; 1,271,161 swine; poultry valued at $270,647. There were produced 1,037,366 bushels of wheat; 9,801 of barley; 2,234,947 of oats; 68,608 of rye; 15,318 of buckwheat; 17,333,524 of Indian corn; 562,265 pounds of wool; 56,461 of wax; 783,768 bushels of potatoes; 49,083 tons of hay; 18,010 of hemp and flax; 9,067,913 pounds of tobacco; 121,131 of cotton; 274,853 of sugar. The products of the dairy were valued at $100,428; of the orchard at $90,878; of lumber at $70,355.

The climate of this state, though generally healthy, is subject to great extremes of heat and cold. The Missouri is frozen so hard for a number of weeks in the winter, as to be safely crossed with loaded wagons. In the summer, the heat is often great, but the air is generally pure, and dry, and salubrious.

The Mississippi winds along the entire eastern boundary of the state, for a distance of 400 miles, and receives in its course the waters of the great Missouri, which, indeed, deserves to be regarded as the main stream. Through the central and richest part of the state the Missouri rolls its immense volume of water, being navigable for steamboats 1,800 ms. from its entrance into the Mississippi, for 4 or 5 months in the year. The La Mine, Osage, and Gasconade on the n., and the Grand and Chariton on the s. side, are navigable tributaries of the Missouri. Maramec river runs through the mineral district, is a navigable stream, and enters the Mississippi 18 miles below St. Louis. Salt river, which is also navigable, enters the Mississippi 85 miles above the Missouri. The White and St. Francis drain the s. e. and the tributaries of the Neosho the s. w. part of the state.

St. Louis is much the largest and most commercial place in the state. It is situated on the w. bank of the Mississippi, 18 miles below the mouth of the Missouri. St. Genevieve, about 100 miles w. of the Mississippi, and 64 below St. Louis, is settled principally by French, and has considerable trade, particularly in lead. Potosi, in the mining district, is a flourishing town. Herculaneum is the principal place of deposit for lead from the mines. New Madrid is the most noted landing place for boats on the Mississippi, above Natchez, and Clarksville and Hannibal n. of St. Louis. St. Charles, on the Missouri, 20 miles above St. Louis, is an important place, and Booneville, Lexington, Liberty, and Independence, in the w. part of the state. Jefferson City, the capital, on the Missouri, 134 miles from St. Louis, is a growing place.

There were in 1840, 2 commercial and 39 commission houses engaged in foreign trade, with a capital of $746,500; 1,107 retail drygoods and other stores, with a capital of $8,156,802; 345 persons employed in the lumber trade, with a capital of $318,029; 79 persons engaged in internal transportation, who, with 128 butchers, packers, &c., employed a capital of $173,650. The amount of home-made or family manufactures was $1,149,544; there were 9 woollen manufactories, employing 13 persons, producing articles to the amount of $13,750, and employing a capital of $5,000; 2 furnaces, producing 180 tons of cast iron, and 4 forges, &c., producing 118 tons of bar iron, the whole employing 60 persons, and a capital of $79,000; 21 smelting houses, producing 5,295,455 pounds of lead, employing 252 persons, and a capital of $235,806; 69 persons produced 249,302 bushels of bituminous coal, employing a capital of $9,488; 36 persons produced 13,150 bushels of salt, with a capital of $3,550; 12 potteries produced articles to the amount of $1,175, employing 33 persons, and a capital of $7,250; 191 persons produced machinery to the amount of $190,412; 48 persons produced 959 small-arms; 13 persons manufactured the precious metals to the amount of $5,450; 73 persons produced granite and marble to the amount of $32,050; 671 persons produced bricks and lime to the amount of $185,234; 293 distilleries produced 508,368 gallons, and 7 breweries produced 374,700 gallons, the whole employing 365 persons, and a capital of $189,976; 201 persons produced carriages and wagons to the amount of $97,112, with a capital of $45,074; 1 powder mill, employing 2 persons, produced 7,500 pounds of gunpowder, with a capital of $1,050; 6 persons produced drugs and paints to the amount of $13,500, with a capital of $7,000; 64 flouring mills produced 49,363 barrels of flour, and, with other mills, employed 3,336 persons, producing articles to the amount of $960,058, with a capital of $1,266,019; 413 brick or stone houses, and 2,302 wooden houses, were built by 1,966 persons, and cost $1,441,573; 40 printing offices, 6 daily, 5 semi-weekly, or tri-weekly, and 24 weekly newspapers, employed 143 persons, and a capital of $79,350. The whole amount of capital employed in manufactures was $2,704,406.

The University of St. Louis, (a Catholic institution,) at St. Louis, was founded in 1839; St. Mary's College, at Barrons, (also Catholic,) was founded in 1830; Marion College, at New Paltzra, was founded in 1831; Missouri University, at Columbia, was founded in 1840; St. Charles College, at St. Charles, is a Methodist institution, founded in 1839; Fayette College, at Fayette, is a new institution. In all these colleges there were in 1840, 495 students. There were in the state, 47 academies, with 1,266 students; and 643 primary and common schools, with 16,788 scholars. There were 19,457 white persons over 20 years of age who could neither read nor write.

In 1836 the Methodists had 51 travelling preachers, and 8,692 members; the Baptists had 148 churches, 86 ministers, and 4,972 communicants; the Presbyterians had 23 churches and 17 ministers; the Roman Catholics had 1 bishop and 30 ministers; the Episcopalians had 3 ministers. Besides these there were a considerable number of Cumberland and Associate Reformed Presbyterians, and 1 Unitarian minister.

In 1839, there were in this state 3 banks and branches, with an aggregate capital of $1,116,123, and a circulation of $410,740.

At the close of 1840, the state debt amounted to $2,929,557.

The constitution of this state was formed at St. Louis in 1890. The Governor is elected by the people for 4 years, but is ineligible for the next succeeding 4 years. A lieutenant-governor is chosen at the same time, and for the same term, who is president of the senate. Every county is entitled to send one representative, but the whole number can never exceed 100. The senators are elected every 4 years, one half retiring every second year; and their number can never be less than 14, nor more than 33, chosen by districts, and apportioned according to the number of free white inhabitants. The elections for senators and representatives are held biennially in August. The legislature meets once in two years, in the month of November, at Jefferson City. Every male white citizen, over 21 years of age, who has resided one year in the state and three months of it in the county in which he offers his vote, is entitled to the right of suffrage. The judges of the supreme court and the chancellor are appointed by the governor, with the consent of the senate, and hold their offices during good behavior, or until 65 years of age.

The territory of this state was included in Louisiana, purchased of the French government in 1803. The town of St. Louis was settled by the French in 1764, but was little more than a trading post with the Indians, until it came into the possession of the United States. In 1804 it was constituted a territory, and in 1821 it was admitted to the Union, after much debate on the subject of slavery, allowed by its constitution, under certain restrictions.

MIXVILLE, p.-v., Hume t., Alleghany co., N. Y., 267 w. by s. Albany, 349 W. Situated on West Koy cr., which has a succession of falls of 73 feet, affording extensive water power. It contains 1 grist m., 2 saw m., and 15 or 20 dwellings.

MOBILE, bay, Ala. The bay sets up from the Gulf of Mexico, and is 30 ms. long, and, on an average, 12 miles broad. It communicates with the gulf by 2 straits, one on each side of Dauphin island. The strait on the w. side, will not admit of vessels drawing more than 5 feet water; that on the e. side, between the island and Mobile Point, has 18 feet water, and the channel passes within a few yards of the point. There is a bar across the bay, near its upper end, which has only 11 feet water.

MOBILE, r., Ala., is formed by the junction of the Alabama and Tombigbee rivers, 40 ms. above Mobile city. A few miles below the junction, it divides into several channels. The main western channel is called the Mobile; the main eastern channel, which is the deepest and widest, is called the Tensaw. It is navigable for vessels drawing 5 or 6 feet of water by the Tombigbee branch to St. Stephens, and by the Alabama branch to Claiborne. The two branches unite in 31° 06' n. lat., and 110° 05' w. lon. from W. In times of flood it sometimes rises 50 or 60 feet.

MOBILE, county, Ala. Situated in the s. w. part of the state, and contains 2,250 square miles. Tombigbee and Mobile rivers run on its e. border, by small branches of which it is drained on the e.; on the w. it is drained by branches of Pascagoula r. Pascagoula bay lies on its s. border. The surface is undulating near the gulf, and hilly toward the n.; and the soil is sterile, covered chiefly with pine forest. Capital, Mobile. There were in 1840, neat cattle 12,280, sheep 934, swine 8,969; Ind. corn 31,991 bush. produced, potatoes 32,800; 21 commercial and 93 commission houses, cap. $3,129,612; 248 stores, capital $1,861,695; 23 grist m., 30 saw m., 5 printing offices, 1 bindery, 3 daily, 4 weekly, 1 semi-weekly newspapers. Cap. in manufac. $475,600. 1 college, 63 students, 11 acad. 297 students, 11 sch. 170 scholars. Pop. whites 11,763, slaves 6,191, free col'd 787; total, 18,741.

Mobile Point, at the mouth of the bay, 56 w. by n. Pensacola, 10 w. by s. Blakeley, 90 by land, and 120 by water s. St. Stephens, 160 e. n. e. New Orleans, in 30° 40' n. lat., 88° 21' w. lon. Pop. 1830, 3,194; 1840, 12,673, of whom 3,869 were slaves. It contains a court house, jail, market, custom house, city hospital, a United States naval hospital, 3 banks, Barton Academy, 7 churches—1 Presbyterian, 1 Episcopal, 1 Baptist, 2 Methodist, 1 Roman Catholic, and 1 African. It is situated on a beautiful and extended plain, elevated 15 feet above the highest tides, open to refreshing breezes from the bay, and commanding a beautiful prospect. Vessels drawing more than 8 feet water pass up Spanish r., 6 miles, around a marshy island into Mobile r., and then drop down to the city. It has 46 wharves and next to New Orleans, it is the greatest cotton mart of the south; 320,000 bales have been exported in a year. The exports amount to from 12 to 16 millions of dollars annually. Tonnage of the port, 1840, 17,243. It is defended by Fort Morgan, formerly Fort Bowyer, situated on a long, low, sandy point, at the mouth of the bay, 30 ms. below the city, opposite to Dauphin island. It was surrendered to the Americans by Spain in 1813, chartered as a town in 1814, incorporated as a city in 1819. It has suffered severely by fire; 170 buildings were burned in 1827, and 600 in 1839. But it has been rebuilt, with additional beauty and convenience. Excellent water is brought in iron pipes, a distance of 2 ms., and distributed over the city.

NAHANT, Lynn t., Essex co., Mass., 5 s. E. Lynn hotel, 9 s. Salem, 14 N. v. Boston. It is a peninsula in Massachusetts bay, connected with the main land by a delightful beach, or narrow isthmus of sand, so compact as not to receive the imprint of a horse's hoof, or of a carriage wheel, a mile and a half in length, just high enough to prevent the waves from flowing over it. The peninsula consists of 2 parts, called Great Nahant and Little Nahant, connected by Bass neck. Little Nahant, the inner portion, contains 42 acres, 17 of which are in good cultivation. Great Nahant, the outer portion, is 2 ms. long, and, in some places, half a mile wide, containing 463 acres. The surface is uneven, rising from 40 to 100 feet above the level of the sea. The shores generally consist of precipitous rocks, rising from 20 to 60 feet above the tide, with a great depth of water below. In some places, however, are beautiful beaches. The roar of the ocean against the rocks is sometimes tremendous. A spacious stone hotel, containing nearly 100 rooms, is erected near the E. extremity. There are other boarding-houses in the vicinity, and about 20 beautiful cottages, the summer residences of gentlemen of fortune. Nahant is much frequented for health and pleasure. A steamboat plies between this place and Boston, and stages run frequently in the watering season.

NATURAL BRIDGE, p.-o., Rockbridge co., Va., 156 w. Richmond. Situated in the s. w. part of the county, near the Natural Bridge, one of the greatest curiosities in the United States. This bridge consists of a stupendous arch of limestone rock, over a chasm 50 feet wide at its base, and 90 feet at top. The height of the bridge above the stream to the top, is 215 feet; its average width is 80 feet; its extreme length at top is 93 feet, and its thickness, from its under to its upper side, is 55 feet. It is covered to the depth of from 4 to 6 feet with clayey earth, with a natural parapet of rocks on the sides, rendered firm by trees and shrubbery. The view from above, to those who dare to take it, is awfully grand; but the best view is obtained from beneath, where the astonished spectator has a full view of this sublime work of nature. Cedar cr., which flows under the bridge, is a small and unimportant stream. This bridge is of important use, as it constitutes a safe and convenient passage across this great chasm, not otherwise possible for some miles above or below.

NATURAL CANAL, N. Y., connects the waters of Oswegatchie and Grass rivers. It is 6 miles long, and from 10 to 20 rods wide, very straight, and navigable, at high water, for boats of 10 tons burden.

The amount of articles manufactured exceeds $1,000,000 annually.

NAUVOO, city, Hancock co., Ill., 124 n. w. Springfield, 891 W. It is situated on the e. bank of the Mississippi r., which is here about 2 miles wide, and where is a good steamboat landing. In consequence of a curve in the r., it bounds the place on the n. w. and s. It is 181 ms. above the mouth of Illinois r., and the city limits include a space 4 miles long, and 3 wide, at its greatest width, covered with streets of ample width, and crossing each other at right angles. Its buildings, at the end of three years from the time of its establishment, amount to 1,000, consisting chiefly of whitewashed log cabins, with some frame and brick houses. Its public buildings are the "Nauvoo House," a spacious hotel, fronting on 2 streets, 120 feet on each, 40 feet wide, and 3 stories high above the basement. In this building Joe Smith, the pretended prophet and leader of these "Latter-day Saints," is provided with a suite of rooms. The Nauvoo Temple, not yet entirely completed, will be 130 feet long, and 100 feet wide. In the basement is a baptistry or brazen sea, supported on 12 gilded oxen, the model of which is derived from the brazen sea of Solomon. Their property is held as private; but a large farm, without the city, is occupied and cultivated in common. The Nauvoo Legion consists of from 2 to 3,000 men, armed and disciplined. They have a University, which contains a president, a professor of mathematics and English literature, a professor of the learned languages, and a professor of church history. The population amounts to 7,000, within the city limits, a large number of whom are from England, besides about 3,000 who belong to the fraternity, in the vicinity. The city is divided into 4 wards, and has a mayor, and from each of the wards, 2 aldermen, 4 common councilmen, and a constable.

New Hampshire, one of the northern United States, is bounded N. by Lower Canada; e. by Maine; s. e. by the Atlantic, and s. by Massachusetts; and w. by Vermont, from which it is separated by the western bank of Connecticut r. It is between 42° 41' and 45° 11' n. lat., and 70° 40' and 72° 28' w. lon. It is 160 miles long, and from 19 to 90 broad, containing 9,280 square miles, or 5,939,200 acres. The population, in 1790, was 141,885; in 1800, 138,859; in 1810, 214,460; in 1820, 244,161; in 1830, 269,328; in 1840, 284,574. Of these, 139,004 are free white males; 145,032 do. females; 248 free colored males; 290 do. females. Engaged in agriculture, 77,949; in commerce, 1,379; in manufactures and trades, 17,826; navigating the ocean, 455; do. lakes and rivers, 198; learned professions, 1,640.

Concord is the seat of government, situated on the Merrimac r., 63 ms. n. n. w. from Boston, with which it has a boatsable communication, by means of the river and the Middlesex canal.

The state is divided into 10 counties, with their population and capitals, are as follows: ROCKINGHAM, 45,771, Portsmouth and Exeter; MERRIMAC, 26,253, Concord; HILLSBOROUGH, 42,494, Amherst; CHERIB, 26,429, Keene; SULLIVAN, 20,240, Newport; STRAFFORD, 23,166, Dover and Rochester; BELKNAP, 17,968, Guilford; CARROLL, 19,973, Ossipee; GRAFTON, 42,311, Haverhill and Plymouth; COOS, 9,849, Lancaster. These contain about 323 townships.

New Hampshire has only 18 ms. of seacoast, and the shore is generally a sandy beach, bordered in front by salt marshes, and penetrated by creeks and coves, suitable for harbors for small craft. There are only two bluffs on the coast, Great and Little Boar's Heads, both in the town of Hampton. Portsmouth, at the entrance of the Piscataqua, is the only harbor for ships, and it is one of the best in the United States. The land, for the distance of 30 or 30 miles from the sea, is either level or moderately uneven. Beyond that, more elevated hills are found; and toward the northern part, the country may be considered mountainous, having many elevated summits, some of which are the highest in the United States east of the Rocky mountains. The principal chain commences between the Connecticut and Merrimac rivers, and passes n. of the sources of the Merrimac. This may be considered as a continuation of the great Alleghany range. The highest summits are Grand Monadnock, toward the s. w. part of the state, 3,254 feet above the level of the sea; Sunapee mountain, near Sunapee lake; and further n., Mooschoilock, 4,636 feet high; and still further n., the White mountains tower in majestic grandeur to the height of 6,438 feet, the most elevated summit being denominated Mount Washington. The Notch, in the White mountains, is a great curiosity, being in some places not more than 22 feet wide, with lofty precipices on both sides, affording some of the wildest and grandest scenery in nature. A road passes through this Notch, being the only place in which it can be passed. Through this road the produce in the n. part of New Hampshire, and the n. e. part of Vermont, finds a market at Portland; and so important is this communication considered by Maine, that its legislature has sometimes made grants for its improvement. One of the head branches of the Saco r. flows through the Notch.

New Hampshire may be considered as a fertile state, particularly on the margins of the rivers, and especially of the Connecticut. The elevated parts afford a fine grazing country, and the valleys are productive. The principal productions are grass, wheat, rye, Indian corn; and beef, pork, mutton, and butter and cheese, are produced in great quantities. According to the census of 1840, there were in New Hampshire 43,899 horses and mules; 375,563 neat cattle; 617,390 sheep; 121,671 swine. Value of poultry produced, $107,092. There were produced 422,124 bushels of wheat; 121,999 of barley; 1,396,114 of oats; 308,148 of rye; 105,103 of buckwheat; 1,165,573 of Indian corn; 1,260,517 pounds of wool; 243,485 pounds of hops; 6,206,606 bushels of potatoes; 496,107 tons of hay; 264 of hemp and flax; 1,162,368 pounds of sugar. The products of the dairy were $1,638,543; of the orchard, $239,973; of lumber, $433,217.

The Merrimac river is made navigable by dams, locks, and canals, from Concord until it meets the Middlesex canal. By this route much of the produce of the southern part of the state finds a market at Boston. In the western part of the state, much of it goes down Connecticut river to Hartford. In the upper counties the market is extensively at Portland, Me. Portsmouth is the most commercial place in the state. The principal articles of export are lumber, fish, beef, pork, horses, neat cattle, sheep, flax seed, and pot and pearl ashes.

The climate of New Hampshire is subject to great extremes of heat and cold, but the air is generally salubrious. In the month of November the rivers are generally frozen, and the snow usually lies until April, and in the northern and mountainous parts until May.

The largest rivers in this state are the Connecticut, made boatable to the 15 mile falls, at Bath, N. H., 250 ms. above Hartford, Ct.; the Merrimac, boatable to Concord. The Saco, the Androscoggin, and the Piscataqua, rise and run, in part, in this state. The other rivers are the Upper and Lower Ammonoosuc, Sugar, Ashuelot, Contoocook, Maragalloway, and Nashua. By means of the Piscataqua, a sloop navigation is opened to Newmarket, Durham, and Exeter.

The lakes are numerous and picturesque. Lake Winnepiseogee, near the centre of the state, 23 miles long, and from 2 to 10 broad; Umbagog, which lies partly in Maine; Ossipee, Sunapee, Squam, and Newfound, are the principal.

The harbor of Portsmouth is one of the finest in the world, protected from storms, has 40 feet of water at low tide, is easily defended, and easily accessible for the largest ships. This is the greatest commercial place in the state. The other principal towns are Dover, Concord, Nashua, Keene, Exeter, Manchester, Peterborough, Walpole, Claremont, Gilmanton, Meredith, Hanover, and Haverhill.

The exports for the year ending September, 1840, amounted to $30,761; and the imports to $114,647. There were 18 commercial and 6 commission houses engaged in foreign trade, with a capital of $1,330,600; 1,075 retail drygoods and other stores, employing a capital of $2,602,423; 117 persons engaged in internal transportation, who, with 38 butchers, packers, &c., employed a capital of $54,190; 626 persons employed in the lumber trade, with a capital of $29,000; 329 persons employed in the fisheries, with a capital of $69,680.

There were in 1840, home-made, or family goods, manufactured to the amount of $53,300. There were 66 woollen manufactories, and 152 falling mills, employing 893 persons, producing goods to the amount of $795,784, with a capital of $740,345; 58 cotton manufactories, with 125,173 spindles, employing 6,991 persons, producing goods to the value of $4,142,304, and employing a capital of $5,523,200; 15 furnaces produced 1,320 tons of cast iron, and 2 forges 125 tons of bar iron, together employing 121 persons, and a capital of $93,200; 1 smelting house, employing 2 persons, produced 1,000 pounds of lead; 13 paper manufactories produced articles to the amount of $150,600, and other paper manufactories to the amount of $1,500, the whole employing 111 persons, with a capital of $104,300; hats and caps were manufactured to the amount of $190,526, and straw bonnets to the amount of $9,379, together employing 2,048 persons, and a capital of $48,852; 17 persons manufactured tobacco to the amount of $10,500, with a capital of $2,100; 251 tanneries employed 776 persons, and a capital of $386,402; 2,131 other manufactories of leather, as saddleries, &c., produced articles to the value of $712,151, and employed a capital of $230,649; 5 distilleries produced 51,244 gallons, 1 brewery 3,000 do., together employing 7 persons, and a capital of $15,998; 3 glass houses employed 85 persons, producing to the amount of $47,000, with a capital of $44,000; 14 potteries employed 29 persons, producing $19,100, with a capital of $6,840; 20 persons manufactured soap to the amount of 10,900 pounds, and tallow candles to the amount of 28,845 pounds, and spermaceti or wax candles to the amount of 50,000 pounds, with a capital of $13,550; 191 persons produced machinery to the value of $106,814; 47 persons produced musical instruments to the amount of $26,750, with a capital of $14,050; 197 persons manufactured hardware and cutlery to the amount of $124,460; 55 persons manufactured granite and marble to the amount of $21,918; 236 persons manufactured bricks and lime to the amount of $63,166; 450 persons produced carriages and wagons to the amount of $232,240, employing a capital of $114,763; 7 powder mills, employing 11 persons, produced 185,000 pounds of gunpowder, with a capital of $58,000; mills of various kinds employed 1,296 persons, and produced articles to the value of $758,260, with a capital of $1,149,193; ships were built to the amount of $78,000; the manufacture of furniture employed 233 persons, producing articles worth $105,827, and employing a capital of $59,984. There were built 90 brick and 434 wood houses, employing 935 persons, valued at $470,715. There were 36 printing offices, 22 binderies, 27 weekly newspapers, 6 periodicals, the whole employing 256 persons, and a capital of $110,850. The whole amount of capital employed in manufactures was $9,252,448.

The principal literary institution in the state is Dartmouth College, in Hanover, founded in 1770, and has attached to it a flourishing medical department. The Gilmanton Theological Seminary, at Gilmanton, was founded in 1835. In these institutions there were in 1840, 433 students. There are in the state 68 academies, with 5,799 students; and 2,127 common and primary schools, with 82,632 scholars. In the state there were 943 white persons, over 90 years of age, who could neither read nor write.

The principal religious denominations are the Congregationalists, Baptists, and Methodists. In 1836, the Congregationalists had 159 churches, 142 ministers, and 18,983 communicants; the Baptists had 90 churches, 64 ordained ministers, and 6,505 communicants. The Free-will Baptists had 100 congregations, and 81 ministers. The Methodists had 75 ministers. Besides these, there are Presbyterians, Unitarians, Universalists, Episcopalians, some Roman Catholics, and 2 societies of Shakers.

In June, 1839, there were in the state 28 banks, with an aggregate capital of $2,939,508, having a circulation of $1,439,519. This is one of the few states that has no public debt.

There is a state prison at Concord.

A constitution was formed in 1784, and in 1792 this constitution was altered and amended to its present form. The legislature, consisting of a senate and house of representatives, is styled the General Court of New Hampshire. Every town, or incorporated township, having 150 ratable polls, may send one representative; and for every 300 additional polls is entitled to an additional representative. The senate consists of 12 members, chosen by the people in districts. The executive power is vested in a governor and a council of five members. The governor, council, senators, and representatives, are all elected annually by the people on the second Tuesday in March, and their term of service commences on the first Wednesday in June. The General Court meets annually, at Concord, on the first Wednesday in June. Every male inhabitant, of 21 years of age, enjoys the right of suffrage, excepting paupers, and persons excused from paying taxes at their own request. The judiciary power is vested in a supreme court and a court of common pleas. The judges are appointed by the governor and council, and hold their offices during good behavior, but not beyond the age of 70 years.

The internal improvements of this state relate chiefly to the improvement of the Merrimac river, by dams, locks, and short canals. They are—Bow falls, 3 miles below Concord,  $\frac{1}{2}$  of a mile long; Hookset falls, one eighth of a mile; Amoskeag falls, 1 mile; Union falls, 9 miles; and Sewell's falls,  $\frac{1}{4}$  of a mile. The Eastern railroad extends from Massachusetts line to Portsmouth, 15 $\frac{1}{2}$  miles; the Nashua and Lowell railroad, from Nashua, N. H., to Lowell, Mass., incorporated in 1836. The Boston and Maine railroad extends from Massachusetts line to Exeter, 14 miles.

New Hampshire was first granted to Ferdinando Gorges, in 1622, and was first settled at Dover and Portsmouth in 1623. It came voluntarily under the jurisdiction of Massachusetts in 1641, but was made a separate province, by an act of Charles II., in 1679. It was several times afterwards connected with Massachusetts, until 1741, since which time it has remained a separate state.

NEW HAMPTON, p-t., Belknap co., N. H., 29 n. w. Concord, 510 W. Pemigewasset r. washes its w. boundary, and across it is a bridge to Bristol. The surface is uneven and broken; soil, very fertile. Incorporated in 1777. It contains a flouring academy. It has 4 stores, cap. $9,200; 2 fulling m., 2 woollen fac., 5 cotton fac. 22,699 sp., 4 tanneries, 3 grist m., 5 saw m., 1 acad. 363 students, 16 sch. 717 scholars. Pop. 1,809.

NEW HAMPTON, p-v., Lebanon t., Hunterdon co., N. J., 47 n. Trenton, 204 W. Situated on the s. side of Musconetcong cr. It contains 2 stores, 1 grist m., 1 saw m., and about 25 dwellings.

NEW HANOVER, county, N. C. Situated in the s. e. part of the state, bounded s. e. by the Atlantic, and contains 995 sq. ms. Drained by the n. e. branch of Cape Fear r. and its tributaries. A large swamp lies in its e. part. Along the Atlantic shore are long, low, and narrow islands, with occasional inlets. Capital, Wilmington. There were in 1840, neat cattle 11,605, sheep 4,789, swine 24,859; wheat 469 bush. produced, Ind. corn 200,423, buckwheat 18, potatoes 114,014, rice 1,467,600 pounds, cotton 23,566; 2 commercial and 11 commission houses, capital $100,000; 58 stores, cap. $322,140; 1 tannery, 2 distilleries, 49 grist m., 22 saw m., 1 oil m., 2 printing offices, 2 weekly newspapers. Cap. in manufac. $305,535. 6 acad. 216 students, 10 sch. 223 scholars. Pop. whites 6,371, slaves 6,376, free col'd 565; total, 13,312.

NEW HANOVER, p-t., Montgomery co., Pa., 74 e. Harrisburg, 150 W. The surface is hilly; soil, loam and red shale, tolerably productive. Drained by Swamp creek, on which is a small v., with 2 churches. The population is chiefly German. It has 1 store, cap. $2,000; 2 tanneries, 1 pottery, 4 grist m., 5 saw m., 1 oil m. Cap. in manufactures $6,575. Pop. 1,419.

NEW HARMONY, p-v., Monroe co., Ky., 143 s. w. Frankfort, 656 W.

NEW HARMONY, p-v., Posey co., Ia., 172 s. w. Indianapolis, 742 W. It was founded in 1814 by a society of Germans, from Swabia, called "Harmonists," who removed from Butler co., Pa., under George Rapp. Their society was founded on a community of goods; but the climate proving unfavorable, they returned to Pa., and settled at Economy, Ohio t., Beaver co., 18 miles below Pittsburgh, on the Ohio r. (See Economy.)

NEW HARRISBURG, p-v., Carroll co., O., 130 e. n. e. Columbus, 301 W.

NEW HARTFORD, p-t., Litchfield co., Ct., 30 w. by n. Hartford, 344 W. The surface is hilly and mountainous; soil, a gravelly loam, or a coarse gravel, abounding with stones, adapted to grazing. Watered by Farmington r. It has 2 villages, and contains 3 churches—2 Congregational and 1 Baptist. The villages are on Farmington r., and each contains about 30 dwellings, and several mills and manufactories. It has 6 stores, capital $18,000; 2 furnaces, 4 fulling m., 1 woollen fac., 1 tannery, 2 paper m., 3 grist m., 7 saw m. Cap. in manufac. $361,350. 2 acad. 61 students, 11 sch. 424 scholars. Pop. 1,703.

NEW HARTFORD, p-t., Oneida co., N. Y., 4 w. Utica, 95 w. n. w. Albany, 384 W. The surface is diversified with gently rising hills, and beautiful valleys, productive and well cultivated. The soil is a rich calcareous loam. Drained by Sadequada cr., a fine mill stream. The v. is situated on this cr., and contains 4 churches—1 Presbyterian, 1 Episcopal, 1 Methodist, and 1 Universalist—a female seminary, 6 stores, 3 cotton fac., 1 grist m., 1 trip-hammer works, 1 bleaching and dyeing establishment, 100 dwellings, and about 800 inhabitants. There are in the t. 13 stores, cap. $30,850; 1 fulling m., 1 woollen fac., 5 cotton fac. 14,164 sp., 1 tannery, 1 paper fac., 3 grist m., 7 saw m. Cap. in manufac. $361,732. 18 sch. 960 scholars. Pop. 3,819.

NEW HARTFORD, p-v., Pike co., Ill., 76 w. by s. Springfield, 856 W.

NEW HARTFORD CENTRE, p-v., New Hartford t., Litchfield co., Ct., 18 w. by n. Hartford, 341 W. It contains a Baptist church and several factories.

NEW HAVEN, county, Ct. Situated in the s. part of the state, and contains 540 sq. ms. Long Island sound bounds it on the s. Housatonic r. runs on its s. w. border, and separates it from Fairfield co. The surface is generally uneven. Two mountain ranges terminate at East Rock and West Rock, near New Haven. The soil is various, much of it a light sandy loam, but some of it strong and fertile. Drained by Naugatuck, Quinnipiac, Pomperaug, West, Mill, and Menunkatuck rivers. Capital, New Haven. There were in 1840, neat cattle 31,627, sheep 41,392, swine 17,234; wheat 7,032 bush. produced, rye 129,391, Ind. corn 234,548, buckwheat 30,031, barley 2,731, oats 167,640, potatoes 481,941, sugar 1,261 pounds; 6 commercial and 2 com. houses in for. trade, cap. $132,000; 342 stores, cap. $1,223,745; 14 lumber yards, cap. $149,000; 3 rope fac., 26 fulling m., 14 woollen fac. 4 cotton fac. 3,358 sp., 27 tanneries, 22 distilleries, 1 pottery, 2 flouring m., 48 grist m., 93 saw m., 3 paper fac., 9 printing offices, 5 binderies, 4 periodicals, 2 daily, 5 weekly, 2 tri-weekly newspapers. Cap. in manufac. $2,545,679. 1 college, 561 students, 32 acad. 1,030 students, 242 sch. 9,339 scholars. Pop. 48,619.

NEW HAVEN, p-t., Addison co., Vt., 60 w. Montpelier, 489 W. The surface is moderately uneven; soil, marl, clay, and loam, and fertile. Watered by Otter creek, Middlebury r., and Little Otter cr., which afford good water power. It contains a small v. in which is a Congregational church. Chartered in 1761. It has 3 stores, cap. $19,000; 2 fulling m., 1 woollen fac., 2 tanneries, 1 pottery, 2 grist m., 2 saw m. Cap. in manufac. $19,800. 12 sch. 630 scholars. Pop. 1,503.

NEW HAVEN, a city and seaport, capital of N. Haven co., and semi-capital of Connecticut, lies round the head of a bay which sets up 4 miles from Long Island sound, and is in 41° 16' N. lat., and 72° 56' w. lon. from Greenwich, and 3° 53' e. lon. from W. It is 36 miles s. by w. from Hartford, 52 w. from New London, 76 n. e. from New York, 134 w. s. w. from Boston, and 300 from W. The population of the city in 1820 was 5,772; in 1820, 7,147; in 1830, 10,180; in 1840, 12,960. Of these 474 were employed in commerce; 1,653 in manufactures and trades; 306 in navigating the ocean, rivers, &c.; 245 in learned professions.

The city is on a beautiful plain, with a slight inclination toward the water, and skirted in other directions by an amphitheatre of hills, two of which consist of bold rocky eminences, called East and West rock, which present fronts nearly perpendicular, from 330 to 370 feet high. The tops of these 2 elevations afford beautiful views, not only of the city and the surrounding country, but of Long Island sound, terminated by the island fading in the distance. Two small rivers, West river on the west, and Quinnipiac on the east, bound this plain. The city extends about 3 miles from e. to w., and 2 from s. to n. It is laid out with great regularity, and consists of 2 parts, the old town, and the new township. The old town was laid out in the form of a square, half a mile on a side, divided into 9 smaller squares, each 52 rods on a side, separated by streets 4 rods in width. The squares have generally been divided into 4 parts, by streets intersecting them. The central square was reserved for public purposes, and is divided into 2 parts by Temple-street. The eastern half of this square is unoccupied by buildings, but ornamented by lofty trees. On the square on the w. side of Temple-street are 3 elegant churches—2 Congregational, of brick, and 1 Episcopal, of stone, the latter of Gothic architecture, and a finer row of churches are nowhere found in the United States. A little to the west of Temple-street, on the western half of the square, is the state house, a large and splendid edifice, of Grecian architecture, built of brick. On the n. e. corner of the square is the Methodist church, a plain building of brick. On the w. side of the square, and fronting toward the e., is the fine row of buildings belonging to Yale College, of very commanding appearance, with handsome trees in front. The whole square, with its fine public buildings, and its lofty and graceful elms, presents an assemblage of beauty unsurpassed by any public ground of any city in the country. The houses of the city are generally built of wood, and neatly painted, and surrounded by court yards and gardens, ornamented by shrubbery and fruit trees; but many of the houses recently built are of brick, and constructed generally with elegance and taste. The whole city has a quiet and rural aspect, scarcely elsewhere to be found in so large a place. The new township is regularly laid out and finely built, and has a fine public ground called Wooster square, containing 5 acres. At the n. e. corner of the old town is the public cemetery, containing over 17 acres, intersected by avenues and alleys at right angles with each other, and divided into family lots, 32 feet in length and 18 feet broad. All the avenues and alleys are bordered by railings painted white, with the names of the owners of the lots inscribed on them. The cemetery contains many elegant monuments, and is beautifully ornamented by shrubbery, and deservedly attracts much public attention.

The city contains about 6 square miles; the whole township contains 8; and a small village called Westville, at the foot of West Rock on the w., and about half of the village of Fairhaven on the e., are within the town, but not within the city limits.

The harbor of New Haven is safe but shallow, and gradually filling up with mud. It has about 7 feet of water on the bar at low tide, and the common tides rise to 6 feet, and the spring tides about 7 or 8 feet. Long wharf is 3,943 feet in length, the longest in the United States. There is a less depth of water at its termination now, than there was in 1765, when it was only 20 rods long. There is another wharf which has a basin, in which, by means of flood-gates, the water is always kept at the elevation of high tide. The maritime commerce of New Haven is more extensive than that of any other city in Connecticut, its foreign and coasting trade being both considerable. The sealing business, connected with the China trade, formerly brought considerable wealth into the city. At present its foreign trade is chiefly with the West Indies. The tonnage of the port in 1840, was 11,500. A line of steamboats connects this city with New York, and also several lines of packets. The Farmington canal connects this place with Northampton, Mass., and Connecticut river near it; and a railroad connects it with Hartford. The town contains 20 houses of public worship, viz: 9 Congregational, 3 Methodist, 3 Episcopal, 2 Baptist, 1 Catholic, 2 colored Methodist, 1 colored Congregational. There are also a custom house, an almshouse, a jail, a museum, 4 banks, and a savings institution, various benevolent societies, the Young Men's Institute, and an institution for popular lectures, with one of the best selected libraries in the Union. The State Hospital, founded in 1832, is about half a mile s. w. from the centre of the city, and has a fine edifice with a colonnade. But the most important public institution in the city is Yale College, one of the oldest and most extensive institutions of the kind in the United States. Without large funds, it has accomplished great things. It was founded in 1701, originally at Killingworth. It was removed to Saybrook in 1707, and to New Haven in 1717. There are 4 college halls 100 feet by 40, 4 stories high, containing 32 rooms each for students; and n. of these is another hall devoted to the use of the theological students; there is a chapel, in which is one story appropriated to religious worship, and one to the college library; and two other buildings, called the Athenaeum, and the Lyceum, appropriated to recitation and lecture rooms, rooms for the professors, and for the libraries of the literary societies. These are all of brick; and the buildings intermediate between the college halls, have neat cupolas; one of which is after the model of the Temple of the Winds, fitted up for the use of a splendid telescope. In the rear of these is another range of buildings, consisting of the chemical laboratory; the commons hall in the second story, of which is a spacious apartment devoted to the most splendid mineralogical cabinet in the United States, containing more than 16,000 specimens, many of them rare; and a stone building succeeded, and containing a splendid collection of paintings by Col. Trumbull and others. A short distance from these are the buildings devoted to the law and medical departments, the latter of which has an anatomical museum and a library. Yale College has more students, and has educated more men than any other college in the country. In 1841, the officers were 30 in number. Of these, besides the president, 17 were professors, and the remainder were tutors or subordinate officers: 15 are connected with the college proper. The whole number of students of all descriptions was 550. Of these 410 were undergraduates; 59 theological students; 31 law; 47 medical; and 3 resident graduates. The whole number of graduates is over 5,000, of whom nearly 1,400 were ministers. The number of volumes in the various libraries is 33,000, among which are many old and rare, as well as many splendid modern works. The commencement is on the third Wednesday in August.

New Haven has many subordinate seminaries, both male and female, of high reputation. There were in 1842, 11 select schools for males, 1 excellent Lancasterian school for boys, 1 do. for girls, and 10 female seminaries, besides several district or common schools of less note.

The manufactures of New Haven are numerous and extensive. There were in 1840, 6 for commercial and 2 commission houses, with a cap. of $132,000; 204 retail stores, with a cap. of $667,600; 10 lumber yards, cap. $126,000; machinery produced, valued at $50,000; hardware and cutlery, $81,500; 1 woollen fac., cap. $20,000; 5 tanneries, cap. $50,000; 1 pottery, cap. $3,000; 1 ropewalk, cap. $2,000; carriages to the amount of $234,031; 9 printing offices, 5 binderies, 2 daily, 5 weekly, 2 tri-weekly newspapers, and 4 periodicals, cap. $134,300. Total capital in manufac. $921,200. 1 college, 561 students, 13 acad. 385 students, 27 sch. 1,119 scholars.

New Haven was first settled in 1638 by a colony under Theophilus Eaton, the first governor, and John Davenport, the first minister, whom Cotton Mather denominated the "Moses and Aaron" of the settlement. In 1665, this colony was united by a royal charter to Connecticut. In 1784, New Haven was chartered as a city. In July, 1779, the city was invaded and plundered by about 3,000 British troops from New York, under Generals Tryon and Garth, after a feeble opposition on the part of the inhabitants.

NEW JERSEY.

NEW JERSEY, one of the middle United States, is bounded n. by New York; E. by the Hudson and the Atlantic; s. by the Atlantic; and w. by Delaware bay and river, which separates it from the states of Delaware and Pennsylvania. It is between 39° and 41° 24' n. lat., and between 74° and 75° 29' w. lon., and between 1° 26' and 3° 9' E. lon. from W. It is 163 ms. long and 52 broad, containing 8,320 square miles, or 5,324,000 acres. The population in 1790 was 184,189; in 1800, 211,149; in 1810, 245,592; in 1820, 277,575; in 1830, 320,779; in 1840, 373,306. Of these 177,055 were white males; 174,533 do. females; 10,780 were free colored males; 10,264 do. females; 303 male, and 371 female slaves. Employed in mining, 266; agriculture, 56,701; commerce, 2,383; manufactures and trades, 27,004; navigating the ocean, 1,143; do. canals, lakes, and rivers, 1,625; learned professions, &c., 1,627.

The state is divided into 18 counties, which, with their population in 1840, and their capitals, are as follows: ATLANTIC, 8,728, May's Landing; BERGEN, 13,223, Hackensack; BURLINGTON, 32,831, Mount Holly; CAPE MAY, 5,324, Cape May C. H.; CUMBERLAND, 14,374, Bridgetown; ESSEX, 44,621, Newark; GLOUCESTER, 25,438, Woodbury; HUDSON, 9,483, North Bergen; HUNTERDON, 24,789, Flemington; MERCER, 21,502, Trenton; MIDDLESEX, 21,893, New Brunswick; MONMOUTH, 32,909, Freehold; MORRIS, 25,844, Morristown; PASSAIC, 16,734, Patterson; SALEM, 16,024, Salem; SOMERSET, 17,455, Somerville; WARREN, 20,366, Belvidere; SUSSEX 21,770, Newton.

The seat of government is Trenton, at the head of sloop navigation on the Delaware, 30 miles above Philadelphia.

The northern part of this state is mountainous, being crossed by a branch of the Alleghany ridge; the middle portion of the state is agreeably diversified by hills and valleys; while the southern part is level and sandy. This portion of the state is to a great extent barren, as the natural growth of the soil is little else but shrub oaks and yellow pines. It is susceptible of being made very productive by the use of marl, which is extensively found. The remainder of the state has a good soil, well adapted to grazing, and producing wheat, rye, Indian corn, buckwheat, potatoes, oats, and barley. Apples, pears, peaches, plums, and cherries, are produced in great perfection and abundance. In the mountainous parts, the finest cattle are raised, and large quantities of butter and cheese are produced. The produce of this state finds a market in New York and Philadelphia, on its eastern and western borders. Its exports are wheat, flour, horses, cattle, hams, cider, lumber, flax seed, leather, and iron. There were in this state in 1840, 70,502 horses and mules; 230,203 neat cattle; 219,285 sheep; 261,443 swine. There was produced poultry to the value of $336,953. There were produced 774,203 bushels of wheat; 12,501 of barley; 3,083,524 of oats; 1,665,820 of rye; 856,117 of buckwheat; 4,361,975 of Indian corn; 397,207 pounds of wool; 4,531 of hops; 10,061 of wax; 2,072,069 bushels of potatoes; 334,861 tons of hay; 2,165 of flax and hemp; 1,966 pounds of silk cocoons. The products of the dairy amounted to $1,328,032; and of the orchard, $464,006; of lumber, $271,591; 9,416 gallons of wine were made; and 2,200 barrels of tar, pitch, turpentine, and rosin were produced.

A large part of the state being open to the influence of the ocean, has a mild climate; and nowhere is the cold severe in the winter, except in the mountainous region in the northern part.

The Hudson and Delaware rivers, on the E. and W. sides, flow partly in this state. Besides these, there are the Raritan, navigable for sloops, 17 miles, to New Brunswick, entering the Atlantic below Staten Island; the Passaic, navigable for small vessels, 10 miles, to Newark, and falls into Newark bay; the Hackensack, navigable 15 miles, which falls into Newark bay; Great Egg Harbor river, navigable 20 miles, for small craft, and entering into the Atlantic. The principal bays are Newark bay, N. of Staten Island, and Raritan bay, between Staten Island and Sandy Hook. Perth Amboy, at the head of this bay, is the principal seaport in the state. Delaware bay belongs in part to this state. The two principal capes in this state are Cape May, on the N. side of Delaware bay, and Sandy Hook, which is a low, sandy island, about 3 miles long, S. of New York bay. The principal towns are Newark, New Brunswick, Paterson, Trenton, Burlington, Bordentown, Elizabethtown, and Perth Amboy.

This state has considerable commerce, though it is diminished by that of the two great cities on its borders. The exports in 1840 were $16,076, and the imports were $19,209.

There were in the state in 1840, 2 commercial and 8 commission houses engaged in foreign trade, with a capital of $99,000; there were 1,504 retail drygoods and other stores, employing a capital of $4,113,247; 1,280 persons engaged in the lumber trade, employing a capital of $410,570; 423 persons employed in internal transportation, who, with 30 butchers, packers, &c., invested a capital of $204,900; 179 persons engaged in the fisheries, with a capital of $93,275.

There were in 1840, home-made or family goods produced to the amount of $201,625; 31 woolen manufactories, and 49 fulling mills, employing 427 persons, producing goods to the amount of $440,710, with a capital of $314,650; 43 cotton manufactories, with 63,744 spindles, employing 2,408 persons, manufacturing articles to the amount of $2,086,104, with a capital of $1,722,810; 26 furnaces, producing 11,114 tons of cast iron, and 80 forges, &c., producing 7,171 tons of bar iron, employing 2,056 persons, and a capital of $1,721,820; 41 paper manufactories produced articles to the amount of $562,200, and other paper manufactures produced $7,000, the whole employing 400 persons, and a capital of $460,100; hats and caps were manufactured to the amount of $1,181,562, and straw bonnets to the amount of $23,220, the whole employing 957 persons, and a capital of $332,029; 159 tanneries employed 1,090 persons, and a capital of $415,728; and 478 other leather manufactories, as saddleries, &c., produced articles to the amount of $1,582,746; 23 glass houses, and 4 glass-cutting establishments employed 1,075 persons, producing articles to the amount of $904,700, with a capital of $589,800; 22 potteries employed 122 persons, producing articles to the amount of $256,807, with a capital of $135,850; 932 persons produced machinery to the amount of $753,050; 219 distilleries produced 334,017 gallons, and 6 breweries produced 206,375 gallons, employing 394 persons, with a capital of $230,870; 123 persons produced hardware and cutlery to the amount of $83,575; 71 persons manufactured 2,010 small-arms; 70 persons manufactured drugs and paints to the amount of $127,400, and turpentine and varnish to the amount of $43,000, with a capital of $140,800; 1,834 persons produced carriages and wagons to the amount of $1,371,149, with a capital of $644,966; 64 flouring mills manufactured 168,797 barrels of flour, and with other mills employed 1,238 persons, and a capital of $2,641,200; 8 rope walks employed 60 persons, and produced cordage to the amount of $93,075, with a capital of $37,305; ships were built to the value of $344,240; furniture employed 517 persons, producing to the amount of $176,566, with a capital of $130,525; 572 persons produced bricks and lime to the amount of $376,805; 205 brick and 861 wooden houses were built by 2,066 persons, at a cost of $1,092,052. The whole amount of capital employed in manufactures in the state was $11,517,532.

The College of New Jersey, or Nassau Hall, was founded in 1738, and is one of the principal colleges in the country. It has educated many distinguished men, and is flourishing. Connected with it is the Princeton Theological Seminary, supported by the Presbyterians, and which is their principal place of theological education. Rutgers' College, (formerly Queen's College,) in New Brunswick, was founded in 1770, and has latterly been a growing institution. Connected with it is a theological seminary, established by the Dutch Reformed church, in 1784, which is a respectable institution. In these institutions there were in 1840, 443 students; there were in the state 66 academies, with 3,027 students; 1,207 primary and common schools, with 52,583 scholars; and 6,385 persons over 20 years of age who could neither read nor write.

Of the principal religious denominations, in 1835, the Presbyterians had 105 ministers; the Dutch Reformed, 48 churches and 42 ministers; the Baptists, 80 churches and about as many ministers; the Episcopalians, 30 ministers, including 1 bishop; the Methodists about 70 ministers, and a greater number of congregations; the Friends, 67 meetings. Besides these, there were a few Congregationalists, Roman Catholics, and Universalists.

In January, 1840, this state had 26 banks, with an aggregate capital of $3,822,607, and a circulation of $1,414,708. The state debt amounted to $83,283.

The constitution of New Jersey was formed in 1776, and has existed without any material change to the present time. The government is vested in a governor, legislative council, and general assembly. The council and assembly are elected annually. The council consists of 1 member chosen by each county, and the assembly of 50 members, and meets annually in October.

The governor is chosen annually by the joint vote of the council and assembly, at their first joint meeting after each annual election. The governor is president of the council, who also elect a vice-president from their own body, to preside in case of the absence of the governor. The original constitution granted the right of suffrage to "all persons of full age, who are worth fifty pounds proclamation money, clear estate in the same, and have resided within the county in which they claim to vote, for 12 months immediately preceding the election." But the legislature have virtually annulled this provision by enacting by law, that every white male inhabitant, who shall be over 21 years of age, and shall have paid a tax, shall be considered worth fifty pounds, and entitled to vote.

The judges are appointed by the legislature, those of the supreme court for a term of seven years, and those of the inferior courts for five years; and both are capable of a reappointment. The governor and council form a court of appeals, in the last resort, in causes involving questions of law, and they possess the power of pardoning criminals under sentence.

This state has executed some important works of internal improvement. The Morris canal was incorporated in 1824, and completed in 1836, and cost about $2,500,000. It extends from Easton, on the Delaware, to Jersey City, 101 miles. A large amount of coal, from the coal region of Pennsylvania, is transported on it. It has recently been widened at a great expense. The Delaware and Raritan canal extends from New Brunswick, on the Raritan, to Bordentown, on the Delaware, below Trenton, and is 43 miles in length. It forms part of an important communication between the cities of New York and Philadelphia. Salem canal extends from Salem creek, 4 miles, to Delaware river.

The railroads of this state are more important, even, than her canals. The Camden and Amboy railroad was incorporated in 1829, and completed in 1832, extending from Camden, on the Delaware, opposite to Philadelphia, to South Amboy, at the mouth of the Raritan, 61 miles. The New Jersey railroad was incorporated in 1832, and opened in 1836, extending from Jersey City, through Newark, New Brunswick, and Trenton, to Bordentown, where it forms a junction with the Camden and Amboy road. The Paterson railroad was incorporated in 1831, and completed in 1834, and branches off from the New Jersey railroad at Bergen Hill, and extends 15 miles, to Paterson. The Morris and Essex railroad extends from Newark to Morristown, 20 miles. The Elizabethport and Somerville railroad communicates between the two places, 25 miles. The Camden and Woodbury railroad extends from the one place to the other, 9 miles.

The first settlement of New Jersey was by the Dutch from New York, who, between 1614 and 1620, established themselves in Bergen county. In 1627 a colony of Swedes and Finns settled on the Delaware, and purchased of the Indians the land on both sides of the river to the falls. In 1634, Charles II. granted New York, called by the Dutch New Netherlands, to his brother, the Duke of York, and this grant included New Jersey; and in 1664, the Duke granted the part now called New Jersey, jointly to Lord Berkley and Sir George Carteret, who, in 1695, established a government by agreement with the people, and appointed Philip Carteret, Esq., governor. The Dutch subdued the country in 1673, but resigned it in 1674. To obviate any difficulties about title resulting from these transactions, a new patent was issued in 1674, re-granting the country to the Duke of York, and New Jersey was divided into West Jersey, assigned to the heirs of Lord Berkley, and East Jersey, to Sir George Carteret. In 1675 it was purchased by a company of English emigrants, who formed the first English settlement at Salem. At length great confusion in regard to title having sprung up, which rendered the appointment of governors difficult, the proprietors, in 1702, surrendered the government to the crown, which was accepted by Queen Anne, and the government henceforth, instead of being proprietary, became royal, and so continued until the revolution in 1776. During the revolutionary war, several important battles were fought in this state, the inhabitants of which bore their full share of its toils, its dangers, and its sufferings. On the 19th of December, 1787, this state in convention adopted the constitution of the United States by an unanimous vote.

NEW LONDON, county, Ct. Situated in the s. e. part of the state, and contains 600 sq. ms. The surface is hilly; soil, fertile, adapted to grazing, and to some kinds of grain. Long Island sound bounds it on the s., on which are a number of excellent harbors. Watered by Thames r., formed by the junction of Shetucket and Yantic rivers, which afford excellent water power. Quinnebaug r. is a principal branch of Shetucket r. Pawcatuck r. bounds it on the s. e., and Connecticut r. on the s. w. Capitals, New London and Norwich. There were in 1840, neat cattle 27,441, sheep 62,395, swine 14,256; wheat 10,138 bush. produced, rye 37,533, Ind. corn 186,587, buckwheat 16,966, barley 31,875, oats 122,355, potatoes 394,301; 1 communion house in foreign trade, cap. $20,000; 247 stores, cap. $770,450; 11 lumber yards, cap. $76,500; cap. invested in fisheries $1,190,000; 24 fulling m., 23 woollen fac., 16 cotton fac. 29,013 sp., 20 tanneries, 2 potteries, 7 rope fac., 57 grist m., 64 saw m., 3 oil m., 5 paper fac., 4 printing offices, 3 binderies, 3 weekly newspapers. Cap. in manufac. $1,661,725. 17 acad. 747 students, 231 sch. 10,790 scholars. Pop. 44,463.

NEW LONDON, p-t., Merrimac co., N. H., 30 n. w. Concord, 484 W. Sunapee lake lies on its s. w. border. A large pond in its w. part discharges its waters into Sunapee lake. Two other ponds form the sources of Blackwater r. and Warner r. The surface is rolling, and the soil fertile. Incorporated in 1779. It has 2 stores, cap. $4,500; 1 fulling m., 1 tannery, 2 grist m., 3 saw m. Cap. in manufac. $14,675. 1 acad. 132 students, 8 sch. 322 scholars. Pop. 1,019.

NEW LONDON, city, port of entry, and semi-capital of New London co., Ct. It is situated on the Thames, 3 miles from its entrance into Long Island sound, and is in 41° 24' n. lat. and 72° 30' w. lon. from Greenwich, and 4° 0' 43" e. lon. from W. It is 44 s. e. from Hartford, 52 e. from New Haven, 55 s. w. from Providence, and 353 from W. The population in 1810 was 3,233; in 1820, 3,330; in 1830, 4,356; in 1840, 5,519.

It is built on a declivity, which descends to the e. and s. Back of the city the ground rises to a considerable height, and from its summit presents a fine view of the harbor and the surrounding country. The ground being rough, and over-spread with granite rocks, rendered it difficult to lay it out with much regularity; and it was not attempted. It is not in general very well built; but there are some houses, recently erected, which are neat and elegant.

The county courts are held alternately at this city and at Norwich. It has the usual county buildings. There are 5 places of public worship—2 congregational, 1 Episcopal, 1 Baptist, and 1 Methodist. There are 3 banks, and 2 insurance offices. A daily line of steamboats connects this place with New York, which extends to Norwich, and connects with the railroad to Worcester. There are also several lines of packets.

The harbor is the best in the state, and one of the best in the United States. It has a depth of 30 feet, and is spacious and safe. It is defended by two forts. Fort Trumbull is situated on a projecting point, about a mile below the city, and is generally garrisoned by soldiers of the U. States army. The other fortification is Fort Griswold, on an eminence on the opposite side of the river, in Groton. There is a light-house on a projecting point of land which divides the harbor from Long Island sound, 3 miles below the city. The harbor is rarely obstructed at all by ice.

New London has not an extensive back country, the trade of which naturally flows to it; but it serves in some measure as a port to Connecticut river, which is not generally navigable to vessels of the largest class, nor at all, a portion of the year. The foreign trade of New London is chiefly with the West Indies, and its coasting trade with the Southern States. The fisheries, and particularly the whale fishery, have extensively engaged the attention and employed the capital and enterprise of its inhabitants. About $1,000,000 is devoted to the prosecution of this business. The tonnage of the port in 1840, was 44,832. There were in 1840, 40 retail stores, cap. $220,000; 3 lumber yards, cap. $30,000; capital employed in the fisheries, $830,000; machinery produced, $30,000; hardware and cutlery $61,000; 1 tannery, capital, $3,000; 3 rope works, capital $10,000; 1 printing office, 1 bindery, 1 weekly paper. Total cap. in manufac. $91,300. 4 acad. 131 students, 14 sch. 787 scholars.

New London was first settled in 1646. The township is the smallest in the state, being only four miles in length, with an average breadth of three fourths of a mile. In September, 1781, a large portion of the place was burned by the British, under the traitor Benedict Arnold, and Fort Griswold, in Groton, was captured, and a large part of the garrison were put to the sword. A granite monument erected on the spot, 150 feet high, commemorates the event, and on it are inscribed the names of those who fell.

NEW ORLEANS, city, port of entry, and capital of Louisiana, in the parish of Orleans, is the fourth city in population, and the third in commerce, in the United States. It is on the left bank of Mississippi r., which has here a singular curve which places the city on its n. w. side, and facing to the s. e. It is 105 ms. from its mouth, by the course of the river, but only 90 in a direct line—1,134 from St. Louis, 1,397 from New York, 1,612 from Boston, and 1,172 from Washington—in 29° 57' n. lat., 90° 6' w. lon. from Greenwich, and 13° 5' w. lon. from W. The population in 1810, was 17,242; in 1820, 27,176; in 1830, 46,310; in 1840, 102,192—of whom 23,448 were slaves. Employed in agriculture, 1,430; in commerce, 7,392; in manufactures and trades, 4,593; navigating the ocean, 1,915; do. rivers and canals, 285; learned professions, 438.

The old city proper is in the form of a parallelogram, of which the longer sides are 1,390 yds. long, and the shorter, toward the swamp in the rear, 700 yds. Above the city are the suburbs of St. Mary and Annunciation, and below are the suburbs of Marigny, Franklin, and Washington. These are called Faubourgs. Between the city and the bayou St. Johns, are the villages of St. Claude and St. Johnsburg. The old city proper was laid out by the French, and now forms not more than one eighth of the city limits, and not more than one third of its thickly settled parts. In 1836, the legislature passed an act, dividing the city into 3 municipalities, ranking them according to their population. The 1st includes the city proper, extending with that width from the river back to Lake Pontchartrain, and occupying the centre; the 2d adjoining it above, and the 3d below, both extending from the river to the lake. Each municipality has a distinct council for the management of its internal affairs, which do not encroach on the general government.

The situation of New Orleans for commerce is very commanding. The length of the Mississippi r., and its connected waters, which are navigated by steam, is not less than 20,000 miles, and the country which they drain is not surpassed in fertility by any on the globe. Its advantages for communication with the country in its immediate vicinity are also great. By a canal, 4½ ms. long, it communicates with Lake Pontchartrain, and its connected ports. This canal cost $1,000,000. There is also a canal, 1½ m. long, which communicates with Lake Pontchartrain through bayou St. John. A railroad, 4½ ms. long, connects it with Carrollton. A railroad, 4½ ms. long, connects the city with Lake Pontchartrain, 1 m. e. of bayou St. John. The Mexican Gulf railroad extends 24 ms., to Lake Borgne, and is to be continued to the gulf, at the South Pass. The Mississippi, opposite to the city, is half a mile wide and from 100 to 160 feet deep, and continues of this depth to near its entrance into the ocean, where are bars, with from 13½ to 16 feet of water. The level of the city is from 3 to 9 feet below the level of the river, at the highest water. To protect it from inundation, an embankment, called the Levee, is raised on its border, from 4 to 10 feet high, and generally from 30 to 40 feet broad; but in front of the 2d municipality, by the annual deposits made by the river, and the filling up by the corporation, it is extended to 500 or 600 feet broad. This forms a splendid promenade, and a very convenient place for depositing the cotton and other produce from the upper country, which can be rolled directly from the decks of the steamers to the bank of the r. The levee extends from 43 ms. below the city to 120 above it. The harbor presents an area of many acres, covered with flat-boats, and keel-boats, in its upper parts. Sloops, schooners, and brigs, are arranged along its wharves, and present a forest of masts; and steamboats are continually arriving or departing. The amount of domestic articles exported exceeds $12,000,000 annually, being greater than those of any other city in the Union, excepting New York. The houses of the city proper have a French and Spanish aspect, are generally stuccoed, and are of a white or yellow color. A basement story, about 6 feet high, forms the only cellar, as none are sunk beneath the surface of the ground. The city proper and the Faubourg St. Mary, are compactly and substantially built. The buildings in the Faubourg St. Mary and many other parts of the city, are mostly of brick, and resemble those of other cities of the United States. The city proper contains 66 complete squares; each square having a front of 319 feet in length. Few of the streets, excepting Canal-street, are more than 40 feet wide. Many of the seats in the suburbs are surrounded with spacious gardens, splendidly ornamented with orange, lemon, magnolia, and other trees. No city in the United States has so great a variety of inhabitants, with such an astonishing contrast of manners, language, and complexion. The French population probably still predominates over the American, though the latter is continually gaining ground. The water generally used in the city is rain water, contained in cisterns holding from 20 to 50 hogsheads each. The Commercial Bank water works, which cost $455,000, raise the water 20 or 30 feet above the city, and distribute it by pipes, having an aggregate length of 12 ms. The city water works have a pipe 1 m. long, to furnish running water, in hot weather, through the gutters of the city, which cost $110,000. A draining company, with a capital of $640,000, has 2 steam engines for draining the marshes between the city and Lake Pontchartrain, of 35 sq. ms. in extent. The land is thus made valuable, and the health of the city improved—although it is still unhealthy, from July to the middle of October. The city contains a state house, custom house, 3 exchanges, a U. S. mint, a U. S. land office; 5 banks, with a capital of more than $10,000,000; a large and splendid Roman Catholic cathedral, 90 by 120 feet, with 4 towers; the Ursuline convent, 3 theatres, the College of Orleans, a charity hospital, which has received 900 patients in a year; 3 other hospitals, an orphan asylum, and various other charitable institutions. There are 2 large, and several smaller cotton presses, of great importance to the business of the city. There are fewer churches than in any other city in the Union in proportion to its size. The Roman Catholics have 3, the Episcopalians 2, the Presbyterians, Baptists, and Methodists, 1 each, and there is a mariners' church.

There were in 1840, 8 commercial and 375 commission houses, with a cap. of $16,490,000; 1,881 retail stores, cap. $11,018,225; 32 lumber yards, cap. $67,800; 6 furnaces, cap. $355,000; hardware manufactured to the amount of $30,000; 1 cotton fac. 700 sp., cap. $20,000; tobacco manufactures, cap. $60,000; 1 tannery, cap. $50,000; 2 distilleries, cap. $56,000; 3 sugar refineries, value produced $700,000; 3 steam saw m., cap. $175,000; 18 printing offices, 5 binderies, 9 daily, 6 weekly, and 2 semi-weekly newspapers, with a cap. of $162,200; 201 brick and stone, and 210 wooden houses built, cost $2,234,300. Cap. in manufac. $1,774,200. 2 colleges, 105 students, 10 acad. 440 students, 25 sch. 975 scholars.

The city was founded by the French in 1717. In 1762 it was conveyed to the Spanish, who in 1800 reconveyed it to the French; and in 1803 it was purchased by the United States, in the purchase of Louisiana. On January 8th, 1815, the British, under Gen. Packenham, made an attack on the city, approaching it through Lake Borgne; but they were signally defeated by the Americans, under Gen. Jackson. The British lost, in killed and wounded, was 3,000 men, and Gen. Packenham was killed; the Americans lost only 7 men killed and 6 wounded.

NEW OXFORD, p.-v., Berwick t., Adams co., Pa., 33 s. by w. Harrisburg, 85 W. It contains 1 church, 2 stores, and about 45 dwellings.

NEW PALTZ, p.-t., Ulster co., N. Y., 74 s. by w. Albany, 306 W. The surface is hilly on the w., covered in part by Shawangunk mountain; soil, mostly calcareous loam, and generally productive. Bounded on the e. by Hudson r. Watered by Wallkill r. The inhabitants are mostly of Dutch descent. The v. is situated on the Wallkill, 9 ms. w. of the landing, on the Hudson, and contains 2 churches, 4 stores, 1 grist m., 1 tannery, 40 dwellings, and about 250 inhabitants. There are in the t. 7 stores, cap. $19,000; 3 fulling m., 1 woollen fac., 2 tanneries, 3 grist m., 4 saw m. Cap. in manufac. $17,900; 1 acad. 35 students, 26 sch. 1,109 scholars. Pop. 5,408.

NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, the most northern of the middle United States, and the most populous state in the Union, is bounded n. by Lake Ontario, the river St. Lawrence, and Lower Canada; e. by Vermont, Massachusetts, and Connecticut; s. by the Atlantic, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania; and w. by Pennsylvania, Lake Erie, and Niagara river. It lies between 39° 45' and 45° n. lat., and between 73° and 79° 55' w. lon., and between 2° 51' w., and 5° e. long. from W. It is about 316 miles long, and 314 broad; containing 46,000 square miles, or 11,040,000 acres. The population in 1790, was 340,120; in 1800, 586,050; in 1810, 959,049; in 1820, 1,372,812; in 1830, 1,913,508; in 1840, 2,428,921. Of these, 853,989 were white males, 816,276 do. females; 6,428 free colored males, 6,428 do. females. Employed in mining, 1,898; in agriculture, 455,954; in commerce, 28,468; manufactures and trades, 173,193; navigating the ocean, 5,511; do. lakes and canals, 10,167; learned professions, 14,111.

This state is divided into 58 counties, which, with their population in 1840, and their capitals, are as follows: ALBANY, 63,593, Albany; ALLEGHANY, 40,975, Angelica; BROOME, 22,338, Binghamton; CATTARAUGUS, 28,872, Ellicottsville; CAYUGA, 50,336, Auburn; CHAUTAUGUE, 47,975, Mayville; CHEMUNG, 20,732, Elmira; CHENANGO, 40,765, Norwich; CLINTON, 22,157, Plattsburgh; CORTLAND, 24,607, Cortlandville; DELAWARE, 35,396, Delhi; ERIE, 62,465, Buffalo; ESSEX, 23,634, Elizabethtown; FRANKLIN, 16,518, Malone; FULTON, 18,049, Johnstown; GENESEE, 59,267, Batavia; HAMILTON, 1,907, Lake Pleasant; HERKIMER, 37,477, Herkimer; JEFFERSON, 60,984,

Watertown; LEWIS, 17,830, Martinsburg; LIVINGSTON, 35,140, Genesee; MADISON, 40,003, Morrisville; MONROE, 64,902, ROCHESTER; MONTGOMERY, 35,818, Canajoharie; NIAGARA, 31,132, Lockport; ONEIDA, 85,310, Utica, Rome, Whitestown; ONONDAGA, 67,911, Syracuse; ONTARIO, 43,501, Canandaigua; ORLEANS, 25,127, Albion; OSWEGO, 43,619, Oswego, Pulaski; OTSEGO, 49,628, Cooperstown; RENSELLAER, 60,895, Troy; SARATOGA, 40,553, Ballston; SCHENECTADY, 17,387, Schenectady; SCHOHARIE, 32,358, Schoharie; SENECA, 24,874, Ovid, Waterloo; ST. LAWRENCE, 56,706, Canton; STEUBEN, 46,138, Bath; TIOGA, 20,527, Owego; TOMPKINS, 37,948, Ithaca; WARREN, 13,422, Caldwell; WASHINGTON, 41,080, Salem, Sandy Hill; WAYNE, 42,057, Lyons; YATES, 20,444, Penn Yan; COLUMBIA, 43,252, Hudson; DUTCHESS, 52,398, Poughkeepsie; GREENE, 30,446, Catskill; KINGS, 47,613, Brooklyn; NEW YORK, 312,710, New York; ORANGE, 50,739, Goshen, Newburg; PUTNAM, 12,825, Carmel; QUEENS, 30,324, North Hempstead; RICHMOND, 10,965, Richmond; ROCKLAND, 11,975, Clarkstown; SUFFOLK, 32,469, Riverhead; SULLIVAN, 15,629, Monticello; ULSTER, 45,822, Kingston; WESTCHESTER, 48,656, Bedford, White Plains. These counties are divided into 807 townships, including 9 cities, and 125 incorporated villages.

The capital of the state is Albany, on the w. bank of the Hudson r., 145 ms. n. of New York.

This state has a great variety of surface. Two chains of highlands, rising in some parts to mountains, pass along the eastern part of the state, and may be regarded as a continuation of the eastern chain of the Alleghenias. One of these, coming from New Jersey, crosses the Hudson near West Point, constituting what are called the Highlands, and passing northward, separates the waters which fall into the Hudson from those which fall into Long Island sound. The other, and principal range, comes from Pennsylvania, and forms the Catskill mountains, and proceeding n. crosses the Mohawk, and forms, in the n. e. part of the state, opposite to Lake Champlain, some high summits called the Adirondack mountains. The highest peak of the Catskill mountains is Round Top, 2,804 feet high. Fine Orchard, 2,274 ft. high, back of Catskill, has a fine hotel, which is much frequented in the summer season, and which embraces a prospect 70 miles in extent, including the Hudson river, whitened with sails, and skirted in the distance by the lofty Green mountains. The highest summits west of Lake Champlain, are Whiteface, about 5,000, and Mount Marcy, 5,460 feet high. The country in the eastern part of the state is generally hilly, where it is not mountainous. In the western part of the state it is level, excepting in the s. toward the Pennsylvania line, where it becomes uneven and rough. The soil is generally good, and in some parts exceedingly fertile. The eastern part is best adapted to grazing, and the western to grain. Wheat, Indian corn, grass, rye, barley, oats, buckwheat, and potatoes are raised in great quantities. Beef and pork, butter and cheese, horses and cattle, pot and pearl ashes, flax seed, peas, beans, and lumber, form extensive articles of export. Apples, pears, plums, and peaches, succeed well in different parts of the state. In this state there were in 1840, 474,543 horses and mules; 1,911,244 neat cattle; 5,118,777 sheep; 1,900,065 swine; poultry to the value of $1,153,413. There were produced 12,286,418 bushels of wheat; 2,520,060 of barley; 20,675,847 of oats; 2,979,323 of rye; 2,287,885 of buckwheat; 10,972,286 of Indian corn; 9,845,295 pounds of wool; 447,250 of hops; 30,122,614 bushels of potatoes; 3,127,047 tons of hay; 1,735 pounds of silk cocoons; 10,048,109 pounds of sugar. The products of the dairy amounted to $10,496,021; and of the orchard to $1,701,935; of lumber to $3,891,302. There were produced 6,799 gallons of wine; and of pot and pearl ashes 7,613 tons; tar, pitch, turpentine, &c., 403 barrels.

The climate of New York is various. The winters on the seacoast are mild, but changeable. In the n. e. part they are severe, but more uniform. In the extensive level country w. of the mountains, the climate is more mild than in the same latitude in the e.

The principal rivers are the Hudson, 324 miles long, navigable for sloops 156 miles to Troy, and enters into New York bay, and thence into the Atlantic; the Mohawk, 135 miles long, which enters the Hudson a little above Troy; the Genesee, 125 miles long, and enters Lake Ontario, having at Rochester, 5 miles from its mouth, two falls of 96 and 75 feet, furnishing many of the finest mill seats; Black river, which rises near the sources of the Hudson, and flows 120 miles into Lake Ontario; the Saranac, 65 miles long, enters Lake Champlain at Plattsburgh; the Oswegatchie flows 100 miles, into the St. Lawrence; the Oswego proceeds 40 miles, from Oneida lake into Lake Ontario; the Au Sable rises in the Adirondack mts., and after a course of 75 miles enters Lake Champlain. The majestic St. Lawrence forms a part of the northern boundary of the state. The head branches of the Susquehanna, the Alleghany, and the Delaware, rise in this state.

The state has a considerable number of lakes which lie wholly within it, besides Lake Ontario on the n., and Champlain on the e., which are but partly within it. Besides these, Lake George in the n. e., 33 ms. long and 2 broad, is a beautiful sheet of water, surrounded by the most picturesque scenery, and has an outlet into Lake Champlain. In the western part of the state are Oneida lake, 20 ms. long and 3½ wide; Skeneateles lake, 15 ms. long and 1 to 1½ broad; Owego lake, 11 ms. long and 1 to 2 broad; Cayuga lake, 38 ms. long and 1 to 4 broad; Seneca lake, 35 ms. long and 2 to 4 broad; Crooked lake, 18 ms. long and 1 to 1½ broad; Canandaigua lake, 14 ms.

long and 1 broad. These lakes all discharge their waters into Lake Ontario. In the extreme w. part of the state is Chautauque lake, 18 ms. long and 1 to 3 broad; situated near Lake Erie, but discharging its waters s. into the Alleghany river.

The islands of New York are—Long Island, 120 miles long from w. to e., and about 10 miles as its average breadth. It contains Kings, Queens, and Suffolk counties. Within the bays, at its e. part, are Fisher's Island, Shelter Island, Robins's Island, and some others. Staten Island, s. w. of the harbor of New York, is 18 miles long and 8 wide, and constitutes the county of Richmond. Manhattan Island, on which the City of New York stands, is 15 miles long, and about 1½ wide at an average breadth, and contains the county of New York. Grand Island, in Niagara river, is 12 miles long, and from 2 to 7 wide, and extends to within 1½ miles of the falls.

The harbor of New York city is one of the finest in the United States, and is on New York bay, which extends 8 miles above the Narrows, and is about 25 miles in circumference. It is safe, spacious, and accessible at all seasons of the year. On the bar, at Sandy Hook, it has a depth of from 21 to 27 feet, and is deeper above. The Hudson is navigable for large ships, about 130 miles to Hudson. Sag Harbor on the e., and Brooklyn on the w. end of Long Island, have good harbors. Sacketts Harbor has a good natural, and Oswego a good artificial harbor on Lake Ontario. Buffalo and Dunkirk are harbors on Lake Erie.

NEW YORK is the chief commercial city of the state, and of the United States. Situated on an island of the same name, it has a harbor on three sides; and its facilities for commerce with all parts of the country and of the world, are unrivalled; and in the amount of its shipping, it is second only to London. Brooklyn, on Long Island, opposite New York, must be regarded as an appendage of the great city, though it has become itself a large city, being the second in population in the state, and the seventh in the Union. Albany, Rochester, Troy, Buffalo, and Utica, are large and flourishing cities. Poughkeepsie, Newburgh, Hudson, Catskill, and Lansingburgh, on the Hudson; Schenectady, on the Mohawk; Geneva, Syracuse, Auburn, Lockport, and Ithaca, in the w., and Plattsburgh in the e., are large and flourishing places.

The commerce of New York greatly surpasses that of every other state in the Union. The exports in 1840, were $34,364,080; and the imports were $60,440,750.

In the year 1840, there were 469 commercial and 1,044 commission houses engaged in foreign trade, with a capital of $49,583,001; 12,207 retail drygoods and other stores, with a capital of $42,135,795; 9,592 persons engaged in the lumber trade, with a capital of $2,694,170; 7,593 persons engaged in internal transportation, and 804 butchers, packers, &c., the whole employing a capital of $2,833,916; the fisheries employed 1,238 persons; and a capital of $949,250.

The manufactures of New York are also extensive. Home-made or family goods were produced amounting to $4,636,547; 393 woollen manufactories, with 890 fulling mills, employing 4,636 persons, produced articles to the amount of $3,537,337, and employed a capital of $3,469,349; 117 cotton manufactories, with 211,659 spindles, employed 7,407 persons, and a capital of $4,900,773; 332 persons produced 2,867,884 bushels of salt, employing a capital of $5,601,000; 186 furnaces produced 29,088 tons of cast iron, and 120 forges, &c., produced 53,693 tons of bar iron, consumed 123,677 tons of fuel, employed 3,456 persons, and a capital of $2,103,418; 9 smelting houses produced 670,000 pounds of lead, employing 333 persons, and a capital of $231,000; 77 paper mills produced articles to the amount of $673,121, and other paper manufactories produced $69,637, the whole employing 749 persons, and a capital of $703,550; hats and caps were manufactured to the amount of $2,914,117, and straw bonnets to the amount of $160,248, the whole employing 3,880 persons, and a capital of $1,676,559; 1,216 tanneries employed 5,579 persons, and a capital of $3,907,348; other leather manufactories, as saddleries, &c., produced articles to the value of $6,232,924, and employed a capital of $2,743,765; 13 glass houses and 11 glass cutting establishments, employed 498 persons, produced articles to the amount of $411,371, and employed a capital of $204,700; 47 potteries employed 197 persons, producing articles to the amount of $159,292, and employed a capital of $38,450; machinery was produced to the amount of $2,895,517, employing 3,631 persons; hardware and cutlery employed 962 persons, and produced articles to the value of $1,566,974; 112 cannon and 8,308 small-arms were manufactured by 203 persons, to the value of $1,106,203; 1,713 persons manufactured the precious metals to the amount of $1,106,203; 1,447 persons manufactured granite and marble to the amount of $906,230; 489 persons manufactured 11,939,834 pounds of soap, 4,029,783 pounds of tallow candles, and 533,000 pounds of spermaceti candles, with a capital of $618,875; 669 persons manufactured tobacco to the amount of $331,570, with a capital of $395,530; 212 distilleries produced 11,973,815 gallons, and 83 breweries produced 6,059,122 gallons, the whole employing 1,486 persons, and a capital of $3,107,066; 4,710 persons manufactured carriages and wagons to the amount of $2,364,461, with a capital of $1,485,023; 338 flouring mills manufactured 1,961,365 barrels of flour, and with other mills produced articles to the amount of 16,953,280, employing 10,807 persons, and a capital of $14,648,814; ships were built to the amount of $797,317; furniture was manufactured to the amount of $1,971,776, employing 3,660 persons, and a capital of $1,610,810; 3,160 persons produced bricks and lime to the amount of $1,198,527; 1,233 brick and 5,198 wooden houses were built by 16,768 persons, and cost $7,265,844; 321 printing offices, and 107 binderies, 34 daily, 13 semi-weekly or tri-weekly, and 193 weekly newspapers, and 57 periodicals, employed 3,231 persons, and a capital of $1,876,540. The whole amount of capital employed in manufactures in 1840, was $55,252,779.

This state has a number of respectable literary institutions. Columbia College (formerly King's) was founded in New York in 1754, and is conducted by the Episcopalians; Union College, at Schenectady, was founded in 1795; Hamilton College, in Clinton, was founded in 1812; Geneva College, conducted by the Episcopalians, was founded in Geneva, in 1823; the University of the City of New York, was founded in 1831. The Hamilton Literary and Theological Seminary was founded in Hamilton, by the Baptists, in 1819. The Theological Institute of the Episcopal Church, was founded by the Episcopalians, in New York, in 1819; the New York Theological Seminary, connected with the University, was founded by the Presbyterians, in 1836; the Theological Seminary, at Auburn, was founded by the Presbyterians, in 1821; the Hartwick Seminary, at Hartwick, in Otsego county, was founded by the Lutherans, in 1816; the Theological Seminary of the Associate Reformed Church was founded at Newburg, in 1835; the College of Physicians and Surgeons in the city of New York, was founded in 1807; the Albany Medical College, was founded in 1839. All these institutions had in 1840, 1,285 students; besides, there were in the state, 505 academies, with 34,715 students, and 10,593 common and primary schools, with 502,367 scholars, and 44,458 persons over 20 years of age who could neither read nor write.

Of the religious denominations in 1838, the Presbyterians and Congregationalists had 564 ministers, and 86,000 communicants; the Baptists had 483 ministers, and 67,183 communicants; the Methodists had 591 ministers, and 30,700 communicants; the Dutch Reformed, 142 ministers, and 15,800 communicants; the Episcopalians had 207 ministers, and about 10,000 communicants; the Associate Reformed had 30 ministers; the Lutherans 27; the Roman Catholics 32; the Universalists 25; the Unitarians 8; besides a few others.

There were in the state Jan. 1st, 1840, 96 banks, with an aggregate capital of $36,801,460, and a circulation of $10,630,514. A number of these banks have recently been discontinued. At the close of 1840, the state debt amounted to $20,165,254.

The state has 2 penitentiaries; one at Sing Sing, on the Hudson river, and the other at Auburn; the latter is regarded as a model for such institutions.

The present constitution of the state government was adopted in 1821. The legislature consists of a senate composed of 32 members, elected by the people, one fourth of whom are renewed every year; and an assembly, of 128 members, chosen annually, by a universal suffrage of all male citizens over 21 years of age, except colored persons, who must have a freehold worth $250. The governor and lieutenant-governor are chosen for two years, by the people, by a plurality of votes.

The chancellor and judges of the supreme court are chosen by the governor and senate, and hold their offices during good behavior, or until they are 60 years of age.

New York has taken the lead of her sister states in the great works of internal improvement; and her example and success have stimulated the other states to undertake their great works. The Erie canal was commenced in July, 1817, and completed in 1825. It extends from Albany to Buffalo, 363 miles, and cost originally $7,143,789. This sum will be more than doubled by the present widening of it. The Champlain canal, from Albany to Whitehall, 79 miles, was carried on simultaneously, and cost $1,257,604. The Oswego canal, from Syracuse to Oswego, 38 miles, was completed in 1828, at a cost of $565,437. The Cayuga and Seneca canal, from Montezuma to Geneva, 21 miles, was completed in 1828, at a cost of $236,804. The Chemung canal, extends from Elmira to Seneca lake, including a feeder to Painted Post, 39 miles, and cost $331,693. The Crooked Lake canal extends from Crooked lake to Seneca lake, 8 miles, and cost $156,776. Chenango canal extends from Binghamton to Utica, 97 miles, and cost $2,270,605. The above are all branches of the great Erie canal, and their united length is 655 miles; and the cost of the whole $11,968,711. The Black River canal extends from the Erie canal, at Rome, to the foot of the high falls in Leyden, on Black river, 35 miles, with a navigable feeder of 11 miles; the cost, including the improvement of the navigation of the river, 40 miles, to Carthage, $1,068,437. The Genesee and Alleghany canal extends from Rochester to Olean, on the Alleghany, 107 miles, with a branch of 15 miles, estimated to cost $2,002,285. The Delaware and Hudson canal commences at Eddyville, on the Rondout creek, near the Hudson, and reaches to Honesdale, on the Lackawaxen river, passing to, and through Delaware river, 109 miles, and cost $2,331,380.

Many railroads have been projected in the state, and the following have been completed. The Harlem railroad extends from New York to Fordham, 12 miles; the Long Island railroad extends from Brooklyn to Suffolk station, 41 miles, to be continued through the island to Greenport; the Hudson and Berkshire railroad extends from Hudson to West Stockbridge, 33 miles; the Catskill and Canajoharie railroad, to connect the two places, 78 miles, partly completed; the Rensselaer and Saratoga railroad extends from Troy to Ballston, 23 miles; the Mohawk and Hudson railroad connects Albany and Schenectady, 16 miles; the Saratoga and Schenectady, 21½ miles, connects the two places; the Utica and Schenectady connects these places, 77 miles; the Syracuse and Utica continues this road 53 miles w., to Syracuse; the Syracuse and Auburn railroad continues this road to Auburn, 26 miles; the Auburn and Rochester railroad continues it 80 miles w., to Rochester. The Towanda railroad connects Rochester and Attica, 45 miles, and is now being continued to Buffalo. Buffalo and Niagara Falls railroad connects the two places, 23 miles. Lockport and Niagara Falls railroad connects these places, 20 miles. Ithaca and Owego railroad joins the two places, 20 miles; the Rochester railroad extends from Rochester to Port Genesee, 3 miles; Bath railroad extends from Bath to Crooked lake, 5 miles; Port Kent and Keesville railroad connects the two places, 4½ miles. The New York and Erie railroad is one of the greatest undertakings of the kind in the world. It commences at Piermont, 22 miles above New York, on the Hudson, and is to extend through the southern counties of the state, 350 miles, to Dunkirk, on Lake Erie. The estimated cost of the work is $5,473,000. This road is completed and in operation to Goshen, 45 miles from Piermont, and other sections of it are completed or in great progress.

Hudson river and the island of Manhattan, now New York, were discovered by Henry Hudson, an Englishman, in the service of the Dutch. The first permanent settlement was made by the Dutch, on Manhattan island, in 1614. In 1664, the English, under Richard Nichols, took the country for the Duke of York; and by the peace of Breda, in 1667, the Dutch confirmed the colony to the English. In 1673, an expedition from Holland took the city of New York, and soon after the whole colony submitted. The following year the country was restored by the treaty of Westminster, and the Duke of York took out a new patent. The first legislative assembly of the province met in October, 1683. In 1693, Episcopacy was made the established religion of the province. The inhabitants of New York bore an important part in the French war, and in the war of the revolution. In September, 1776, the British captured and occupied New York, and held possession of it until the peace, in 1783. On the 26th of July, 1788, this state, in convention, adopted the constitution of the United States—yeas 30; nays 25; majority, 5.

NEW YORK, city, the principal city of the state of New York, and in population, commerce, and wealth, the largest city of the United States, is situated on the s. end of New York or Manhattan island, at the confluence of the Hudson or North river, and a strait called the East river, which connects Long Island sound with the harbor of New York. The City Hall is in 40° 42' 40" n. lat., and 71° 1' 8" w. lon. from Greenwich; and 2° 54' e. lon. from Washington. It is 90 m. n. e. from Philadelphia; 210 s. w. from Boston; 225 n. e. from Washington; 670 n. e. from Charleston, S. C.; 1,397 n. e. from New Orleans; 145 s. from Albany; 372 s. from Montreal. The population in 1790, was 33,131; in 1800, 60,489; in 1810, 96,373; in 1820, 123,706; in 1830, 202,599; in 1840, 312,710. Employed in commerce, 11,365; in manufactures and trades, 43,390; in navigating the ocean, 2,786; do. rivers, lakes, and canals, 716; learned professions and engineers, 2,929.

The city and county have the same limits, comprising the whole island, which extends from the Battery, on the s., 13½ miles, to Kingsbridge, on the n., with an average width of 1 mile and three fifths. The greatest breadth is 2 miles and one eighth, and the area of the whole island about 14,000 acres. It is separated from the main land, in Westchester county, by Harlem river, a strait through which the tide flows. The strait denominated the East river, separates it from Long Island on the e.; on the s. is the bay and harbor; and on the w. is Hudson river, which separates it from New Jersey. Three bridges across Harlem river connect the island with the main land. Several islands in the harbor, and in the East river, are attached to the city.

The harbor of New York is safe and commodious, being about 25 miles in circumference, and vessels of the largest size come up to the wharves at the city. The entrance over the bar at Sandy Hook, has a depth of water from 21 to 27 feet; and thence to the city the channel is from 35 to 50 feet deep. The entrance to the harbor, between Staten Island, on the w., and Long Island, on the e., is called the Narrows, which is about one third of a mile wide, and is well defended by strong fortifications. There are also batteries on Bedlow's and Ellis's islands, further up the harbor. There are strong fortifications for the defence of the city on Governor's island, which contains 70 acres of ground, and is distant 3,300 feet from the city, at the Battery. Castle Williams, on the w. side of the island, is a round tower, 600 feet in circumference, and 60 feet high, with three tiers of guns. Fort Columbus is on the highest point of the island; and on the e. side is a battery to defend the entrance through Buttermilk channel. A considerable United States garrison occupies the island, on which are extensive barracks.

The most elevated ground on the island of New York, is 236 feet above tidewater. The city which is built extends over three miles on each river, and in its compact parts has a circumference of about 9 miles. The streets were originally laid out according to the surface of the ground, and some of them were crooked; and, in imitation of European cities, many of them were narrow. But, in latter times, they have been widened and improved at a great expense; and in the newer parts of the city, comprehending a large part of it, care has been taken to lay out the streets straight, regularly, and of sufficient width. Broadway, 80 feet wide, is the principal thoroughfare, and extends from the Battery, at the s., nearly 3 miles, to Union square, where it joins the Bloomingdale road and the 4th avenue, which extends through the island to Harlem. Broadway is entirely straight through its whole course, and occupies the height of land between the North and East rivers. Greenwich-street, near the North river, commences at the Battery, and runs parallel with the river, through the whole extent of the city. It is wide and handsomely built. Pearl-street, between Broadway and the East river, is in a crescent form, over a mile in length, contains many spacious warehouses, and is the principal seat of the drygoods and hardware business, which has also extended into Cedar and Pine, and other adjacent streets. Front and Water streets, between Pearl-street and the East river, are occupied chiefly by wholesale grocers, commission merchants, and mechanics connected with the shipping business. South-street, extending along the margin of the East river, contains the warehouses and offices of the principal shipping merchants. Wall-street, extending from Broadway to the East river, is occupied by banks, insurance offices, newspaper and brokers' offices—has the Merchants' Exchange, and other fine granite buildings, and is the great centre of the heaviest money transactions in the country. The Bowery is a wide and extensive street to the E. of Broadway, running N. and S., and connected with the Third avenue, which is macadamized to Harlem, and forms the great entrance to the city from the N. E. East Broadway, Henry, and Madison streets, in the N. E., and Bleecker, Bond, and other streets, in the N. part of the city, are beautifully built. Canal-street, much below the centre of population, half a mile N. of the City Hall, is a wide street, with a large canal under it, from which it receives its name, is occupied by stores, and is the seat of an extensive retail trade. It crosses Broadway nearly at right angles, and extends to the North river. In the year 1800, the site of this street was a large pond, extending nearly across the island, and which received the drainage of 400 acres of ground. This was the northern limit of Broadway until 1801, and then far beyond the thickly settled parts of the city.

The principal part of the shipping lies on the East river, and a walk along South-street presents a dense forest of masts. Many vessels lie also in the North river; and there are continually not less probably than from 800 to 1,000 vessels lying at the wharves and in the harbor. New York is the second commercial city in the world, and in its harbor are generally to be found vessels, not only from the principal ports of the United States, but from most of the commercial nations on the globe. Its insular situation gives it a great extent of harbor, and it is rarely obstructed or much incommoded by ice. The tonnage of the port for the year 1840, was 414,817. The amount of imports for the year 1841, was $75,268,015; of exports, was $30,731,519. The amount of duties paid at the port, was $10,802,119. Two lines of steamships connect New York—one with Liverpool, and the other with Southampton, England, and Antwerp, Belgium. Besides these, several lines of packets connect it with London, Liverpool, and Havre. The New York and Liverpool line consists of 20 ships of the first class, with a large capacity for freight, and elegant accommodations for passengers; and one vessel sails from each place every sixth day. The New York and London packets consist of 12 large ships, one of which sails from each place every ten days. One line of the New York and Havre packets consists of 12 ships of the first class, one of which sails from each place every eight days; another line, of 6 ships, sails from each place monthly. Lines are also established to all the important ports on the coast of the United States, and many of them are steamboat lines. There are also lines to some ports in the West Indies, in Mexico, and in South America. The foreign arrivals in New York in 1841, were 2,118; the number of passengers was 57,334. The passengers from domestic ports by sea were 8,920.

The most splendid public building in the city is the Merchants' Exchange, in Wall-street, though its confined situation does not exhibit it to advantage. It covers the whole space between Wall, William, Exchange, and S. William streets—is constructed of blue Quincy granite, and is 200 feet long by 171 and 144 feet wide, and 77 feet high to the top of the cornice, and 124 feet to the top of the dome. The front, on Wall-street, has a recessed portico of 18 massive columns, 38 feet high and 4 feet 4 inches in diameter, each from a solid block of stone, and weighing 43 tons. Besides numerous other rooms, the exchange in the centre is in a circular form, 80 feet in diameter, with 4 recesses, making the whole length and breadth 100 feet, 80 feet high, and surmounted by a dome, resting in part upon 8 Corinthian columns of Italian marble, 41 feet high, and lighted by a sky-light, 25 feet in diameter. The whole cost of this building, including the ground, is estimated at $1,800,000. Not less splendid is the Custom House, built of white marble, of the Doric order, something after the model of the Parthenon, at Athens. It occupies the site of the old city hall, in the open gallery of which Washington was inaugurated as first president of the United States. It is 300 feet long, 90 feet wide, and 80 feet high. Each of the N. and S. fronts has a portico of 8 columns, 5 feet 8 inches in diameter, and 32 feet high. The great business hall is a splendid circular room, of 60 feet in diameter, with recesses and galleries. Exclusive of the ground on which it stands, and of its furniture, it cost $950,000. The entire cost, including the ground, is estimated at $1,175,000. Both the above buildings are entirely incombustible.

The City Hall, heretofore regarded as much the finest building in the city, is more beautifully situated than any other, in the middle of the Park, where it shows to great advantage. It has more ornament than either the exchange or custom house, but less simple grandeur. It is, however, unquestionably one of the finest buildings in the United States. It is 216 feet long and 105 broad, and has the Ionic, Corinthian, and composite orders rising in regular gradation. The front and both ends above the basement are built of white marble; the rear of brown freestone. Rising from the middle of the roof is a handsome cupola, on the top of which is a colossal figure of Justice. There are some splendid rooms in the interior. The edifice cost $538,731. A large brick building in the rear of the city hall, is occupied with various public offices and courts, and by the hall of the American Institute, with its library and models of machinery.

The Hall of Justice occupies the whole space between Leonard, Elm, Franklin, and Centre streets, and is a unique and beautiful building, of the Egyptian order of architecture, constructed of a light-colored granite. It has a court and other rooms; and connected with it, in the rear, is the House of Detention.

The Hall of the University of New York, in the upper part of the city, on Washington square, is a splendid building, of Gothic architecture, 180 feet long by 100 feet wide, so situated as to appear to great advantage. Columbia College is a handsome building, finely situated in the lower part of the city. Trinity Church, on Broadway, fronting Wall-street, will, when completed, be the most complete and splendid Gothic structure in the United States. St. Paul's Episcopal Church, in Broadway, with a steeple 234 feet high; and St. John's Episcopal Church, on St. John's square, with a steeple 240 feet high, possess fine proportions and elegant architecture.

The Dutch Church, on Washington square, is a splendid Gothic building. Many other churches, as the French Protestant Church, in Franklin-street; St. Patrick's Cathedral, in Prince-street; the Society Library, Gothic Hall, and St. Thomas's Episcopal Church, in Broadway, and the Baptist Church, in Broome-street, are imposing buildings.

Among the hotels, several of which are fine buildings, the Astor House, in Broadway, is the most distinguished. It is built of Quincy granite, and contains 390 rooms. It is said by travellers, that there is nothing of the kind, in London or Paris, which equals it.

Among the public places, those most worthy of notice are the Battery, a beautiful public ground, on the s. point of the island, in the form of a crescent, containing 11 acres; the Park, in the centre of the lower part of the city, containing 104 acres, laid out with walks, shaded with trees, and surrounded with a neat iron fence, which cost $15,653. It is ornamented by a large and splendid fountain, supplied by the Croton water. St. John's square, in the w. part of the city, containing 4 acres, beautifully laid out with walks and trees, and surrounded by an elegant iron fence, which cost $26,000; Washington Square, 1½ mile n. of the city hall, containing 9½ acres, which spreads before the New York University; Union Square, with a beautiful elliptical enclosure, at the termination of Broadway on the w., and ornamented by an elegant fountain, supplied by the Croton water. Several other squares exist in the n. part of the city, not yet fully regulated.

A large number of the streets, stores, and other buildings of the city are lighted with gas. The expense of gas and lamps in 1840, was $120,576; of city watch, was $223,950; and of cleaning the streets, $149,931.

The most splendid and expensive public work undertaken by the city, is the Croton water-works. The aqueduct commences at the Croton river, 5 ms. from Hudson r. in Westchester co. The dam is 250 feet long, 70 wide at bottom, and 7 at top, and 40 feet high, built of stone and cement. It creates a pond 5 ms. long, covering 400 acres, and contains 500 millions of gallons of water. From the dam, the aqueduct proceeds, sometimes tunnelling through solid rocks, crossing valleys by embankments, and brooks by culverts, until it reaches Harlem r., a distance of 33 ms. It is built of stone, brick, and cement, arched over and under, 6 feet 9 inches wide at bottom, 7 feet 5 inches at the top of the side-walls, and 8 feet 5 inches high, has a descent of 13½ inches per mile, and will discharge 60 millions of gallons in 24 hours. It will cross Harlem r. on a magnificent bridge of stone, 1,450 feet long, with 14 piers, 8 of 30 feet span, and 7 of 50 feet span, 114 feet from high tidewater to the top, and which will cost $900,000. This bridge is in progress, and for the present the water is brought across the r. in an iron pipe, laid as an inverted syphon. The receiving reservoir is at 86th st., 38 ms. from the Croton dam, and covers 35 acres, and contains 150 millions of gallons. The water is conveyed to the distributing reservoir on Murray's hill, 40th street, in iron pipes. It covers 4 acres, and is built of stone and cement, 43 feet high above the street, and holds 20 millions of gallons. Thence the water is distributed over the city in iron pipes, laid so deep under ground as to be secure from frost. The whole cost of the work will be about $12,000,000. The water is of the finest kind of river water. No city in the world is now more plentifully supplied with pure and wholesome water than the city of N. York; and the supply would be abundant, if the population were five times its present number.

The Harlem railroad extends from the City Hall through Centre-street to Broome-street; turns at right angles to the Bowery, where it turns again nearly at right angles, and follows the Bowery to the 4th Avenue, on which it extends to Harlem, 8 miles; and it is continued several miles further to Fordham. A part of its course is a deep cut through solid rock, with a short tunnel and high embankments. It has a double track the whole length, and is the most expensive railroad, for the distance, in the United States.

There are two colleges in the city. Columbia College, founded in 1750, has a president, 10 professors, about 140 students, and about 14,000 volumes in its libraries. The New York University was founded in 1831, and has a chancellor, and 12 professors, about 125 students, and a valuable library and philosophical apparatus. The General Theological Seminary of the Episcopal Church was established in 1819, has 5 professors, and 75 students, and 7,260 volumes in its library. The New York Theological Seminary was organized in 1836, has three ordinary, and 4 extraordinary professors, 103 students, and a library of 16,000 volumes. The Public School Society had, in May, 1840, 16 schools, with male and female and primary departments; and 46 primary schools, and 22,955 scholars. The Rutgers Female Institute, in Madison-street, is a flourishing institution, with over 450 pupils. The Mechanics' school, in Crosby-street, has 550 pupils. The Protestant Episcopal school is a flourishing institution. The College of Physicians and Surgeons, in the city of New York in Crosby-street, was founded in 1807. The New York Eye Infirmary; the New York Hospital, situated in Broadway, at the head of Pearl street; and the New York Lunatic Asylum, are important institutions; as are the Deaf and Dumb Asylum, near the Harlem railroad, between the 4th and 5th Avenues, with 200 pupils, and the Institution for the Blind on the 8th Avenue, with 70 pupils.

The New York Society Library, in a fine building in Broadway, has 35,000 volumes; the New York Historical Society has 10,000 volumes, with many coins and medals; the Lyceum of Natural History has a library and museum; the National Academy of Design, instituted in 1826, has purchased the statuary of the Academy of Fine Arts, which it will exhibit with its collection of the paintings of living artists; Clinton Hall Association was founded in 1830, for the promotion of literature, science, and the arts; the Mercantile Library Association, for the special benefit of merchants' clerks, has a library of about 23,000 volumes, and an annual course of lectures through the winter; the Apprentices' Library, founded in 1820, has 12,000 volumes, read by 1,300 apprentices; the American Institute, incorporated in 1833, holds a splendid annual fair, and distributes premiums. The New York Lyceum, founded in 1833, has a respectable library and reading room, and sustains in the winter season a very able course of lectures.

The American Bible Society, instituted in 1816, received for the year ending May 13th, 1841, $118,860; the American Tract Society, founded in 1816, received $93,962. These societies have each a large building in Nassau-street. The Home Missionary Society received $85,413; the American Board of Commissioners received $235,189; the American and Foreign Bible Society (Baptist) received $26,001; the Baptist Home Missionary Society received $10,779. Most of these societies hold an anniversary in N. York in May. The Methodists have a large and extensive book-concern. There are many other religious and benevolent societies.

There are 168 churches in the city of New York, viz: 13 Dutch Reformed, 2 German Reformed, 27 Episcopal, 24 Presbyterian, 3 Congregational, 3 Reformed Presbyterian, 4 Associate Reformed, 3 Associate churches, 18 Baptist, 1 Welch Baptist, 17 Methodist Episcopal, 1 Ind. Methodist, 3 Associate Protestant Methodist, 2 Primitive Methodist, 1 Calvinistic Methodist, 1 German Methodist, 3 Lutheran, 1 Moravian, 4 Friends, 3 Universalist, 2 Unitarian, 1 Mariners, 11 Roman Catholic, 7 Jews' Synagogues, 2 New Jerusalem, 1 Christian, 1 Providence Chapel, 1 Congregation of Disciples, 1 Congregation of Primitive Christians, 1 Mormon or Latter-Day Saints, and 9 African, viz. 1 Episcopal, 2 Baptist, 2 Presbyterian, and 4 Methodist.

There are in the city about 30 banks, with an aggregate capital of about $30,000,000; 10 marine insurance companies, with a capital of $3,800,000; 22 fire insurance companies, with a capital of $6,360,000. There are 4 banks for savings. There were in 1840, in the city, 417 commercial houses and 918 commission houses engaged in foreign trade, with a capital of $45,941,200; 3,620 retail drygoods and other stores, with a cap. of $14,648,595; 61 lumber yards, with a cap. of $731,500; 4 furnaces have a cap. of $23,000; machinery manufactured to the amount of $1,150,000; hardware and cutlery, $135,300; precious metals, $932,760; of various metals, $1,087,900; 18 cotton fac. and 2 dyeing and printing estab., with a cap. of $61,300; 1 spermaceti oil and candle fac., cap. $100,000; 11 distilleries and 15 breweries, with a total cap. of $75,076; paints, drugs, &c., with a cap. of $643,650; 3 glass fac. and 6 glass cutting estab., with a cap. of $53,000; 1 paper fac.; 7 sugar refineries, produced articles to the value of $385,000; rope walks, cap. $9,900; 2 grist m., 8 saw m., cap. $146,800; cabinet furniture to the amount of $916,675. There were built 542 brick and stone, and 59 wooden houses, to the value of $1,889,100; 113 printing offices, 43 binderies, 18 daily, 45 weekly, and 5 semi-weekly newspapers, and 28 periodicals, employed 2,089 persons, and a cap. of $1,235,390. Total capital in manufac. $11,228,894. There were 4 colleges, 430 students, 148 acad. or grammar sch., 7,207 scholars, 209 com. and primary schools, 32,967 scholars.

The city has 6 theatres, 2 museums, and a large number of other places of amusement. Four steam ferries connect the city to Brooklyn, 3 to Williamsburg, 2 to Jersey City, and 3 to Hoboken; in which places numbers of those doing business in the city, reside.

There are not more than 5 or 6 cities in Europe more populous than New York, viz. London, Paris, Constantinople, St. Petersburg, Naples, and perhaps Vienna.

The government of the city is in the hands of a mayor and common council. The city is divided into 17 wards, each of which elects an alderman, an assistant alderman, two assessors, one collector, and two constables.

New York was settled in 1612 by the Dutch, and in 1623 they built a fort at the s. point of the island, and in 1642 a Dutch church within the fort. In 1664 the city was surrendered to the British. In 1698, the assessors' valuation of property in the whole city, was 78,231. The British had possession of the city during most of the revolutionary war. They evacuated it Nov. 25th, 1783, when the troops under Gen. Washington entered it. The first congress met here in 1785; and here Washington was inaugurated as first President in the United States, April 30th, 1789. The yellow fever prevailed in 1795 and 1805; and the cholera in 1832, when 2,467 persons died in July, and 2,206 in August. On the night of December 16th, 1835, a dreadful fire swept over 40 acres, covered with stores filled with valuable merchandise, and destroyed property to the amount of nearly $18,000,000. The burnt district has been entirely rebuilt with increased convenience and beauty.

New York, p.v., Switzerland co., Ia., 103 s. e. Indianapolis, 544 W. Situated on the n. bank of Ohio r., 8 ms. e. Vevay.

NEW YORK MILLS, p.v., Whitestown t., Oneida co., N. Y., 96 w. n. w. Albany, 392 W. Situated on Sadaquada cr., which affords good water power. It contains 2 churches, 3 stores, a large cotton fac., with 2 extensive stone buildings, containing 400 looms, and with a dyeing and bleaching establishment, employing 400 persons. The buildings and machinery cost $275,000, and it is one of the most extensive establishments of the kind in the state. The v. contains 150 dwellings, and about 900 inhabitants.

NIAGARA, county, N. Y. Situated in the n. w. part of the state, and contains 484 sq. ms. Lake Ontario bounds it on the n., and Niagara r. on the w. The country rises gradually from the lake shore, to the mountain ridge, from 7 to 12 ms. distant, and between this ridge and the lake is the Ridge road, 3 or 4 ms. n. of the mountain ridge, consisting of an arched surface, composed of sand and gravel, elevated 130 feet above the surface of the lake. Watered by Tonawanda cr. The surface on the s. is diversified; soil, generally fertile, adapted to grass and to grain. Capital, Lockport. There were in 1840, neat cattle 20,752, sheep 40,531, swine 28,344; wheat 454,823 bush. produced, Ind. corn 158,402, buckwheat 13,578, barley 47,786, oats 215,591, potatoes 283,692, sugar 44,059 pounds; 123 stores, cap. $369,245; 2 lumber yards, cap. $900; 1 furnaces, 6 fulling m., 1 woolen fac., 6 tanneries, 2 distilleries, 2 breweries, 1 pottery, 5 flouring m., 9 grist m., 45 saw m., 1 oil m., 1 paper fac., 4 printing offices, 3 weekly newspapers. Cap. in manufac. $415,980. 7 acad. 506 students, 138 sch. 7,998 scholars. Pop. 31,132.

NIAGARA, t., Niagara co., N. Y., 16 w. Lockport, 298 w. Albany. The surface is undulating; soil, calcareous, gravelly loam, underlaid with limestone and gypsum. It is situated on the mountain ridge, and is bounded w. by Niagara r. It contains the grand Falls of Niagara, and Goat island, and some smaller islands in the r. It has 5 stores, cap. $15,150; 1 fulling m., 1 woolen fac., 1 furnace, 1 paper m., 1 grist m., 3 saw m. Cap. in manufac. $39,600. 4 sch. 254 scholars. Pop. 1,277.

NIAGARA, r. and falls, N. Y. The r., which connects Lake Erie with Lake Ontario, is about 36 ms. long, and flows from s. to n. At its egress from Lake Erie, it is three quarters of a mile wide, and from 40 to 60 feet deep, and flows with a current of about 4 ms. an hour. As it proceeds, the r. widens to 6 or 8 ms., embracing several islands, the principal of which are Grand island, 12 ms. long, and from 2 to 7 ms. wide, well wooded, and reaching to within 16 m. of the falls; and Navy island, much smaller, celebrated in the events of the late Canadian rebellion. The Falls of Niagara are about 23 ms. below Lake Erie, and 14 above Lake Ontario, and are one of the greatest natural curiosities in the world. When the traveller first arrives at the spot, he stands and gazes, and is lost in admiration. The mighty volume of water which forms the outlet of the great Lakes Superior, Michigan, Huron, and Erie, is here precipitated over a precipice 160 feet high, with a roar like that of thunder, which may be heard, in favorable circumstances, to the distance of 15 miles, though, at times, the falls may be nearly approached without perceiving much to indicate a tremendous cataract in the vicinity. In consequence of a bend in the r., the principal weight of water is thrown on the Canadian side, down what is called the Horse-shoe fall, which name has become inappropriate, as the edge of the precipice has ceased to be a curve, and forms a moderately acute angle. Near the middle of the fall, Goat island, containing 75 acres, extends to the brow of the precipice, dividing the r. into 2 parts; and a small projecting mass of rock at a little distance from it, toward the American shore, again divides the cataract on that side. Goat island, at the lower end, presents a perpendicular mass of rocks, extending from the bottom to the top of the precipice. A bridge has been constructed from the American shore to Bath island; and another connects the latter with Goat island, and a tower is erected on the brow of the Horse-shoe fall, approached from Goat island by a short bridge, on which the spectator seems to stand over the edge of the mighty cataract, and which affords a fine view of this part of it. The distance at the fall from the American shore to Goat island, is 65 rods; across the front of Goat island, is 78 rods; around the Horse-shoe fall, on the Canadian side, 144 rods; directly across the Horse-shoe, 74 rods. The height of the fall near the American shore is 163 feet; near Goat island on the same side, 158 feet; near Goat island on the Canada side, 154 feet. Table rock, a shelving projection on the Canadian side, at the edge of the precipice is 150 feet high. This place is generally thought to present the finest view of the falls; though if the spectator will visit the tower on the opposite side on Goat island at sunrise, when the whole cavity is enlightened by the sun, and a complete rainbow is presented in the rising spray, he cannot desire any thing finer. A covered stairway on the American side, descends from the top to the bottom of the precipice. It has been computed that 100 million tons of water are discharged over the precipice every hour. The rapids commence about a mile above the falls, and the water descends 57 feet before it arrives at the cataract. The view from the bridge to Goat island, of the troubled water dashing tumultuously over the rocks, is terrific. While curiosity constitutes an attribute of the human character, these falls will be frequented by admiring and delighted visitors, as one of the grandest exhibitions in nature.

NORTH CAROLINA.

NORTH CAROLINA, one of the southern United States, is bounded n. by Virginia; e. by the Atlantic; s. by South Carolina; and w. by Tennessee. It is between 33° 50' and 36° 30' n. lat., and between 75° 45' and 84° w. lon.; and between 6° 20' w. and 1° 33' e. from W. It is 430 miles long, and 180 broad, containing 48,000 square miles, or 30,720,000 acres.

The population in 1790, was 393,754; in 1800, 478,103; in 1810, 555,500; in 1820, 633,929; in 1830, 738,470; in 1840, 753,419, of which 245,817 were slaves. Of the free population, 240,047 were white males; 244,823 do. females; 11,226 were colored males; 11,505 do. females. Employed in agriculture, there were 217,095; in commerce, 1,734; in manufactures and trades, 14,322; navigating the ocean, 327; do. canals, rivers, &c., 379; learned professions, 1,086.

This state is divided into 68 counties, which, with their population in 1840, and their capitals, are as follows: ANSON, 15,077, Wadesborough; ASHE, 7,467, Jeffersonton; BRAUFORT, 12,225, Washington; BERTIE, 12,175, Windsor; BLADEN, 8,022, Elizabeth; BRUNSWICK, 5,265, Smithville; BUNCOMBE, 10,084, Ashville; BURKE, 15,799, Morganton; CABARRUS, 9,259, Concord; CAMDEN, 5,663, Jonesboro'; CARTERET, 6,591, Beaufort; CASWELL, 14,693, Yanceyville; CHATHAM, 16,248, Pittsboro'; CHEROKEE, 3,427, Murphy; CHOWAN, 6,693, Edenton; COLUMBUS, 3,941, Whiteville; CRAVEN, 13,423, Newbern; CUMBERLAND, 15,284, Fayetteville; CURTICEK, 6,703, Cottituck C. Raleigh, situated near the centre of the state, 6 miles w. of the Neuse river, is the seat of government.

Along the whole coast of North Carolina is a ridge of sand, separated from the main land in some places by narrow and in other places by broad sounds and bays. The passages or inlets through it are shallow and dangerous, and Ocracoke inlet is the only one through which vessels pass. Capes Hatteras and Lookout are projecting points in this belt, and off them, particularly the former, is the most dangerous navigation on the coast of the United States. Cape Fear is on an island off the mouth of Cape Fear river. For 60 or 80 miles from the shore, the country is a dead level; the streams are sluggish and muddy, and there are many swamps and marshes. The soil is sandy and poor, excepting on the margins of the streams, where it is frequently rich. The natural growth of this region is almost universally the pitch pine, which is much larger than the same tree in the northern states. This tree affords tar, pitch, turpentine, and lumber, which constitute an important portion of the exports of the state. In the swamps rice of a fine quality is raised. Back of the flat country, and extending to the lower falls of the rivers, is a belt of about 40 miles wide, of a moderately uneven surface, a sandy soil, and of which the pitch pine is the prevailing natural growth. Above the falls the country is uneven, the streams have a more rapid current, the country is more fertile, and produces wheat, rye, barley, oats, and flax. The western part of the state is an elevated table land about 1,800 feet above the level of the sea, with some high ranges, and very elevated summits. Black mountain, in Yancey co., is 6,476 feet high, the highest land in the U. States e. of the Rocky mountains. Roan mountain is 6,038 feet, and Grandfather mountain is 5,556 feet high. The soil is generally good, but w. of the mountains it is still more fertile. Throughout the state Indian corn is raised, and in some parts, considerable cotton. In the low country, grapes, plums, blackberries, and strawberries grow spontaneously; and on the intervals canes grow luxuriantly; and their leaves continuing green through the winter, furnish food for cattle. The low country is somewhat unhealthy, but in the elevated parts the air is pure and salubrious. In the elevated country, oak, walnut, lime, and cherry trees, of a large growth, abound. In the northern part of this state, and extending into Virginia, is the great Dismal swamp, which is 30 miles long and 10 broad, and covers a surface of 150,000 acres. In the centre of it, and within the state of Virginia, is Lake Drummond, 15 miles in circuit. A canal passes through this swamp, mentioned in the account of Virginia, with a feeder 5 ma. long from Lake Drummond. This swamp is thickly wooded with pine, juniper, cypress, and in its drier parts, with white and red oak. In some parts, the thickness of the growth renders it impervious. South of this, between Albemarle and Pamlico sounds, is Alligator swamp, which has a lake in the centre. It is computed that 2,500,000 acres of swamp in this state might be easily drained, which would afford a rich soil for the cultivation of cotton, tobacco, rice, and Indian corn.

There were in the state in 1840, 166,608 horses and mules; 617,371 neat cattle; 538,579 sheep; 1,649,716 swine; poultry to the value of $544,125. There were produced 1,960,865 bushels of wheat; 3,574 of barley; 3,193,941 of oats; 213,971 of rye; 15,391 of buckwheat; 23,993,763 of Indian corn; 625,044 pounds of wool; 1,063 of hops; 118,923 of wax; 2,609,339 bushels of potatoes; 101,369 tons of hay; 9,879 of hemp and flax; 16,772,359 pounds of tobacco; 2,830,398 of rice; 51,926,190 of cotton; 3,014 of silk cocoons; 7,163 of sugar; the products of the dairy were valued at $674,349; of the orchard at $386,006; of lumber at $506,766. There were made 28,752 gallons of wine.

The principal minerals of North Carolina are gold and iron. The gold region lies on both sides of the Blue Ridge, and extends e. of the Yadkin. It exists in grains, and in small masses and lumps, some of them worth from 100 to 7 or 8 thousand dollars, and in veins. Many persons have engaged in digging for gold, and with some success. A considerable amount is sent annually to the Mint of the United States.

The principal rivers are the Chowan, 400 miles long, navigable for small vessels 30 miles; Roanoke; Pamlico, navigable for 30 miles; Neuse; Cape Fear, the largest river in the state, 280 miles long, with 11 feet of water to Wilmington; the Yadkin, which forms a part of the Great Pedee in South Carolina; and the Catawba, which also passes into South Carolina. The sluggishness of the rivers as they approach the sea, and the sandy character of the coast, cause them to be extensively obstructed by bars at their mouths. As this state has few good harbors, much of its commerce is carried on through Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, and Tennessee. Wilmington, on Cape Fear river, 40 miles from the sea, is the most commercial place in the state. Newbern, on the Neuse, 30 miles from Pamlico sound, has some commerce. Fayetteville, at the head of boat navigation on Cape Fear river, has considerable trade.

The exports of the state in 1840, amounted to $387,484; and the imports to $252,532. There were 4 commercial and 46 commission houses engaged in foreign trade, with a capital of $151,300; 1,068 retail drygoods and other stores, with a capital of $5,082,835; 432 persons employed in the lumber trade, with a capital of $46,000; 213 persons employed in internal transportation, who, with 24 butchers, packers, &c., employed a capital of $9,000; 1,784 persons employed in the fisheries, with a capital of $213,502.

The amount of home-made or family manufactures was $1,413,242; there were 3 woollen manufactories and 1 fulling mill, producing articles to the amount of $3,900, with a capital of $9,800; 25 cotton manufactories, with 47,934 spindles, employing 1,219 persons, producing articles to the amount of $438,900, with a capital of $995,300; there were 8 furnaces, producing 968 tons of cast iron, and 43 forges, &c., producing 963 tons of bar iron, employing 468 persons, and a capital of $94,961; 3 smelting houses, employing 30 persons, and produced 10,000 pounds of lead; 10 smelting houses employed 369 persons, and produced gold to the amount of $255,618, with a capital of $9,832; 2 paper mills, producing articles to the amount of $8,785, with a capital of $5,000; hats and caps were manufactured to the amount of $38,167, and straw bonnets to the amount of $1,700, employing 142 persons, and a capital of $13,141; 353 tanneries employed 645 persons, with a capital of $271,979; 236 other leather manufactories, as saddleries, &c., produced articles to the amount of $185,367, with a capital of $76,163; 16 potteries employed 21 persons, producing articles to the amount of $6,960, with a capital of $1,531; 89 persons manufactured machinery to the amount of $43,285; 43 persons manufactured hardware and cutlery to the amount of $1,200; 698 persons manufactured carriages and wagons to the amount of $301,601, with a capital of $173,318; 323 flouring mills produced 87,641 barrels of flour, and with other mills employed 1,830 persons, producing articles to the amount of $1,552,096, employing a capital of $1,670,228; vessels were built to the amount of $62,800; 223 persons manufactured furniture to the amount of $35,002, with a capital of $57,960; 40 persons manufactured 1,065 small-arms; 15 persons manufactured granite and marble to the amount of $1,063; 276 persons produced bricks and lime to the amount of $58,336; 367 persons manufactured 1,612,825 pounds of soap, 148,546 do. of tallow candles, 335 do. of spermaceti and wax candles, with a capital of $4,754; 2,802 distilleries produced 1,051,979 gallons, and with breweries, which produced 17,431 gallons, employed 1,422 persons, and a capital of $180,200; 38 brick or stone, and 1,822 wooden houses, employed 1,707 persons, at a cost of $410,264; 26 printing offices, 4 binderies, 26 weekly, and 1 semi-weekly newspapers, and 2 periodicals, employed 103 persons, and a capital of $55,400. The whole amount of capital employed in manufactures was $3,838,900.

The University of North Carolina, at Chapel Hill, 27 ms. w. n. w. from Raleigh, was founded in 1791. Davidson College, in Mecklenburg county, was founded in 1837. In these institutions there were in 1840, 158 students. There were in the state 141 academies, with 4,398 students, 632 common and primary schools, with 14,937 scholars; and 56,609 white persons over 20 years of age, who could neither read nor write.

In the low country the Methodists and Baptists are the most numerous religious denominations. In the elevated country w. are many Presbyterians. The Methodists and Baptists have each about 20,000 communicants; the Presbyterians about 11,000. The Episcopalians have a bishop and 20 ministers; the Lutherans have 18 ministers, 36 congregations, and 1,866 communicants. Besides these, there are some Moravians, Roman Catholics, Friends, &c.

There were in October, 1839, in this state, 6 banks and branches, with a capital of $1,500,000, and a circulation of $1,163,857.

The constitution of this state was adopted in December, 1776, which was revised and modified in 1835. The senate and house of commons are elected biennially by the people. The senate consists of 50 members, and the house of commons of 120. The senate is chosen by districts, the number apportioned by the amount of state taxes paid. The members of the house of commons are apportioned among the counties according to their population. The governor is chosen for 2 years by a joint vote of both houses, and is eligible only 4 years in 6. There is an executive council of 7 members, chosen biennially by a joint vote of both houses. In case of the death of the governor, the duty devolves upon the speaker of the senate. The judges of the supreme court are chosen by a joint ballot of both houses of the legislature, and hold their offices during good behavior. The attorney-general is appointed by the legislature for 4 years. The right of suffrage extends to all free white persons of 21 years of age, who have been inhabitants of the state for 12 months previous to the election; but in order to vote for a senator a freeman must possess a freehold of 50 acres of land. The legislature meets biennially at Raleigh, on the second Monday of November, and the governor is chosen in December following.

The works of internal improvement are not so numerous and extensive in this, as in some other states. The Wilmington and Raleigh railroad extends from Wilmington 161½ miles to Weldon, on the Roanoke, and connects with the Portsmouth and Roanoke railroad. It was commenced in 1836, and completed in 1840. The Raleigh and Gaston railroad extends from Raleigh 85 miles to Gaston, on the Roanoke, where it unites with the Petersburg, Greenville, and Roanoke railroads. Northwest canal connects Northwest river, 6 miles, with the Dismal Swamp canal. Weldon canal extends 12 miles round the falls of the Roanoke. Clubfoot and Harlow canal extends from the head waters of the Clubfoot, 14 m. to those of Harlow creek, near Beaufort.

The first permanent settlement in this state was made on the eastern bank of the Chowan, and called Albemarle, by emigrants who fled from religious persecution from Nansemond, in Virginia, about 1660. Several previous attempts to settle it had failed. It had been granted to different proprietors at different times; but in 1663 it was transferred to Lord Clarendon, and some others, who procured a constitution of government to be prepared for it by the celebrated John Locke. The chief magistrate was called the Palatine, and there was an hereditary nobility. The legislature was called a Parliament. This constitution was found so defective, that, in 1693, it was abolished. In 1729, the crown purchased the whole of the Carolinas for £17,500 sterling; and the king immediately divided it into two provinces, North and South Carolina, which ever after continued separate. In 1769, this province successfully resisted the oppression of the British ministry. Two years after 1,500 of the inhabitants, assuming the name of regulators, rose in rebellion. G. Tryon fought and defeated them. Three hundred were killed in battle; and of those taken, 13 were condemned for high treason, and 6 were executed. During the war of the revolution the inhabitants of this state were the devoted friends of their country. The severe battle of Guilford Court House, fought within its limits, is well known. In 1776, early in the war, this state formed a constitution, which, with some recent modifications, continues to the present time. In convention, November 27th, 1789, this state adopted the constitution of the United States; years 193, nay; 75; majority, 118.

NORWICH, city, and semi-capital of New London co., Ct., is situated at the head of navigation on Thames r., in 41° 33' n. lat., and 72° 7' w. lon., 13 n. New London, 39 s. e. Hartford, 33 s. w. Providence, R. I., 50 n. e. New Haven, 357 W. Pop. 1830, city, 3,144; total in t. 5,179: 1840, city, 4,200; t., excepting the city, 3,039; total, 7,239. It consists of 3 parts—Chelsea Landing, or Norwich City, the Town, and Westville, formerly called Bean Hill. Norwich City, or the Landing, is situated on the point of land between the Shetucket and Yantic rivers, which here unite to form the Thames. The site is singularly romantic, on the steep declivity of a high hill, which causes the streets to rise above each other like terraces, and the houses in the rear to overlook those in front. The t., 2 miles n. w., is on a pleasant valley, surrounded by hills, which on the e. rise rapidly from the street, and afford commanding situations for dwellings. In the centre of the place is a large triangular public ground, or square, surrounded by houses and stores, on which fronts the principal church. Between the landing and town is a beautiful plain, which furnishes fine situations for elegant residences. In the n. w. part of the city, on the road to Hartford, is Westville, which contains a number of pleasant dwellings and several manufacturing establishments. Within the city are a court house, jail, town hall, 4 banks, 2 insurance companies, a high school for boys, a female academy, and 7 churches—2 Congregational, 1 Episcopal, 1 Baptist, 2 Methodist, and 1 Unitarian. A cove sets up about a mile from the Thames, over the mouth of which is a bridge. At the head of this cove, the Yantic r. enters it by a singularly romantic cataract, affording a fine site for mills and manufactories. The village around it is called Yanticville. In the rocks which form the bed of the cataract will often be found circular perpendicular holes, 5 or 6 feet deep, evidently formed by a stone or stones whirled round within them by the force of the water. These holes are so regular as to appear like a work of art, and are a curiosity. From a high projecting rock, which overhangs the foot of these falls, the Mohegan Indians formerly plunged to destruction, rather than to fall into the hands of the Narragansets, who were pursuing them. A mile e. of the landing, on the Shetucket, is Greenville, a flourishing manufacturing v. Steamboats ply between Norwich and New York, and a railroad connects it with Worcester, Mass., and thence with Boston. There were in Norwich in 1840, 97 stores, with a capital of $337,000; 5 lumber yards, with a capital of $32,000; hardware produced to the amount of $50,000; 1 fulling m., 1 woollen fac., cap. $35,000; 1 cotton fac. 4,000 sp., cap. $100,000; 1 tannery, 1 pottery, 2 grist m., 1 oil m., 2 rope walks, 2 paper fac., 3 printing offices, 2 binderies, and 2 weekly newspapers. Cap. in manufac. $408,700. 3 acad. 71 students, 13 sch. 908 scholars. In the t., without the city limits, are 14 stores, cap. $36,000; 6 fulling m., 5 woollen fac., 1 cotton fac. with 4,626 sp., 1 tannery, 1 pottery, 11 grist m., 2 paper fac. Cap. in manufac. $453,500. 2 acad. 90 students, 11 sch. 871 scholars.

NORWICH, p-t., and capital of Chenango co., N. Y., 112 w. Albany, 336 W. The surface is hilly, with a wide valley extending through the t., from n. to s., through which Chenango r. flows, and on which are fertile and highly cultivated flats. The elevated parts are adapted to grazing. The v. is beautifully situated on the w. bank of Chenango r., and contains a court house, jail, county clerk's office, banking house, 4 churches—1 Presbyterian, 1 Baptist, 1 Episcopal, and 1 Methodist—30 stores and groceries, 2 grist m., 1

OHIO, a large river of the United States. This r., if we take into view its length, the richness and populousness, present and prospective, of the vast country which it drains, and the extent of its navigation, is second only to the Mississippi. It is formed by the confluence of the Alleghany from the n. and the Monongahela from the s. at Pittsburg, in the w. part of Pennsylvania, lat. 40° 29' N. and lon. 80° 8' W., at the height of 1,138 feet above tidewater in the Atlantic. It proceeds in a direction w. s. w., dividing the states of Virginia and Kentucky on the s. from Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois on the n., and enters the Mississippi, in lat. 37° N. and lon. 89° 58' W. Its length from Pittsburg to its mouth, by the course of the river, is 948 miles; but the distance in a direct course, is only 614 miles. It has a descent, in its whole course, of 395 feet, making an average descent of not quite 5 inches in a mile. The width of the Ohio varies from 400 to 1,400 yards; its average width is about 800 yards, which is its width opposite to Cincinnati. Its widest place is at Louisville, Ky. At its mouth, it is about 900 yards wide. The great valley drained by this river contains over 200,000 sq. miles, and a population of over 3,000,000, which is rapidly increasing. There are no considerable falls in this river excepting at Louisville, Ky., where it descends 234 feet in 2 miles. These falls have been obviated by a canal around them, which admits of the passage of the largest steamboats; but boats ascend and descend these rapids, when the water is high. The current of the Ohio is very gentle, being, at the mean height of the river, about 3 miles an hour; at high water it is more, and at low water not more than 3 miles. The highest water occurs in December, March, May, and June; and the lowest, in August, September, and October. The average difference between high and low water is 50 feet. During 8 or 10 weeks in the winter, the navigation is obstructed by floating ice. Of the 2 confluents which form the Ohio, the Alleghany is the most important, being navigable for boats 260 miles to Olean, N. Y., and will hereafter, by means of the Genesee Valley canal, terminating at this place, and extending to the Erie canal, form an important communication between the city of New York and the west. The principal tributaries of the Ohio on the n. are the Beaver, Muskingum, Scioto, the 2 Miami, Whitewater, and Wabash; those on the s. are the Kanawha, Sandy, Licking, Kentucky, Green, Cumberland, and Tennessee. Some of these are navigable at high water to a great extent, by boats and steamboats. The Tennessee is navigable by boats for 1,000 miles; the Cumberland is navigable for steamboats to Nashville, and for keel-boats 300 miles further; the Wabash is navigable for 200 miles; Green river 200 miles; Kentucky, 150; Great Kanawha 64 miles, to the salt works. The Ohio, with its tributaries, has 5,000 miles of navigable waters.

OHIO.

OHIO, the northernmost of the Western States, is bounded n. by Michigan and Lake Erie; e. by Pennsylvania and Virginia; s. by the Ohio river, which separates it from Virginia and Kentucky; and w. by Indiana. It is between 36° 30' and 42° N. lat., and between 80° 35' and 84° 47' W. lon., and between 3° 31' and 7° 41' W. lon. It is 210 miles long from N. to S., and 200 miles broad from e. to w.; containing 40,000 square miles, or 25,600,000 acres. The population in 1790, was 3,000; in 1800, 45,365; in 1810, 230,760; in 1820, 581,434; in 1830, 937,637; in 1840, 1,519,467; being the third in population in the United States. Of these, 775,350 were white males; 726,762 do. females; 8,740 were free colored males; 8,602 do. females. Employed in agriculture, 272,579; in commerce, 9,201; in manufactures and trades, 66,965; in mining, 704; navigating the ocean, 212; do. rivers, canals, and lakes, 3,323; learned professions, 5,663.

This state is divided into 79 counties, which, with their population in 1840, and their capitals, are as follows: ADAMS, 13,183, West Union; ALLEN, 9,079, Lima; ASHTABULA, 23,724, Jefferson; ATHENS, 19,109, Athens; BELMONT, 30,901, St. Clairsville; BROWN, 23,715, Georgetown; BUTLER, 28,173, Hamilton; CARROLL, 18,108, Carrollton; CHAMPAIGN, 16,731, Urbans; CLARK, 16,982, Springfield; Clermont, 23,106, Batavia; CLINTON, 15,719, Wilmington; COLUMBIANA, 40,378, New Lisbon; COSHOCTON, 31,590, Coshocton; CRAWFORD, 13,152, Bucyrus; CUTAHOGA, 26,506, Cleveland; DARKE, 13,982, Greenville; DELAWARE, 22,060, Delaware; ERIE, 12,560, Sandusky City; FAIRFIELD, 31,924, Lancaster; FAYETTE, 10,964, Washington; FRANKLIN, 25,049, Columbus; GALLIA, 13,444, Gallipolis; GAUGA, 16,997, Chardon; GREENE, 17,528, Xenia; GUERNSEY, 27,748, Cambridge; HAMILTON, 80,145, Cincinnati; HANCOCK, 9,986, Findlay; HARDIN, 4,598, Kenton; HARRISON, 20,099, Cadiz; HENRY, 2,503, Napoleon; HIGHLAND, 21,369, Hillsboro; HOCKING, 9,741, Logan; HOLMES, 18,068, Millersburg; HURON, 23,933, Norwalk; JACKSON, 9,744, Jackson; JEFFERSON, 25,030, Steubenville; KNOX, 29,579, Mount Vernon; LAKE, 13,719, Painesville; LAWRENCE, 9,738, Burlington; LICKING, 35,096, Newark; LOGAN, 14,015, Belle Fontaine; LORAIN, 18,467, Elyria; LUCAS, 9,382, Toledo; MADISON, 9,025, London; MARION, 14,765, Marion; MEDINA, 18,352, Medina; MEIGS, 11,452, Chester; MERCER, 8,277, Colma; MIAMI, 19,638, Troy; MONROE, 18,521, Woodfield; MONTGOMERY, 31,938, Dayton; MORGAN, 20,852, McConnelville; MUSKINGUM, 38,749, Zanesville; OTTAWA, 2,248, Port Clinton; PAULDING, 1,034, Charice; PERRY, 19,344, Somerset; PICKAWAY, 19,723, Circleville; PIKE, 7,626, Firoton; PREBLE, 19,482, Eason; PORTAGE, 22,965, Ravenna; PUTNAM, 5,199, Putnam; RICHLAND, 44,532, Mansfield; ROSS, 27,460, Chillicothe; SANDUSKY, 10,182, Lower Sandusky; SCIOTO, 11,192, Portsmouth; SENECA, 18,128, Tiffin; SHELBY, 12,154, Sidney; STARK, 24,603, Canton; SUMMIT, 22,560, Akron; TRUMBULL, 33,107, Warren; TUSCARAWAS, 25,631, New Philadelphia; UNION, 8,422, Marysville; VAN WERT, 1,577, Van Wert; WARREN, 23,141, Lebanon; WASHINGTON, 20,823, Marietta; WAYNE, 35,808, Wooster; WILLIAMS, 4,465, Bryan; WOOD, 5,327, Perrysburg.

Columbus, on the Scioto, just below the confluence of the Whetstone, is the seat of government.

The interior of the state, and the country bordering on Lake Erie, are generally level, and in some places marshy. From one quarter to one third of the state, comprehending the eastern and southeastern part, bordering on the Ohio river, is generally hilly and broken, but not mountainous. There is no elevation which deserves the name of a mountain, in the whole state. The interval lands on the Ohio, and several of its tributaries, have great fertility. On both sides of the Scioto, and of the Great and Little Miami, are the most extensive bodies of rich and level land in the state. On the head waters of the Muskingum and Scioto, and between the Scioto and the two Miami rivers are extensive prairies, some of them low and marshy, producing a great quantity of coarse grass, from 2 to 5 feet high; other parts of the prairies are elevated and dry, with a very fertile soil, though they are sometimes called barrens. The height of land which divides the waters which fall into the Ohio from those which fall into Lake Erie, is the most marshy of any in the state; while the land on the margins of the rivers is generally dry. Among the forest trees are blackwalnut, oak of various species, hickory, maple of several kinds, beech, birch, poplar, sycamore, ash of several kinds, pawpaw, buckeye, cherry, and whitewood, which is extensively used as a substitute for pine. Wheat may be regarded as the staple production of the state, but Indian corn and other grains are produced in great abundance. Although Ohio has already become so populous, it is surprising to the traveller to observe what an amount of forest is yet unsubdued.

The summers are warm and pretty regular, but subject, at times, to severe drought. The winters are generally mild, but much less so in the northern than in the southern part of the state. Near Lake Erie, the winters are probably as severe as in the same latitude on the Atlantic. In the country for 50 miles south of Lake Erie, there are generally a number of weeks of good sleighing in the winter; but in the southern part of the state, the snow is too small in quantity, or of too short continuance, to produce good sleighing for any considerable time. In the neighborhood of Cincinnati green peas are produced in plenty by the 20th of May.

In parts of the state near marshes and stagnant waters, fevers and agues, and bilious and other fevers, are prevalent. With this exception, the climate of Ohio may be regarded as healthy.

There were in this state in 1840, 430,527 horses and mules; 1,217,874 neat cattle; 2,083,401 sheep; 2,099,746 swine; poultry, to the value of $551,193. There were produced 16,571,661 bush. of wheat; 212,440 of barley; 14,393,103 of oats; 814,205 of rye; 633,139 of buckwheat; 33,663,144 of Indian corn ; 3,685,315 pounds of wool ; 62,195 of hops ; 38,950 of wax ; 5,805,021 bushels of potatoes ; 1,022,037 tons of hay ; 9,080 of hemp and flax ; 5,942,275 pounds of tobacco ; 4,317 of silk cocoons ; 6,363,336 of sugar ; the products of the dairy were valued at $1,848,869 ; of the orchard at $475,371 ; of lumber $262,831. There were made 11,524 gallons of wine ; and 6,809 tons of pot and pearl ashes.

Salt springs have been found on Yellow cr., in Jefferson county ; on the waters of Killbuck, in Wayne county ; on Muskingum river, near Zanesville ; and at various other places. Bituminous coal is found in great quantities in the eastern part of the state, particularly near Massillon, in Stark county, and in Tallmadge, in Summit county. This coal is delivered to consumers in Cleveland for 15 cents a bushel. Iron ore is found in various places, particularly near Zanesville, and on Bush cr., in Adams county.

The Ohio river, which gives name to the state, washes its entire southern border. This river is 908 miles long, from Pittsburg to its mouth, by its various windings, though it is only 614 in a straight line. Its current is gentle, with no falls excepting at Louisville, Kentucky, where there is a descent of 22½ feet in two miles, but this has been obviated by a canal. For about half the year it is navigable for steamboats of a large class through its whole course. The Muskingum, the largest river which flows entirely in the state, is formed by the junction of the Tuscarawas and Walhonding rivers, and enters the Ohio at Marietta. It is navigable for boats 130 miles. The Scioto, the second river in magnitude flowing entirely within the state, is about 200 miles long, and enters the Ohio at Portsmouth. Its largest branch is the Whetstone or Olentangy, which joins it immediately above Columbus. It is navigable for boats 130 miles. The Great Miami is a rapid river in the western part of the state, 100 ms. long, and enters the Ohio in the s. w. corner of the state. The Little Miami has a course of 70 miles, and enters the Ohio 7 miles above Cincinnati. The Maumee is 100 miles long, rises in Indiana, runs through the n. w. part of this state, and enters Lake Erie at Maumee bay. It is navigable for steamboats to Perrysburg, 18 miles from the lake, and above the rapids is boatable for a considerable distance. The Sandusky rises in the northern part of the state, and, after a course of about 80 miles, it enters Sandusky bay, and thence into Lake Erie. The Cuyahoga rises in the n. part of the state, and, after a curved course of 60 miles, enters Lake Erie at Cleveland. It has a number of falls which furnish valuable mill seats. Besides these, Huron, Vermilion, Black, Grand, and Ashtabula rivers fall into Lake Erie.

Lake Erie borders this state for about 150 miles, and has several harbors, among which the largest are made by Maumee and Sandusky bays. Besides these are the harbors of Huron, Cleveland, Fairport, and Ashtabula.

Cincinnati, on the Ohio, is much the largest and most commercial city of the state. Next in rank is Cleveland, on Lake Erie, at the mouth of the Cuyahoga, and the Ohio canal. Besides these, Dayton, Columbus, Steubenville, Zanesville, Chillicothe, Lancaster, Newark, Circleville, and Massillon are flourishing places, with considerable trade.

The exports of this state in 1840 amounted to $991,954 ; and the imports to $4,915. There were 53 commercial and 241 commission houses engaged in foreign trade, with a capital of $5,928,300 ; 4,605 retail drygoods and other stores, with a capital of $21,282,325 ; 2,891 persons employed in the lumber trade, with a capital of $373,268 ; 854 persons engaged in internal transportation, who, with 1,061 butchers, packers, &c., employed a capital of $4,617,570.

The amount of home-made or family manufactures was $1,853,937 ; there were 130 woollen manufactories, and 206 fulling mills, producing goods to the amount of $685,757, employing 935 persons, and a capital of $537,985 ; 8 cotton manufactories, with 13,754 spindles, employing 246 persons, producing articles to the amount of $139,378, and employing a capital of $113,500 ; 72 furnaces produced 35,236 tons of cast iron, and 19 forges, &c., produced 7,466 tons of bar iron, consuming 104,312 tons of fuel, employing 2,268 persons, and a capital of $1,161,900 ; 434 persons produced 3,513,409 bushels of bituminous coal, with a capital of $45,523 ; 14 paper manufactories, employing 305 persons, produced articles to the amount of $370,202, with a capital of $208,200 ; 31 persons manufactured flax, producing the amount of $11,737, with a capital of $242 ; hats and caps were manufactured to the amount of $733,513, and straw bonnets to the amount of $3,038, the whole employing 963 persons, and a capital of $369,637 ; 812 tanneries employed 1,790 persons, with a capital of $957,333 ; 1,160 other manufactories of leather, as saddleries, &c., produced articles to the amount of $1,986,146, with a capital of $917,245 ; 187 persons manufactured tobacco, to the amount of $212,818, with a capital of $68,810 ; 99 potteries employed 199 persons, manufacturing to the amount of $89,754, employing a capital of $43,450 ; 856 persons produced machinery to the value of $875,731 ; 289 persons produced hardware and cutlery to the amount of $393,300 ; 70 persons produced 3 cannon, and 2,450 small-arms ; 37 persons manufactured the precious metals to the amount of $53,125 ; 599 persons manufactured other metals to the amount of $782,901 ; 70 persons produced drugs and paints to the amount of $101,830, with a capital of $126,335 ; 401 persons manufactured granite and marble to the amount of $256,131 ; 1,469 persons produced bricks and lime to the amount of $712,697 ; 13 persons, in 2 powder mills, produced 222,500 pounds of powder with a capital of $18,000; 105 persons manufactured 3,603,036 pounds of soap, 2,318,456 pounds of tallow candles, 151 pounds of spermaceti and wax candles, employing a capital of $186,780; 390 distilleries produced 6,329,467 gallons, and 59 breweries produced 1,422,584 gallons, the whole employing 798 persons and a capital of $993,119; 21 ropewalks, employing 66 persons, produced articles to the amount of $69,750, with a capital of $37,675; 11 persons produced musical instruments to the amount of $8,454, with a capital of $5,000; 1,490 persons manufactured carriages and wagons to the amount of $701,228, with a capital of $390,540; 536 flouring mills produced 1,311,954 barrels of flour, and with other mills employed 4,661 persons, producing articles to the amount of $3,968,218, with a capital of $4,931,024; vessels were built to the amount of $522,855; 1,928 persons manufactured furniture to the amount of $761,146, employing a capital of $534,317; 970 brick or stone houses, and 2,764 wooden houses, employed 6,060 persons, and cost $3,776,923; 159 printing offices, 41 binderies, 9 daily, 7 semi-weekly, and 107 weekly newspapers, and 20 periodicals, employed 1,175 persons, and a capital of $446,720. The whole amount of capital employed in manufactures was $16,905,257.

Among the principal literary institutions, the University of Ohio, at Athens, was founded in 1821; the Miami University, at Oxford, was founded in 1809. These institutions have been endowed by large grants of lands. The Franklin College, at New Athens, was founded in 1825; the Western Reserve College, at Hudson, was founded in 1826; Kenyon College, at Gambier, (Episcopal,) was founded in 1826; Granville College, at Granville, (Baptist,) was founded in 1833; Marietta College, at Marietta, was founded in 1833; the Oberlin Collegiate Institute, at Oberlin, was founded in 1834; Cincinnati College, at Cincinnati, was founded 1819; as was also Woodward College, at the same place. Willoughby University, at Willoughby, is a medical institution, with a college charter. Lane Theological Seminary, at Cincinnati, was founded in 1839. There are also theological departments in Kenyon Western Reserve and Granville colleges, and in the Oberlin Institute; a Lutheran theological school at Columbus; two medical and one law school at Cincinnati. At all these institutions there were in 1840, 1,717 students. There were in the state 73 academies, with 4,310 students; 5,186 common and primary schools, with 218,609 scholars. There were 35,394 white persons over 20 years of age who could neither read nor write.

In 1836 the Presbyterians had 247 ministers; the Methodists had 300 ministers; the Baptists had 170 ministers; the Lutherans had 47 ministers; the Episcopalians had 1 bishop and 25 ministers; the German Reformed had 26 ministers. Besides these there are a considerable number of Friends and Catholics, and a few others.

There were in this state, at the commencement of 1840, 37 banks and branches, with an aggregate capital of $10,507,521, and a circulation of $4,607,127. The state debt, in Sept., 1840, was $991,954. There is a state penitentiary at Columbus.

This state has a number of important works of internal improvement. The Ohio canal extends from Cleveland, on Lake Erie, 307 miles, to Portsmouth, on the Ohio. It has a navigable feeder of 14 miles to Zanesville; one of 10 miles to Columbus; and 1 of 9 miles to Lancaster; one to Athens of 50 miles; the Walhoning Branch of 23 miles; the Eastport Branch of 4 miles, and the Dresden of 2 miles. This great work was begun in 1825, and was finished in 1833, at a cost of $5,000,000. The Miami canal extends from Cincinnati, 178 miles, to Defiance, where it meets the Wabash and Erie canal. The cost was $3,750,000. The whole distance to Lake Erie is 265 miles. The Warren canal, a branch of the above, extends from Middletown, 20 miles, to Lebanon. The Sandy and Beaver canal is to extend from the Ohio canal, at Bolivar, 76 miles, to Ohio river, at the mouth of Little Beaver creek. Cost estimated at $1,500,000. The Mahoning canal extends from the Ohio canal, at Akron, 88 miles, 8 of which are in Pa., to Beaver river, at a cost of $764,372. Milan canal extends from Huron, 3 miles, to Milan, to which steamboats now ascend. The Mad River and Sandusky City railroad extends from Tiffin, 36 miles, to Sandusky City. The Ohio railroad extends from Manhattan, 40 miles, to Sandusky City.

The governor is elected by the people for 2 years. The senators are chosen biennially, and are apportioned according to the number of white male inhabitants over 21 years of age. The number can never be less than one third, nor more than one half of the number of the representatives. The representatives are apportioned among the counties according to the number of inhabitants over 21; and there can never be more than 72, nor less than 36.

The judges of the supreme and other courts are elected by the joint ballot of the legislature, for the term of seven years.

The right of suffrage is enjoyed by all white male inhabitants, over 21 years of age, who have resided in the state one year next preceding the election, and who have paid or been assessed with a state or county tax.

The first permanent English settlement, in Ohio, was made April 7th, 1786, at Marietta; and the first judicial court was held there in Sept. of the same year, under an act of congress passed in 1786. The next settlement was that of Symmes's Purchase, 6 miles below Cincinnati, in 1789. The next was made by French emigrants, at Gallipolis, in 1791. The next was made on Lake Erie, at Cleveland and Conneant, in 1796, by emigrants from New England. In 1799 the first territorial legislature met at Cincinnati, and organized the government. Early in 1800 Connecticut relinquished her jurisdiction over the Western Reserve, and received a title to the land, which she sold to constitute her great school fund. In 1802 Ohio formed her state constitution, and was admitted to the Union.

OHIO, county, Va. Situated in the n. w. part of the state, and contains 125 square miles. The Ohio r. bounds it on the w., along which it extends 36 miles, with a mean width of 18 miles. Drained by Wheeling creek and other small streams flowing into the Ohio r. The surface is hilly and broken; soil, fertile, particularly the alluvial bottoms on the Ohio r. Capital, Wheeling. There were in 1840, neat cattle 4,252, sheep 26,669, swine 9,651; wheat 124,996 bush. produced, rye 2,376, Ind. corn 233,537, buck-wheat 1,434, barley 599, oats 145,865, potatoes 43,086, sugar 3,909; bituminous coal 1,173,000 bushels; 11 stores, cap. $464,850; 4 furnaces, 1 forge; 6 lumber yards, cap. $24,400; 2 woollen fac., 1 cotton fac. 400 sp., 7 tanneries, 1 distillery, 3 glass fac., 2 potteries, 12 flouring m., 7 grist m., 11 saw m., 4 paper fac., 3 printing offices, 3 weekly, 2 semi-weekly, and 1 periodical newspaper. Cap. in manufac. $519,633. 2 acad. 90 students, 29 schools, 999 scholars. Pop. whites 12,842, slaves 212, free col'd 303; total, 13,357.

Ohio, county, Ky. Centrally situated toward the n. w. part of the state, and contains 576 sq. ms. Green r. runs on its s. border. Drained by Rough cr. and its branches, and Panther creek, branches of Green r. Capital, Hartford. There were in 1840, neat cattle 7,028, sheep 6,511, swine 25,092; wheat 30,646 bushels produced, rye 1,905, Ind. corn 240,015, oats 42,091, potatoes 6,720, tobacco 954,709 pounds; 17 stores, cap. $70,200; 1 cotton fac. 30 sp., 4 tanneries, 3 distilleries, 2 flouring m., 7 grist m., 4 saw m. Cap. in manufac. $13,650. 1 sch. 25 scholars. Pop. whites 5,747, slaves 823, free col'd 22; total, 6,592.

OHIO, p-t, Herkimer co., N. Y. 106 n. w. Albany, 423 W. The surface is hilly; soil, well adapted to grass. Drained by West Canada cr. and its branches. It has 1 store, cap. $300; 5 saw m. Cap. in manufac. $4,100. 6 sch. 231 scholars. Pop. 692.

OHIO, t., Alleghany co., Pa. 11 n. w. Pittsburgh. The surface is hilly; soil, loam and alluvion. Ohio r. runs on its s. w. border. Drained by Great and Little Sewickly creeks, and Jones' and Hawser's runs, which flow w. into the Ohio. It has 3 stores, cap. $2,300; 1 tannery, 4 grist m., 7 saw m. Cap. in manufac. $11,100. 2 acad. 71 students, 9 sch. 302 scholars. Pop. 1,631.

OHIO, t., Beaver co., Pa. 10 s. w. Beaver. The surface is rolling; soil, loam and rich alluvion. Watered by Little Beaver cr. flowing into Ohio r. at its s. w. angle. It has 4 stores, cap. $7,300; 1 tannery, 1 grist m., 3 saw m. Cap. in manufac. $5,300. 7 sch. 329 scholars. Pop. 1,373.

OHIO, t., Clermont co., O. It has 14 stores, cap. $18,000; 3 lumber yards, cap. $1,428; 1 woollen fac., 2 tanneries, 1 distillery, 4 grist m., 4 saw m. Cap. in manufac. $44,610. 6 sch. 375 scholars. Pop. 2,895.

OHIO, t., Gallia co., O. The Ohio r. runs on its e. and s. border. It has 1 store, cap. $2,000; 1 forge, 1 tannery. Cap. in manufac. $200. Pop. 424.

OHIO, t., Warwick co., Ia. It has 3 sch. 100 scholars. Pop. 690.

OHIO, t., Boone co., Ill. It has 1 sch. 30 scholars. Pop. 143.

OHIO CITY, Brooklyn t., Cuyahoga county, O.,

145 N. N. E. Columbus, 360 W. Situated on Lake Erie, at the mouth of the Cuyahoga r., opposite to Cleveland. The ground on which it stands is uneven, and presents many fine situations, which overlook the lake, the city of Cleveland, and surrounding country. It has an elegant Episcopal, a Presbyterian, and other churches, a considerable number of fine stores and neat buildings. A bridge crosses the Cuyahoga a little above the place, and a floating bridge and ferry connect it with Cleveland. It contains a large iron foundry, and a number of mechanic shops. The harbor, at the mouth of the Cuyahoga, it has in common with Cleveland. It has 7 stores, cap. $13,500; 7 com'n houses, cap. $2,000; 3 furnaces. Pop. 1,577.

OHIOPTLE FALLS, Pa. is a cataract in the Youghiogeny r., at the head of boat navigation, where it passes Laurel Hill, 60 ms. above its junction with the Monongahela. The river has a perpendicular fall of about 30 feet, and a total descent of 60 feet in the space of a mile.

OHIOVILLE, p-v., Ohio t., Beaver co., Pa., 243 w. by n. Harrisburg, 269 W. It contains 2 stores and 30 dwellings.

OHLS TOWN, p-o., Trumbull co., O.
OIL, creek, Pa. enters Alleghany r., 8 miles e. Franklin. On its bank, near the boundary between Venango and Crawford counties, is a spring, on the surface of which floats an oil, which has valuable medicinal properties, from which the cr. derives its name.

OIL CREEK, p-t., Crawford co., Pa., 237 n. w. by w. Harrisburg, 306 W. Drained by Oil cr. and its branches. It has 6 stores, 6 sch. 80 scholars. Pop. 738.

OIL SPRING, p-o., Cuba t., Alleghany co., N. Y., 280 w. by s. Albany, 320 W.

There were in 1840, neat cattle 54,799, sheep 50,218, swine 47,084; wheat 94,774 bushels produced, rye 326,668, Ind. corn 410,194, buckwheat 112,883, barley 1,879, oats 417,701, potatoes 359,563, hops 1,845 pounds; value of the products of the dairy, $569,866; 471 stores, cap. $1,191,925; 21 lumber yards, cap. $85,000; 3 furnaces, 14 fulling m., 13 woollen fac., 2 cotton fac. 3,530 sp., 28 tanneries, 41 distilleries, 1 brewery, 3 potteries, 4 flouring m., 58 grist m., 100 saw m., 4 paper fac., 6 printing offices, 1 bindery, 2 periodicals, 5 weekly newspapers. Cap. in manufac. $1,515,415. 21 acad. 1,409 students, 170 sch. 8,727 scholars. Pop. 50,739.

ORANGE, county, Va. Situated in the central part of the state, and contains 380 square miles. Rapidan r. runs on its n. border. Drained by branches of North Anna and Rivanna rivers. The surface is hilly; soil, fertile. Capital, Orange C. H. There were in 1840, neat cattle 7,399, sheep 10,708, swine 15,026; wheat 97,747 bush. produced, rye 8,430, Indian corn 394,784, buckwheat 114, 024, potatoes 20,897, tobacco 416,385 pounds, cotton 2,061; 15 stores, cap. $95,300; 8 smelting houses, producing gold to the amount of $84,000; 7 tanneries, 6 flouring m., 24 grist m., 20 saw m. Cap. in manufactures $115,600. 5 acad. 41 students, 26 sch. 347 scholars. Pop. whites 3,575, slaves 5,364, free col'd 186; total, 9,125.

ORANGE, county, N. C. Centrally situated toward the n. part of the state, and contains 1,300 sq. ms. Drained by branches of Neuse and Haw rivers. Capital, Hillsboro'. There were in 1840, neat cattle 9,507, sheep 46,340, swine 28,131; wheat 87,579 bush. produced, rye 2,643, Indian corn 398,426, oats 81,613, potatoes 14,847, tobacco 262,883 pounds, cotton 253,437; 12 stores, cap. $73,000; 3 cotton fac. 2,360 sp., 11 tanneries, 11 distilleries, 1 pottery, 18 flouring m., 27 grist m., 25 saw m., 3 oil m. Cap. in manufac. $102,880. 5 acad. 209 students, 7 sch. 157 scholars. Pop. whites 16,771, slaves 6,954, free col'd 613; total, 24,356.

ORANGE, county, Ia. Centrally situated toward the e. part of the state, and contains 400 sq. ms. Drained by Lost r., and Lick and Patoka creeks, which afford good water power. The surface is hilly and broken. The macadamized road from New Albany to Vincennes is located through the co. Capital, Paoli. There were in 1840, neat cattle 7,508, sheep 15,678, swine 22,230; wheat 140,864 bush. produced, rye 1,991, Ind. corn 529,927, oats 149,796, tobacco 268,527 pounds, sugar 22,968; 27 stores, cap. $39,925; 5 tanneries, 4 distilleries, 3 potteries, 14 grist m., 5 saw m., 2 oil m., 1 printing office, 1 periodical, 1 weekly newspaper. Cap. in manufac. $51,082. 40 sch. 974 scholars. Pop. 9,602.

ORANGE, p-t., Orange co., Vt., 14 s. e. Montpelier, 527 W. The soil is cold and wet, but adapted to grazing; the surface is uneven. The rocks are chiefly granite, in which are found beautiful small plates of white mica, several inches square. Drained by Jail branch, which flows into the s.

branch of Onion r., and by head branches of Wait's r., which flow into Connecticut r. It has 2 stores, cap. $3,000; 3 tanneries, 2 potteries, 1 printing office, 1 weekly newspaper, 5 grist m., 7 saw m., 1 oil m. Capital in manufac. $92,700. 12 sch. 323 scholars. Pop. 984.

ORANGE, t., Grafton co., N. H., 40 n. w. Concord. The surface is uneven; soil, generally productive. It has a pond in the s. w. part, the outlet of which flows into Smith's r. On the borders of this pond is found a yellow paint. Ochre is also found, and exported in large quantities. Chartered in 1769, by the name of Cardigan, which is now the name of a mountain in its s. e. part. It has 1 pottery, 2 grist m., 2 saw m., 4 sch. 207 scholars. Pop. 463.

ORANGE, p-t., Franklin co., Mass., 74 w. Boston, 415 W. The surface is uneven and rough; soil, adapted to grazing. Drained by Miller's r., which affords good water power. Incorporated in 1783. It has 6 stores, cap. $15,100; 1 tannery, 2 grist m., 7 saw m. Cap. in manufac. $9,250. 12 sch. 424 scholars. Pop. 1,501.

ORANGE, t., New Haven co., Ct., 4 s. w. New Haven. Organized in 1822, from New Haven and Milford. The v., formerly called West Haven, is a neat and quiet place, and contains a Congregational and an Episcopal church. There is a Congregational church in the parish formerly called North Milford. Some silver and copper ore have been obtained here. Drained by Wopewaug r. There are in the t. 3 stores, capital $1,800; 4 grist m., 3 saw m. Cap. in manufac. $10,800. 8 sch. 423 scholars. Pop. 1,329.

ORANGE, p-t., Steuben co., N. Y., 201 w. by s. Albany, 313 W. The surface is elevated and rolling; soil, adapted to grass and to grain. Drained by Mead's cr. It has 2 stores, capital $5,000; 1 tannery, 6 saw m. Cap. in manufac. $250. 10 sch. 525 scholars. Pop. 1,824.

ORANGE, p-t., Essex co., N. J., 44 n. w. Newark, 53 n. e. Trenton, 219 W. The surface is mountainous or rolling; soil, red shale, generally well cultivated. Drained by Second river and branches of Rahway r. The v. extends 2 or 3 miles along the turnpike road, and contains 4 churches—1 Episcopal, 2 Presbyterian, and 1 Methodist—10 stores, 2 saw m., and about 220 dwellings. Near it is a chalybeate spring, much resorted to. The v. of South Orange is 5 ms. w. Newark, and contains 1 Presbyterian church, 1 store, 1 paper factory, and about 30 dwellings. There are in the t. 10 stores, cap. $27,800; 1 tannery. Cap. in manufac. $76,750. 8 schools 330 scholars. Pop. 3,261.

ORANGE, t., Cuyahoga co., O. The e. branch of Chagrin r. crosses its s. e. corner, where is Chagrin falls, where the water falls over a rock 23 feet perpendicularly, affording good water power, where is a thriving v. It has 4 stores, cap. $5,000; 1 fulling m., 1 woollen fac., 1 flouring m., 1 grist m., 5 saw m. Cap. in manufac. $3,050. 8 sch. 380 scholars. Pop. 1,113.

ORANGE, t., Hancock co., O. It has 3 sch. 101 scholars. Pop. 314.

ORANGE, t., Meigs co., O. It has 1 store, cap. $200; 2 grist m., 3 saw m. Capital in manufac. $2,200. 6 sch. 230 scholars. Pop. 830.

ORANGE, t., Shelby co., O. It has 1 fulling m., 1 woollen fac., 2 flouring m., 2 grist m., 3 saw m. Cap. in manufac. $3,730. 2 sch. 55 sch'l's. Pop. 783.

OREGON TERRITORY.

THE Oregon Territory consists of a large extent of country lying between the Rocky mountains and the Pacific ocean, and drained by the Columbia river and its tributaries. The boundaries of this country are not entirely settled. The natural boundaries of this territory are—on the east, the Rocky mountains, extending about 900 miles from the 41° to the 54° n. lat.; on the south, the Snowy mountains, extending from the Rocky mountains to Cape Mendocino, on the Pacific, in 40° n. lat.; on the west, the Pacific ocean, about 500 miles due n. to Cape Flattery, at the entrance of the Strait of Fuca, about lat. n. 49°; and on the north, by a line extending from Cape Flattery about 120 miles n. e., and thence a line along the highlands separating the waters of the Columbia from those of Frazer's river, to the Rocky mountains. The country thus described contains about 350,000 square miles. The United States claim the country from the 43° to the 54° of n. lat.; while the British urge their claim to the country, as far south as the Columbia river; and both parties occupy the country.

The territory drained by the Columbia presents a constant succession of mountain ridges and valleys, or plains of small extent. The principal ridges are two in number, besides the Rocky mountains, running nearly parallel to each other and to the coast; and the country is thus divided into three great regions, which differ materially in climate, soil, and productiveness. The first region, or low country, is that between the coast and the chain of mountains nearest to the sea; the second region is between the mountains nearest the sea and the middle ridge, called the Blue mountains; and the third region or high country, is between the Blue mountains and the Rocky mountains. All these divisions are crossed by the Columbia, the main stream of which is formed in the middle region, by the union of several branches flowing from the Rocky mountains, and receiving in their course supplies from innumerable smaller tributaries, draining the intermediate countries.

The distance from the coast to the nearest chain is, in some places, 100 miles; in others much less. The intervening country is crossed in various directions by low ridges connected with the principal chain, some of them parallel to it, and others stretching toward the ocean. From this region the Willamette river comes more than 200 miles, in a direction nearly due n., and enters the Columbia on its s. side. The valley through which it passes is said to be the most delightful and fertile in Northwestern America. The climate of the region between the ocean and the first range, though not unhealthy, is not very favorable to agriculture. The summer is warm and dry. From April to October, while the westerly winds prevail, rain seldom falls in any part of Oregon; during the other months, when the south wind blows constantly, the rains are almost incessant in the lower region, though sometimes the dry season continues there longer. Further from the Pacific, the rains are less frequent and abundant; and near the Rocky mountains they are reduced to a few showers in the spring. In the valleys of the low country snow is rarely seen, and the ground is so little frozen that ploughing may generally be done during the whole winter. Most of the productions of the northern states, excepting Indian corn, succeed tolerably well. Horses and neat cattle will subsist without fodder through the winter. The second bottoms of the rivers, being above inundation, are extremely fertile, and prairies are considerably numerous and extensive. The forests on the uplands, although the soil is tolerably good, abound with such enormous trees, as almost to defy cultivation. A fir tree growing near Astoria, on the Columbia, 8 miles from the sea, was 46 feet in circumference 10 feet from the ground, and 153 feet in length before giving off a single branch, and not less than 300 feet in its whole height. Another tree of the same species, on the banks of the Umpqua, was 57 feet in circumference, and 216 feet in length below its branches; and sound pines from 200 to 280 feet in height, and from 20 to 40 feet in circumference, are not uncommon.

The middle region of Oregon, between the mountains nearest the coast and the Blue mountains on the east, is more elevated and dry, and less fertile than the low country. It consists chiefly of plains, between ridges of mountains, the soil of which is generally a yellow sandy clay, covered with grass, small shrubs, and prickly pears. Timber is very scarce; the trees are of soft and useless woods, such as cotton-wood, sumac, and willow, which are found only in the neighborhood of streams.

The climate is salubrious, the air is dry in summer, the days warm, and the nights cool. The rain begins later and ends sooner than in the lower country. This country is poorly adapted to cultivation, but is well suited to grazing, the grass being abundant in a green or dry state through the year. Horses are here reared in abundance by the Indians, some of whom own hundreds of them. The Blue mountains on the e. of this region extend through the whole territory of the Columbia, though frequently broken into several ridges. These mountains are steep, with a volcanic appearance, and their highest peaks are covered with perpetual snow.

The third and last division of Oregon lies between the Blue mountains on the w., and the Rocky mountains on the e. The southern part of this region is a desert of steep rocky mountains, deep narrow valleys, and wide plains covered with sand and gravel. There is little snow in the valleys in the winter, but much on the mountains. It rarely rains, and no dew falls. The difference between the temperature at sunrise and at noon in summer, is often 40 degrees.

The Columbia is the great river of this territory. The northern branch, which retains the name of the principal stream, rises in the Rocky mountains, in about 54° of n. lat., and pursues a southern course to lat. 52°, where it is joined by two other streams, one coming from the s. along the base of the Rocky mountains, and the other rising in a gorge of that chain in lat. 53°, its head being a small lake, which is within a few feet of another, whence the waters run into the Athabasca, one of the branches of McKenzie's river, which flows to the Arctic ocean. Two hundred miles south of the junction, the Columbia receives McGillivray's river, and a little lower down Clark's river, which, at the place of union, is nearly as large as the Columbia. The sources of Clark's river are near those of the Missouri, and the intervening ridge is not very high, allowing of an easy pass across the mountains. In its course, Clark's river spreads out into a lake, 35 miles long and 5 or 6 broad, situated in a rich valley, surrounded by snow-clad mountains of great elevation. Just before the passage of the Columbia through the Blue mountains, Clark's river enters it; and just above its entrance are the Kettle falls in Clark's river. Thence the Columbia flows w. 100 miles to its junction with the Okannagan, a large stream from the n. In lat. 46° 8' the Columbia is joined by Lewis river, its great southern branch. It rises in an angle formed by the junction of Rocky and Snowy mountains, between the 49° and 44° of n. lat., near the sources of the Colorado, the Platte, the Yellow Stone, and the Missouri rivers. It thence flows along the foot of the Snowy mts. to the Blue mts., through one ridge of which it passes near the 43° of lat., having there the Salmon or Fishing falls. It then runs n. w. to its junction with the Columbia, having received several small rivers in its course, the largest of which are Wapiticacos and Salmon rivers from the e. The Columbia, just below the junction of its 2 great branches, receives the Walla-walla, Falls, and other rivers from the south, and then passes the range of mountains nearest the Pacific, in lat. 46°. Below the mouth of the Walla-walla, and before passing the mountains, the Columbia has rapids, impassable at low water, but passable at high water, both up and down. Five miles below them are the Dalles, or narrows, where the river rushes through a space not more than 150 feet wide, walled in by basaltic columns on both sides; and 36 miles lower down are the Cascades, which are falls impassable at all times. The tide comes up to the foot of the Cascades, and the navigation is good for vessels not drawing more than 14 feet water, to this point, which is 125 miles from the ocean. The Malmonah or Wallamette enters the Columbia from the s., about 30 miles below Fort Vancouver, and is navigable 25 miles to the falls. From thence the Columbia proceeds 90 miles in a northwesterly course to its entrance into the Pacific ocean.

One of the most striking features in the passes through that immense barrier, the Rocky mountains, which are in general a continuous chain; and which are found, near the s. sources of the Columbia, to contain peaks 15 or 16,000 feet in height; and some n., which are thought to be much higher, and are probably the highest mountains in North America.

"It appears that the points of departure, on the eastern side of the mountains, within the jurisdiction of the United States, of all the passes across, are situated in the vicinity of the Black hills, and between the 43d and 45th parallels of latitude; and that among these passes across the mountains, there is one, and probably but one, sufficiently gradual in its ascents and descents, and sufficiently open, to admit of the passage of wheel carriages, and, consequently, of the ready construction of a convenient and good road. This pass goes through an opening in the Black hills, at about 44° 30' N. lat., and, keeping between these hills and 'Big Horn mountain,' it crosses the tributaries of the Yellow Stone from the s., and finally the Yellow Stone itself. It then crosses the Missouri, or rather the three forks of that r., a short distance above their junction; from whence it pursues a southwestwardly direction, until arriving at the head waters of 'Bitter Root' r.; thence down the valley of this r. to its junction with the 'Salmon, or Lewis's r.:' and thence down the valley of this last r. to its junction with the Columbia. From these facts, then, the vicinity of the Black hills has to be attained, in order to cross the Rocky mountains from the e.; and the best passage of these mountains, at present known, is the one just described. This vicinity is about 650 miles in a northwestwardly course from the position of Council Bluffs. But, from Council Bluffs, the course of the Missouri, by the latest and most authentic observations, is also northwestwardly, and for about 300 miles, nearly parallel to the direction from the Bluffs to the Black hills. The Missouri, therefore, would afford water transportation for about 300 miles of this route."—Report of the Sec. of War, 1842.

There are many lakes in this country, some of which discharge their waters into the sources of the Columbia, and some, having no outlet, are salt.

The principal harbor is formed by the Columbia r., which, between Cape Disappointment or Hancock and Point Adams at its mouth, is 7 miles wide. From each of these points, a sand-bar runs into the water, and the waves of the Pacific, meeting the current of the Columbia with great violence, produce a line of breakers, which renders the navigation hazardous, when the wind is at all high. The bar at its mouth is 5 miles across, and the channel, in one place, only half a mile wide, with a depth of from 4 to 8 fathoms.

The rise and fall of the tides at the mouth of the Columbia is about 8 feet, gradually diminishing until you come to the mouth of the Willamette, where little or no difference in the tides is perceptible. At present, or until the channel is buoyed out, and a light-house erected on Cape Disappointment, it is unsafe for vessels of a greater draught of water than from 10 to 12 feet to attempt entering the Columbia between the months of November and April, on account of the prevalent westerly winds, which make heavy breakers on the bar.

The inhabitants of this region consist of several Indian tribes, amounting in the whole to from 40 to 60 thousand; and establishments formed by the British Hudson's Bay Company for trading with the Indians; together with a few missionary establishments from the United States. "The colony from the United States is situated on the Willamette, a branch of the Columbia, about ninety miles from the mouth of the river, which is undoubtedly the finest grazing and wheat country in Oregon. At present (1841) it consists of about seventy families, who raise considerable grain, and have about three thousand head of cattle. The mission last year raised one thousand bushels of wheat, and made butter, cheese, &c., enough for their own use. They have five hundred head of cattle and two hundred horses; and last year they sowed four hundred bushels of wheat, one hundred and twenty bushels of peas, and planted a large quantity of potatoes and vegetables of all descriptions. They have hogs, poultry, &c., in abundance. Last year they raised over fifteen hundred bushels of potatoes. The extent of the country comprising the Willamette valley is about three hundred miles long and two hundred broad, interspersed with ravines of wood, generally of sufficient quantities for fuel and fencing. The land, in its natural state, is usually ready for the plough, and is very fertile, producing from twenty-five to forty bushels of wheat to the acre; and the climate is so mild that the cattle subsist in the fields without fodder or shelter of any kind being prepared or provided for them through the winter. Salmon can be taken at Willamette falls, with little trouble, from May to September, in almost any quantity."

Fort Vancouver, on the north bank of the Columbia, 90 miles from the ocean, is the principal seat of the British fur trade. It has an enclosure 37 rods long and 18 wide, strongly stockaded, within which are 8 substantial buildings, and many smaller ones. This place has a considerable farming establishment. There are large fertile prairies, which they occupy for tillage and pasture; and forests for fencing materials, and other purposes. In the year 1835, there were at this post 450 neat cattle; 100 horses; 300 sheep; 40 goats, and 300 hogs. They have a garden of 5 acres, abounding with esculent vegetables; with fruits, such as peaches, apples, grapes, strawberries; and some exotics, as figs, oranges, and lemons; and various ornamental plants and flowers. There is a flour mill worked by ox power, and a saw mill, from which boards are sent, even to the Sandwich Islands. There is a school here for the children of the establishment. There are shops for blacksmiths, joiners, carpenters, and a tinner. Fort George, or Astoria, is 8 miles from the mouth of the Columbia; has two buildings, and a garden of 2 acres. Fort Walla-walla is on the a side of the Columbia, 10 miles below the entrance of Lewis river. On the Wallamette river, 55 miles above its entrance into the Columbia, is McKey's settlement, and 12 miles above is Jarvis' settlement, which contain about 90 families. They consist mostly of the retiring servants of the Hudson's Bay Company, with their half-breed families, and a few Americans. Fort Colvin is on the s. side of Clark's river, below the Kettle falls, just before it enters the Columbia. Here is a considerable farming establishment. Fort Okanagan is at the entrance into the Columbia of the river of that name, 100 miles below Clark's river. The Hudson's Bay Company have also several other trading posts in this territory. The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions have seven stations—viz.: 1st. Astoria; 2d. Multnomia, or Wallamette. The 3d. station is on the Columbia r., 140 ms. from its mouth: the river is navigable for large vessels up to this place; above this it becomes rapid and rocky. 4th. Pugets Sound—Here is a fine harbor, which will one day render it an important position, in a commercial point of view: it is on the coast, 140 miles n. of Columbia r. 5th. On the Wallamette, 40 miles above its junction with the Columbia. There is a fall in the Wallamette at this point, supplying great water power: small craft can ascend to this place. 6th. Clatsop, a new station, near the mouth of the Columbia. 7th. On the Umqua r., which empties into the Pacific some 200 miles s. of the Columbia.

On the 7th of May, 1792, Captain Robert Gray, in the ship Columbia, of Boston, discovered and entered the Columbia river; to which he gave the name of his vessel. He was the first person that established the fact of the existence of this great river, and this gives to the United States the right of discovery. In 1804-5, captains Lewis and Clark, under the direction of the government of the United States, explored the country from the mouth of the Missouri to the mouth of the Columbia; and spent the winter of 1805-6 at the mouth of the Columbia. This exploration of the River Columbia, the first ever made, constitutes another ground of the claim of the United States to the country. In 1808, the Missouri Fur Company at St. Louis, established a trading post beyond the Rocky mountains, on the head waters of Lewis river, the first ever formed on any of the waters of the Columbia. In 1810, the Pacific Fur Company under John Jacob Astor, of New York, was formed; and in 1811, they founded Astoria, at the mouth of the Columbia, as their principal trading post, and proceeded to establish others in the interior. A little later in the same year, the North West Company sent a detachment to form establishments on the Columbia; but when they arrived at the mouth of the river, they found the post occupied. In consequence of the exposure of Astoria by the war of 1813, the post was sold out to the North West Company. At the close of the war Astoria was restored, by order of the British government, to its original founders, agreeably to the first article of the Treaty of Ghent. Various attempts have been made since the war to renew the fur trade in Oregon. In 1821, the Hudson's Bay and North West Company, who had previously been rivals, were united, and since that time have greatly extended their establishments in the region of Oregon. The British and American governments have not yet been able to settle by negotiation their conflicting claims to the country. By the treaty for the purchase of Florida, in 1819, the boundary between the Spanish possessions and the United States was fixed in the n. w., at the 42° of n. lat., and the U. S. succeeded to all the title to Oregon which Spain had by right of discovery. At present, the subjects of Great Britain and of the United States exercise equally the right to occupy this country, and navigate its rivers for the purposes of trade, until the subject is disposed of by negotiation. In the mean time, the great capital, and the complete organization of the Hudson's Bay Company, enable them to reap nearly all the advantages of the fur trade in the Territory of Oregon.

OSWEGO, r., N. Y., is formed by the junction of Seneca and Oneida rivers. Seneca r. forms a common outlet of Seneca, Cayuga, Crooked, Canandaigua, Oswego, Skeneateles, and Cross lakes. Oneida r. forms the outlet of Oneida lake. After the junction, Oswego r. pursues a n. w. course, 24 ms., until it enters Lake Ontario, at Oswego v. The r., for some distance, forms the Oswego canal, the falls being overcome by a succession of locks. It affords extensive water power. At its mouth is the commodious harbor of Oswego, which has been much improved by artificial structures. It has falls near its mouth, which prevent its being navigated at all by vessels from the lake.

Oswego, county, N. Y. Situated in the n. part of the state, on Lake Ontario, and contains 923 sq. ms. Drained by Oswego r., Salmon r., and numerous small streams, flowing into Lake Ontario, which bounds it on the n. w. Oneida lake lies on its e. border. Oswego, p.-v., port of entry, and semi-capital of Oswego co., N. Y. It lies on both sides of Oswego r., at its entrance into Lake Ontario, in the towns of Oswego and Scriba, 160 w. n. w. Albany, 373 W. Incorporated in 1823. It is regularly and handsomely laid out with streets 100 feet wide, crossing each other at right angles. The two parts of the village are connected by a bridge, 700 feet long, which cost $6,000. It has a court house, a custom house, 2 banks, with an aggregate capital of $400,000, an insurance company, an incorporated academy, and a flourishing female seminary, 5 churches—3 Presbyterian, 1 Episcopal, 1 Baptist, 1 Methodist, and 1 Roman Catholic, besides a Bethel congregation. It has great facilities for commerce. The Oswego canal, 38 miles, connects it with the Erie canal at Syracuse. A part of the way the Oswego river constitutes the canal, and has a tow-path on its bank. Next to Sacketts Harbor, Oswego has the best harbor on the s. side of Lake Ontario. The harbor is formed by a pier, or mole, built by the U. S., of wood, filled in with stones, and having stones on the outside, on the lake side. This pier is 1,219 feet in length, with an entrance 250 feet wide. On the end of the w. pier is a light-house, and there is another on the hill, on the e. side of the r., near the fort. The water within the pier has a depth of from 10 to 30 feet, and the harbor is spacious and safe. There are owned at this place 6 steamboats and 70 schooners, averaging 100 tons burden, and a large number of canal-boats. The canal-boats are generally built in a very substantial manner, with decks, capable of being towed through the lake. A considerable portion of the trade between New York and the west passes through Oswego and the Welland canal, in Canada, around the Falls of Niagara. The salt from Salina, destined to the west, mostly passes this way. The tonnage of Oswego, in 1840, was 8,346. Oswego possesses great manufacturing facilities. A feeder dam, 7½ feet high, three fourths of a mile above the village, furnishes an abundance of surplus water, which is taken from the canal, with a fall of 19 feet, on the e. side of the r. A canal has also been constructed on the w. side, 62 feet wide and 7 feet deep, at a cost of $75,000, which has a fall at the village of 19 feet. Various manufacturing establishments now exist, and many more might be accommodated. The t. of Oswego had in 1840, mostly in the v. of Oswego, 3 commercial and 4 commission houses in for. trade, cap. $246,000; 32 retail stores, cap. $92,150; 2 lumber yards, cap. $4,000; 2 tanneries, 5 flouring m., 2 grist m., 6 saw m., 3 printing offices, and 4 weekly newspapers. Cap. in manuf. $172,816. 17 sch. 1,047 scholars. Pop. 4,051. Daily lines of steamboats, for the conveyance of passengers, run between Oswego and Lewiston, Kingston, Canada, Sacketts Harbor, and Ogdensburgh, stopping at the intermediate places. On the e. side of the r., near the lake, a tract of land has been ceded to the United States, on which is situated Fort Oswego, for the defence of the harbor, which occupies the site of an old fort of the same name, celebrated in the colonial wars, and which was given up by the British treaty of 1794. The town, with the fort, fell into the hands of the British during the late war; but they were expelled from it, 13 hours afterward, with loss.

The surface of Oswego t. is mostly level; soil, sandy loam, of medium quality. Watered by Oswego r. Drained by several small streams flowing into Lake Ontario, which bounds it on the n.

PACIFIC OCEAN, the, forms the w. boundary of the United States, and therefore deserves a passing notice in this work. It lies between Asia and America, having a breadth of over 10,000 miles. It was first navigated by Magellan, who entered it through the dangerous strait which bears his name; and, after entering it, in sailing for 3 months and 30 days without seeing land, until he arrived at the Ladrone Islands, enjoying an uninterrupted course of fine weather, he named it the Pacific Ocean, though it is not less exposed to storms, in many parts, than the Atlantic. From its apparent situation, on its first discovery, from the Isthmus of Darien, it obtained the name of the Great South Sea, but this name is now obsolete. It is generally divided into the n. and s. Pacific, the equator being the dividing line between them.

It was established by a society, incorporated in 1791, with a capital of $1,000,000, for the establishment of manufactures, projected by Alexander Hamilton. The plans of the company were broad, and after heavy expenditures, through the many obstacles with which manufactures had then to struggle, the objects of the company in a great measure failed, and were abandoned. But their successors took up the work, and have carried it forward to distinguished success. By a dam in the r., 44 feet high, and a canal round the falls, a vast water power is afforded, and a great manufacturing village has grown up. It has a court house and jail, and many spacious manufactories, built chiefly of stone. There are 9 churches—1 Presbyterian, 2 Dutch Reformed, 1 Methodist, 1 Reformed Presbyterian, 1 Episcopal, 1 Baptist, 1 True Reformed Dutch, and 1 Roman Catholic. There is a philosophical society of young men, who have a respectable library, and a mechanics' society for the advancement of science and the mechanic arts, with a library and philosophical apparatus. The Morris canal, which passes near the village, and a railroad to Jersey City, give it an easy access to the city of New York. The falls of the Passaic, at this place, by their picturesque beauties, attract many visitors. The river has a perpendicular fall of 72 feet, and when the water is high, the fall is not only beautiful but grand.

Harrisburg is the seat of government, on the e. bank of the Susquehanna river, 97 miles w. n. w. from Philadelphia.

The Alleghany mountains cross the state from s. w. to n. e., and there are many smaller ranges on each side of the principal ridge, and parallel to it. These mountainous tracts cover all the central part of the state, embracing nearly one seventh of its whole surface. In the s. e. and n. w., the country is either level or moderately hilly. The soil is generally good, and much of it is of a superior quality; the richest tract is in the s. e., on both sides of the Susquehanna. This part of the state has been long settled, and is under high cultivation. Between the head waters of the Alleghany and Lake Erie, the soil is excellent. The most important production of the state by far is wheat, which grows here in great perfection; and next in value is Indian corn. Rye, barley, buckwheat, oats, hemp, and flax are also extensively cultivated. Cherries, peaches, and apples are abundant, and much cider is made. Although the state is better adapted to grain than to grazing, yet in many parts there are large dairies, and fine horses and cattle are raised.

In this state there were in 1840, 361,558 horses and mules; 1,161,576 neat cattle; 1,755,597 sheep; 1,485,360 swine. There was produced poultry to the value of $681,979. There were raised 12,993,218 bushels of wheat; 205,858 of barley; 20,485,747 of oats; 6,544,654 of rye; 2,096,016 of buckwheat; 14,077,363 of Indian corn; 3,028,657 pounds of wool; 48,694 of hops; 32,708 of wax; 9,477,343 bushels of potatoes; 1,302,685 tons of hay; 2,644 of hemp and flax; 325,018 pounds of tobacco; 7,262 of silk cocoons; 2,265,755 of sugar. The products of the dairy amounted to $3,152,987; and of the orchard, $610,512. There were made 14,328 gallons of wine. The value of lumber was $1,146,355.

The mineral wealth of Pennsylvania is very great. Iron ore is widely disseminated, and has been extensively wrought. But the coal regions furnish the most interesting portion of its mineral productions. West of the Alleghany ridge, bituminous coal is found, of an excellent quality, and in inexhaustible quantities. In Pittsburgh and the vicinity it is extensively used for manufacturing purposes. In this region salt springs occur, which afford a strong brine. But the anthracite coal region, e. of the Blue ridge, and between it and the n. branch of the Susquehanna, is immense, and is extensively wrought. The Mauch Chunk, Schuylkill, and Lynken's valley coal-field, extends from the Lehigh, across the head waters of the Schuylkill, and is 65 miles in length, with an average breadth of about 5 miles. The Lehigh coal, procured at the northern portion of this field, is heavy, hard, and difficult of ignition. At Mauch Chunk this coal is found near the surface, and extends to the depth of from 12 to 50 or 60 feet. The Schuylkill coal is from the centre of the above field, burns with less difficulty than the Lehigh, and yields red ashes. The Lackawanna coal-field extends from Carbondale, on the Lackawannock, to 10 miles below Wilkesbarre, on the Susquehanna. This field is made accessible by the Carbondale railroad and the Delaware and Hudson canal, extending to the Hudson river. Limestone is abundant in all parts of the state, and in the s. e. parts a fine marble.

The climate of Pennsylvania is various. In the mountainous region in the interior, the winters are severe. The weather is colder on the western than the eastern side of the mountain ridge, and in both the rivers are frozen between one and two months in the year. In the s. e. portion the winters are mild, and on the whole the climate is healthy.

The Delaware river washes the eastern border of the state, and is navigable for large ships to Philadelphia. The Lehigh, after a course of 75 miles, enters it at Easton. The Schuylkill, 130 miles long, unites with it 6 miles below Philadelphia. The Susquehanna is a large river, which rises in New York, flows s. through this state, and enters the Chesapeake bay, in Maryland. It is much obstructed by falls and rapids. The Juniata rises among the Alleghany mountains, and, after a course of 180 miles, enters the Susquehanna, 11 miles above Harrisburg. The Alleghany river, 400 miles long, from the n., and the Monongahela, 300 miles long, from the s., unite at Pittsburgh, and form the Ohio. The Youghiogeny is a small river which flows into the Monongahela.

Philadelphia, between the Delaware and Schuylkill rivers, and Pittsburgh, at the junction of the Monongahela and Alleghany rivers, are the most commercial places in the state. The other principal towns are Lancaster, Reading, Harrisburg, Easton, York, Carlisle, Alleghany, and Erie.

The exports of the state for the year ending September, 1840, were $6,890,145; and the imports were $8,464,882.

There were 194 commercial and 178 commission houses engaged in foreign trade, with a capital of $3,662,811; there were 6,534 retail drygoods and other stores, with a capital of $35,629,170; there were 5,064 persons engaged in the lumber trade, employing a capital of $2,241,040; 2,146 persons employed in internal transportation, who, with 466 persons employed as butchers, packers, &c., employed a capital of $727,850; 58 persons were employed in the fisheries, with a capital of $16,460.

The manufactures of Pennsylvania are extensive. There were in 1840, home-made or family goods produced to the amount of $1,292,429; 235 woollen manufactories, and 337 fulling mills, employing 2,909 persons, producing articles to the value of $2,298,861, and employing a capital of $1,500,546; 106 cotton manufactories, with 146,494 spindles, employing 5,522 persons, producing articles to the value of $5,013,007, and employing a capital of $3,325,400; 2,977 persons produced 859,686 tons of anthracite coal, with a capital of $4,334,102; 1,798 persons produced 11,620,654 bushels of bituminous coal, with a capital of $300,416; 213 furnaces, producing 98,395 tons of cast iron, and 169 forges, &c., producing 87,244 tons of bar iron, employing 11,522 persons and a capital of $7,781,471; 87 paper manufactories produced to the amount of $792,335, and other paper manufactories to the amount of $95,500, the whole employing 794 persons and a capital of $581,800; hats and caps were manufactured to the amount of $819,431, and straw bonnets to the amount of $90,512, employing 1,467 persons and a capital of $449,107; 1,149 tanneries employed 3,392 persons, and a capital of $2,729,536; 2,132 other leather manufactories, such as saddleries, &c., produced articles to the amount of $3,453,243, employing a capital of $1,249,923; 30 powder mills manufactured 1,184,225 pounds of powder, employing 53 persons and a capital of $66,800; drugs, paints, &c., employed 519 persons, producing articles to the amount of $2,179,625, and turpentine and varnish to the amount of $7,865, the whole employing 519 persons and a capital of $2,179,625; 28 glass-houses, and 15 glass cutting establishments, employed 835 persons, producing articles to the amount of $772,400, with a capital of $714,100; 182 potteries employed 322 persons, producing articles to the amount of $157,902, employing a capital of $75,562; 1,969 persons produced machinery to the value of $1,993,752; 763 persons produced hardware and cutlery to the amount of $783,482; 168 persons produced 5 cannon and 21,571 small-arms; 245 persons manufactured the precious metals to the amount of $2,679,075; 536 persons manufactured granite and marble to the amount of $443,610; 3,858 persons made bricks and lime to the amount of $1,719,796; 2,770 persons manufactured carriages and wagons to the amount of $1,203,732, with a capital of $559,831; 1,005 distilleries produced 6,228,768 gallons, and 87 breweries produced 12,765,974 gallons, employing 1,601 persons and a capital of $1,565,771; 725 flouring mills produced 1,181,530 barrels of flour, and with other mills, employed 7,916 persons, producing articles to the amount of $9,232,515, employing a capital of $7,779,784; 353 persons manufactured 5,097,690 pounds of soap, 2,316,843 pounds of tallow candles, and 5,002 do. of spermaceti candles, employing a capital of $294,442; ships were built to the amount of $668,015; 2,357 persons manufactured furniture to the amount of $1,151,167, with a capital of $714,817; 1,991 brick houses, and 2,406 wooden houses were built, employing 9,881 persons, and cost $5,339,530; 221 printing offices, 46 binderies, 19 daily, 10 semi-weekly, and 162 weekly newspapers, and 42 periodicals, employed 1,702 persons and a capital of $680,340. The whole amount of capital employed in manufactures in the state, was $31,629,415.

The colleges in this state are numerous. The following are their names, location, and the date of their being founded. University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, 1755; Dickinson College, Carlisle, 1783; Jefferson College, Cannonsburg, 1802; Washington College, Washington, 1806; Alleghany College, Meadville, 1815; Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, 1832; Lafayette College, Easton, 1832; Marshall College, Mercersburg, 1836. Besides these are the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, 1765; Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, 1824; Medical Department of Pennsylvania College, Philadelphia, 1839. The Theological Seminary of the Lutheran Church, Gettysburg, 1826; German Reformed, York, 1825; Western Theological Seminary at Alleghany, 1828; Theological Seminary at Cannonsburg; Theological Seminary at Pittsburgh. In all these seminaries there were in 1840, 2,034 students. There were in the state, 290 academies, with 15,970 students, 4,968 primary and common schools, with 179,989 scholars. There were 33,940 persons over 20 years of age who could neither read nor write.

Of the religious denominations, the Presbyterians, including the Associate Reformed, had in 1836, about 400 ministers; the Baptists, 140; the Methodists, 250; German Reformed, 73; Episcopalians, 70; the Friends, 150 congregations. Besides, there are several other denominations less numerous.

In Jan. 1840, there were in this state, 49 banks, with an aggregate capital of $24,286,405, and a circulation of $9,338,636. At the close of 1840, the state debt amounted to $34,723,261.

In the year 1825, Pennsylvania began a splendid course of internal improvements. Her greatest work is a canal from Philadelphia, including a railroad from Johnstown to Hollidaysburg, 37 miles, over the Alleghany to Pittsburgh, 400 miles. There is a tunnel on the railroad 870 feet long, 200 feet below the top of the mountain. The Schuylkill Navigation canal extends 108 ms. from Philadelphia to Port Carbon; the Union canal, 82 ms. from Reading to Middletown; the Lehigh, 84 ms. from Easton to Stoddartsville; the Lackawaxen, 25 ms. from Delaware r. to Honesdale; the Conestoga, 18 ms. from Lancaster to Safe Harbor; the Codorus, 11 ms. from York to Susquehanna river; Bald Eagle, 25 ms. from West Branch canal to Bellefonte; the Susquehanna, 45 ms. from Wrightsville to Havre de Grace, and several small canals.

The railroads of this state are still more numerous. The Columbia, 81 ms. from Columbia to Philadelphia; Valley, 20 ms. from Norristown to Columbia railroad; Harrisburg and Lancaster, 35 ms.; Cumberland Valley, 50 ms. from Harrisburg to Chambersburg; Westchester, 10 ms. from Columbia railroad to Westchester; Franklin, 30 ms. from Chambersburg to Williamsport; York and Wrightsville, 13 ms.; Strasburg, 7 ms. from Cumberland Valley railroad to Strasburg; Philadelphia and Reading, 95 ms. from Reading to Pottsville; Little Schuylkill, 23 ms. from Port Clinton to Tamaqua; Danville and Pottsville, 44½ ms. from Pottsville to Sunbury; Little Schuylkill and Susquehanna, 106 ms. from Tamaqua to Williamsport; Beaver Meadow branch, 12 ms. from Lardner's Gap to Beaver Meadow railroad; Williamsport and Elmira, 73½ ms. between the 3 places; Corning and Blossburg, 40 ms. do.; Mount Carbon, 7½ ms. from Mount Carbon to Norwegian Creek; Schuylkill Valley, 10 ms. from Port Carbon to Tuscarora; branch of do. 15 ms.; Schuylkill, 13 ms. from Schuylkill to the Valley; Mill Creek, 9 ms. from Port Carbon to Coal Mine; Mine Hill and Schuylkill Haven, 20 ms. from Schuylkill Haven to Mine Hill Gap; Mauch Chunk, 9 ms. from Mauch Chunk to Coal Mine; branches of do. 16 ms.; Roon Run, 5½ ms. from Mauch Chunk to Coal Mine; Beaver Meadow, 20 ms. from Parysville to Coal Mine; Hazelton and Lehigh, 8 ms. from Hazelton Mine to Beaver Meadow railroad; Nesquehoning, 5 ms. from Nesquehoning Mine to Lehigh River; Lehigh and Susquehanna, 19½ ms. from White Haven to Wilkesbarre; Carbondale and Honesdale, 17½ ms., connects the 2 places; Lykin's Valley, 16½ ms. from Broad Mountain to Millersburg; Pine Grove, 4 ms. from Pine Grove to Coal Mine; Philadelphia and Trenton, 26½ ms. from Philadelphia to Morrisville; Philadelphia, Germantown, and Norristown, 17 ms. from Philadelphia to Norristown; Germantown branch of do. 4 ms.; Philadelphia and Wilmington, 27 ms. from Philadelphia to Wilmington.

This state was granted to William Penn, of the society of Friends, by James II. of England, in 1681. It had previously been settled by the Swedes and Finns, and conquered by the Dutch in 1654. Penn disposed of 20,000 acres to a company of Friends, for 400 pounds sterling, and a colony of them came over towards the close of the year, and formed a settlement at Philadelphia. It was governed by the proprietors until early in the revolutionary war, when the legislature purchased it, by paying the proprietors 130,000 pounds sterling, in lieu of all quit-rents. This state was the theatre of several hard fought battles in the revolutionary war, particularly of Brandywine and Germantown; and Philadelphia was for some time in the possession of the British.

The constitution of the United States was adopted in convention, December 13th, 1787; yeas 46, nays 23; majority, 23. The United States congress removed from Philadelphia to Washington in 1800.

PENN, township, Philadelphia co., Pa. Situated n. w. of the city of Philadelphia, on which it joins. Schuylkill r. bounds it on the w. The surface is generally level; soil, a productive clay and loam, well cultivated. Drained on the n. w. by Falls run, which affords water power. It is the seat of the Girard college, for which the late Stephen Girard bequeathed $2,000,000. The principal edifice is of white marble, and is 218 feet long and 160 wide, including the platforms which support the columns, and 97 feet high. There are 34 columns, of fine Grecian architecture, of the Corinthian order, around the building, 55 feet high, and 6 feet diameter at the base. The building is incombustible, and will cost over $1,200,000; and thus a large part of the magnificent bequest for the gratuitous education of orphan boys, will be swallowed up in this extravagant expenditure. There are 5 buildings attached to the institution. It has 4 stores, cap. $2,900; 1 furnace, 1 grist m. Cap. in manufac. $76,600. Pop. 3,342.

PENN YAN, p.-v., Milo, t., capital of Yates co., N. Y., 192 w. Albany, 329 W. Situated on the outlet of Crooked lake, which affords water power.

It contains a court house, jail, a bank, an academy, 5 churches—1 Presbyterian, 1 Congregational, 1 Episcopal, 1 Baptist, and 1 Methodist—24 stores, 2 warehouses, 2 flouring m., 2 saw m., 1 furnace, 1 clothier's works, 1 tannery, 1 boat yard, 3 carriage fac., 1 plough fac., 1 tannery, 2 printing offices, each issuing a weekly newspaper, 300 dwellings, and about 1,800 inhabitants. The Crooked Lake canal, 8 ms. long, passes through the place, and through Seneca lake connects it with the Erie canal.

PENOBSCOT, r., the largest river of Maine, consists of two main branches. The larger or western branch rises in the highlands, in the western part of Maine, and which divide it from Canada, and not far from the head waters of the Chandler r., which flows into the St. Lawrence. After a considerable course to the e. it falls into Chesuncook lake, whence passing s. e., and through Pemadumcook and other lakes, it unites with the eastern branch. This branch, called the Sebosis, rises in some small lakes near the head waters of the Aroostook r., and flows nearly s. to the junction, 54 miles above Bangor. After the junction, the river proceeds in a s. e. direction until it receives Mattawamkeag r., from the n. e., which is its principal tributary on the e. side. Its direction is then s. s. w., until it receives the Piscataquia, its chief western tributary; it then holds a direction s. by w. to its entrance into Penobscot bay. Its upper portions have many falls and rapids, furnishing many excellent mill sites. It is about 275 miles long from its source to the ocean. It is navigable 50 ms. from the ocean, to Bangor, for vessels of a large size, and for boats to a considerable distance above that. The tide rises at Bangor more than 20 feet, to which the same causes in a measure contribute, which produce such an enormous tide in the Bay of Fundy—the wedge-like form of the bay, and the current produced by the return of the gulf stream. There is a number of islands in the river above Bangor, the principal of which is Oldtown, the residence of the Penobscot tribe of Indians, who own all the islands in the r. as far as the forks, several ms. above Mattawamkeag r., several of which are considerable, and fertile. They have a considerable annuity, secured to them by the state. There are several flourishing towns on the Penobscot bay and river. On the e. side are Castine, Bucksport, and Orrington. On the w. side are Thomaston, Camden, Belfast, Prospect, Frankfort, Hamden, Bangor, and Orono. The Penobscot bay is a fine body of water, and extends from the ocean, at Owl's Head, to Belfast bay, about 20 miles. Across the mouth of the bay, from Owl's Head to Burnt Coat island, is about 30 miles. It embosoms a number of fine islands, the principal of which are Deer island, Fox islands, Isle of Haut, Long island, and some others. From a hill back of Camden, and from other points, the view of this bay, with its islands and numerous vessels, is exceedingly beautiful. The bay and river contain many fine harbors, the principal of which are Castine, Belfast, Bucksport, Bangor, and others.

PENOBSCOT, collection dist. Tonnage, 1840, 37,130.

PENOBSCOT, county, Me. Situated in the n. part of the state, and is of great extent, though but a small portion of it is settled. Drained in its upper parts by the head branches of Aroostook and the w. branch of Penobscot rivers, and has numerous lakes. In its lower and settled parts are Penobscot r. and its branches, Mattawamkeag, Seboc, and Kanduskeag rivers. The surface is undulating, with some mountains in its n. part; soil, generally fertile. Capital, Bangor. There were in 1840, neat cattle 19,416, sheep 35,312, swine 9,442; wheat 112,041 bush. produced, rye 9,767, Ind. corn 35,694, buckwheat 3,528, barley 7,919, oats 103,526, potatoes 923,623, sugar 12,303 pounds; 11 commercial and com. houses in for. trade, cap. $98,500; 226 stores, cap. $435,731; 2 lumber yards, cap. $11,600; 10 fulling m., 2 woollen fac., 21 tanneries, 1 pottery, 4 flouring m., 28 grist m., 242 saw m., 1 paper fac., 3 printing offices, 2 binderies, 1 daily, 2 weekly newspapers. Cap. in manufac. $955,674. 4 acad. 275 students. 270 sch. 14,797 scholars. Pop. 45,705.

PENOBSCOT, p-t., Hancock co., Me., 8 n. by E. Castine, 78 e. by N. Augusta, 674 W. Situated on the e. side of Penobscot r. An arm of Penobscot bay sets up from the s. w., and affords facilities for navigation. A large pond lies partly in its n. e. part. It has good water power, and exports lumber. The soil is fertile, adapted to grain. Incorporated in 1817. It has 2 stores, cap. $1,300; 3 grist m., 3 saw m. Cap. in manufac. $1,930. 13 sch. 526 scholars. Pop. 1,474.

PENSACOLA, bay, Flor., sets up from the Gulf of Mexico, about 11 ms. from the gulf, and is divided into 3 parts. The w. arm, called Escambia bay, is 11 ms. long and 4 broad, and receives Escambia r. from the n. The middle arm is called Yellow Water bay, of about the size of Escambia, and receives Yellow Water r., through several mouths. Black Water bay, 7 ms. long and 2 broad, is attached to the n. w. end of Yellow Water bay, is full of islands, and receives Black Water r. and Cedar c. East bay is 7 ms. long, where it tapers to a small r., near St. Rosa's sound. This admits frigates of the largest class, and is entirely sheltered from all winds. Its entrance, between Fort Barancas and the w. end of St. Rosa island, is about three fourths of a mile wide, and is well defended. This harbor has 22 feet water on the bar at low tide, is completely land locked, and is the best on the Gulf of Mexico.

PENSACOLA, city, port of entry, and capital of Escambia co., Flor., 242 w. Tallahassee, 1,080 W. Situated on Pensacola bay, 10 miles from its entrance into the Gulf of Mexico, on a dry sandy plain, 40 or 50 feet above the level of the water. The streets are wide, crossing each other at right angles. It has 2 public squares, each 300 by 300 feet. It contains a court house, 2 churches—1 Roman Catholic and 1 Episcopal—a market house, custom house, and public store, and about 2,000 inhabitants. A wharf extends 5 or 600 feet into the bay. The U. S. navy yard is 8 ms. from the city, and 5 from the entrance of the harbor, and covers nearly 80 acres of ground, enclosed by a high brick wall. It contains houses for the officers, and a naval store and other buildings adapted to the convenience of the establishment. The grounds are laid out in a tasteful manner. Tonnage 1840, 2,932.

PEORIA, lake, Ill., is an expansion of the Illinois r., commencing at Peoria v., extending about 20 ms. in a n. e. direction. It is much wider than the r., and has very little current. The water is clear, with a gravelly bottom. It is divided into 2 parts by the Narrows, and abounds with various kinds of fish, which are abundantly taken with the seine.

PEORIA, county, Ill. Situated toward the w. part of the state, and contains 648 sq. ms. Organized in 1825. The surface is gently rolling; soil, very fertile. Illinois r. runs on its e. boundary. Drained by Spoon r., and Copperas, Kickapoo, and Senatchwine creeks. Capital, Peoria. There were in 1840, neat cattle 4,843, sheep 3,354, swine 24,077; wheat 43,240 bush. produced, Ind. corn 218,540, barley 5,010, oats 68,416, potatoes 30,039; 2 commission houses, cap. $10,000; 19 stores, cap. $150,000; 1 tannery, 1 brewery, 2 printing offices, 2 weekly newspapers. Cap. in manufac. $16,275. 27 sch. 1,161 sch'l's. Pop. 6,153.

PEORIA, p-o., Wyoming co., N. Y., 238 w. Albany, 356 W.

PEORIA, p-v., capital of Peoria co., Ill., 70 n. Springfield, 784 W. Situated on the w. bank of Illinois r. at the outlet of Peoria lake. The situation is beautiful. The first bank of the r. gradually rises from 6 to 13 feet above high water mark, and extends back a quarter of a mile from the r. to the second bank, which rises 5 or 6 feet above the first bank. The second bank extends back to the bluff, which are from 60 to 100 feet high, by a steep ascent, and present from their top an extensive and beautiful prospect. It contains a court house, jail, an academy, 6 churches—2 Presbyterian, 1 Baptist, 1 Methodist, 1 Episcopal, and 1 Unitarian—21 stores, cap. $160,000; 1 tannery, 1 brewery, 2 printing offices, 2 steam saw m., 2 weekly newspapers. Cap. in manufac. $16,275. 4 sch. 236 scholars. Pop. 1,467.

PHILADELPHIA, the largest city of Pennsylvania, and the second in size and population in the United States, is situated between the Delaware and the Schuylkill rivers, extending 2 miles from the one to the other, and 41 miles along the Delaware, 5 miles above their junction, and 130 ms. by the course of the Delaware from the ocean. It is in 39° 56' 51" n. lat. and 75° 10' 05" w. lon. from Greenwich; and 1° 46' 30" e. from Washington. It is 300 ms. s. w. from Boston; 86 s. w. from New York; 97 n. e. from Baltimore; 93 e. by s. Harrisburg; 138 n. e. from Washington. It contained in 1790, 42,500 inhabitants; in 1800

70,287; in 1810, 96,664; in 1820, 119,325; in 1830, 167,811; in 1840, 220,423. Of these there were engaged in agriculture, 693; in commerce, 7,912; in manufactures and trades, 24,900; navigating the ocean, rivers, &c. 2,050; learned professions, &c. 1,549.

The city is situated on a plain, the highest point of which is elevated 64 feet above the ordinary high water mark in the river. The city proper is nearly in the form of a parallelogram, having the Delaware on the east, the Schuylkill on the west, Vine-street on the n., and South or Cedar street on the s. But there are five adjoining districts which properly belong to Philadelphia, though they have incorporations and municipal authorities, entirely distinct from the city proper, and from each other. They are the Northern Liberties, Kensington, and Spring Garden on the n.; and Southwark and Moyamensing on the s.

The part of the city compactly built is about 8½ miles in circumference. The two principal streets are Market or High street, which extends from the Delaware to the Schuylkill, e. and w. through the middle of Philadelphia proper; and Broad-street, which runs n. and s., crossing Market-street at right angles, near the centre of the city plat. The other streets of this portion cross each other at right angles. Market or High street is 100 feet broad, and Broad-street is 113 feet; Arch or Mulberry street is 66 feet wide; the other streets are 50 feet. The adjoining districts have not the same regularity in their plan as the city proper, nor do the whole connect in one consistent and uniform plan. While the city proper has very little variety of surface, on the Delaware above this, and on the Schuylkill, above and below, there are many commanding situations and much varied scenery. The whole number of streets in the city and districts is over 600. There are common sewers which convey the filth of the streets into the Delaware. The houses are built with great uniformity, commodiousness, and neatness, and the streets are kept very clean.

The largest ships come up the Delaware to the city; and it is here nearly a mile wide to Camden, which lies opposite, in New Jersey. The Schuylkill is also navigable for smaller vessels to the bridge; and it is here 500 feet wide. Both rivers are generally for some time frozen in the winter, which constitutes a serious obstacle to the commerce of Philadelphia. The amount of the tonnage of this port in 1840, was 103,944.

Among the public buildings, that of the late United States Bank, on Chestnut-street, is conspicuous. It is after the model of the Parthenon, at Athens. The building is 87 feet in front, and 161 deep, and has in front 8 Doric columns, 4 feet 6 inches in diameter, and 27 feet high. The interior is as splendid as the exterior is imposing. It was 5 years in building, and cost $500,000; but on the demise of the old bank, it was sold to its successor for $300,000. The Bank of Pennsylvania is on Second, below Chestnut street. The entire building is 125 feet by 51. It has 2 Ionic porticoes of six columns each. The banking room is circular, 45 feet in diameter, with a dome, and lighted by a lantern in the centre. It has a fine lot in the rear, which is beautifully laid out. The United States Mint, corner of Chestnut and Juniper streets, has Ionic porticoes of more than 120 feet long on each front, and is a splendid building, first occupied in 1830. The interior has various apartments, devoted to the different processes of coining. The Merchants' Exchange, between Dock, Walnut, and Third streets, is 95 feet by 114, with a recessed portico of 4 Corinthian columns on one front; and a semi-circular portico of 8 columns on the other. It is considered as one of the most beautiful structures in the United States. The basement contains various offices, with the post-office. The great hall is embellished by paintings and ornamental devices. The above buildings are all of white marble. The Girard Bank is on Third, below Chestnut street. Its front is of white marble, enriched with a portico with six Corinthian columns of the same material. The other sides of the building are of brick. It has extensive grounds, neatly laid out and ornamented. The U. States Naval Asylum or Marine Hospital, is 386 feet in front and 175 feet deep. It has a portico in the centre of 8 Ionic columns. There are 180 dormitories, capable of lodging 400 persons. The whole is surrounded by ornamented grounds. The cost of the establishment was $300,000. The Almshouse, on the w. bank of the Schuylkill, consists of a centre building with wings, together with two detached buildings, one at each end. It has 180 acres of ground, ten of which are occupied by its enclosures. Girard College is about 1 mile from the city, is on a tract of 45 acres of ground, and consists of a centre building, including the portico, 160 feet by 218, and is entirely surrounded by a splendid colonnade, with pillars 6 feet in diameter and 55 feet high, with beautiful Corinthian capitals; and two other buildings, each 52 feet wide and 125 feet long. This establishment, solely for the education of orphan children, was founded by a bequest, for the purpose, of the late Stephen Girard, of over $2,000,000. Among the public buildings of Philadelphia, the venerable old State House in Chestnut-st., erected in 1735, in which Congress sat when Independence was declared, and where the convention sat that formed the Constitution of the United States, should not be overlooked. The room in which they sat is carefully preserved without alteration. The original bell, cast many years before the declaration of independence, is preserved in the tower of the steeple, and has this inscription, "Proclaim LIBERTY throughout this land, unto all the inhabitants thereof." Leuiticus, xiv. 10.

Philadelphia has many public squares, none of which are very large, but many of them finely laid out and ornamented. Independence Square is directly back of the old State House, is surrounded by a brick wall, on the top of which is an iron fence, is laid out with ground walks, grass plats, and shaded with trees. Here, from the steps of the State House, the Declaration of Independence was first read to the assembled people; and here meetings are now frequently held for political purposes. Washington Square, between Walnut and Locust, Sixth and Washington streets, which is an elegant promenade, was formerly, in time of the yellow fever, a burial place. It is surrounded with an iron railing, and finely ornamented with walks, trees, and shrubbery. Franklin Square is finely ornamented, and has in its centre a magnificent fountain; but was also once a cemetery of the German Society. Logan Square, and Rittenhouse Square, are also fine openings, as yet less ornamented. Penn Square, at the intersection of Broad and Market streets, was once the finest public ground in the city. It was laid in a circle, and had in its centre a fine marble building, in the form of a temple, containing a steam engine for raising the Schuylkill water. The water works have been removed, and Market and Broad streets have been run through it, dividing it into 4 parts.

Among the public works of the city, the Fairmount Water Works stand pre-eminent. They are on the e. bank of the Schuylkill, 2 miles n. w. from the city. They occupy an area of 30 acres, consisting mostly of a hill, 100 feet high. On the top of the hill are 4 reservoirs, with an aggregate capacity of 22,000,000 gallons. The whole is surrounded by a substantial pale-fence, around which is a gravelled walk. A dam is made across the Schuylkill, and the water from the pond moves forcing pumps, which raise the water of the river to the reservoirs, from which it is distributed in pipes over the city. The scenery at the water works has great variety and beauty. At the western termination of Market-street is a substantial bridge over the Schuylkill, 1,350 feet long, including the abutments, and 42 feet wide. It has 3 stone piers and 3 arches, and cost $300,000. There is a viaduct over the Schuylkill, built by the Philadelphia, Wilmington, and Baltimore railroad company, which also admits the passage of ordinary carriages. These are the only bridges which cross the Schuylkill, near the city.

Numerous steamboats and other craft afford a constant and easy communication with New York and Baltimore; and railroads in various directions, make Philadelphia a great thoroughfare. By the Pennsylvania canal, and a short railroad over the Alleghany mts., this city has a commercial connection with Pittsburgh, and the great valley of the Mississippi. There were in 1840, 184 foreign commercial and 44 commission houses, with a cap. of $2,049,501; 1,791 retail stores, with a cap. of $17,082,384; 48 lumber yards, with a cap. of $1,118,500; 2 furnaces, with a cap. of $259,050; machinery was manufactured to the amount of $915,864; hardware and cutlery, $154,400; the precious metals, $2,631,510; of various metals, $676,060; 15 woolen fac., cap. $135,100; 17 cotton fac., with 17,922 sp.; 14 printing and dyeing estab., with a total cap. of $474,000; 8 tanneries, with a cap. of $117,500; 11 distilleries, 16 breweries, with a cap. of $415,200; paints and drugs, $1,839,050; 1 glass fac. and 1 glass cutting estab., with a cap. of $23,500; 6 potteries, with a cap. of $24,000; 12 sugar refineries produced $90,000; 6 paper fac. produced $31,250; 12 rope walks, with a cap. of $82,900; 1 saw m., 1 flouring m., 1 grist m., cap. $8,000; furniture to the amount of $526,200; 808 brick and stone houses, and 62 wooden houses, cost $2,751,393; 46 printing offices, 12 binderies, 8 daily, 16 weekly, 7 semi-weekly newspapers, and 26 periodicals, employed 911 persons, with a cap. of $252,600. Total cap. in manufac. $6,796,993. There were 5 colleges, with 737 students, 109 academies and grammar schools, with 7,610 students, 167 common and primary schools, with 23,678 scholars.

The benevolent institutions of Philadelphia are exceedingly numerous. Among them the Pennsylvania Hospital was founded in 1750, through the instrumentality of Dr. Franklin and others. The state granted £2,000, and the same sum was, by stipulation, raised by subscription; the proprietaries made a further donation, and the building was commenced in 1753. In a fine area in front of the hospital, stands a full length statue of William Penn, in bronzed lead. This institution is well managed; and they have recently erected a separate institution for the insane. The House of Refuge for juvenile delinquents; the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb; the Institution for the Blind, and the Philadelphia Orphan Asylum, are useful establishments.

There are in the City and Liberties 13 banks, with an aggregate capital of $14,550,000, besides the United States Bank of Pennsylvania, whose capital was $25,000,000; and 23 insurance companies.

The University of Pennsylvania was founded in 1791, by the union of two previous institutions, the first of which was instituted in 1755. It has 14 instructors, 116 students, and 5,000 volumes in its library. The most flourishing department is the medical, which has 7 professors and over 400 students, and is the most distinguished institution of the kind in the United States. Jefferson Medical College was formerly connected with the college at Cannonsburg, but is now independent, founded in 1824; it has 7 professors and 145 students. The medical department of Pennsylvania College, founded in 1839, has 6 professors and 60 students. The American Philosophical Society was founded in 1740, chiefly through the exertions of Dr. Franklin. In 1769 it was united with another similar society. It has an excellent library and a collection of minerals. The Academy of Natural Sciences, founded in 1817, has a library of over 9,000 volumes. The Franklin Institute was founded in 1824, and consists of 3,000 manufacturers, artisans, and mechanics. The Athenæum, founded in 1815, has a good library and reading room. The Mercantile Library, formed in 1822, has 5 or 6,000 volumes, chiefly relating to commerce and its kindred subjects. The Historical Society has issued many useful publications relating to the early history of Pennsylvania. The Philadelphia Library Company, established through the influence of Dr. Franklin, has a library of over 42,000 volumes.

There are about 100 churches in the city, of which the Presbyterians have 24; the Episcopalians 19; the Methodists 19; the Baptists 17; the Roman Catholics 6, &c.

Among the places of amusement there are 4 or 5 theatres, a number of public gardens, and the Philadelphia Museum, the best in the United States.

The government of the city proper, is in the hands of a mayor, a select council of 12, and a common council of 20 members. One third of the select, and the whole of the common council, are chosen annually by the people, and the council elect a mayor. The aldermen, who are 15 in number, are appointed by the governor to act with the mayor, as judges, during good behavior; and the aldermen act as justices of the peace. The whole legislative power is in the councils, of which the select council is a kind of senate.

Southwark is governed by 15 commissioners, and was incorporated in 1794. The Northern Liberties, incorporated in 1803, is governed by 5 commissioners.

Philadelphia was first surveyed and regulated in 1682. It had previously been in possession of the Swedes, some of whom came into the country, bordering on Delaware bay, as early as 1637. It was named after a city in Asia Minor, and the plan is said to have been suggested by that of ancient Babylon, and according to the original design of William Penn, its original founder and proprietor, was designed to have equalled that ancient capital in extent; but the idea was soon abandoned, and the charter of 1701 restricted it to the present boundaries of the city proper. Penn's country residence was at Pennsbury Manor, above Bristol, in which was a large Hall of Audience, where he held treaties with the Indians; and the oak arm-chair in which he sat, is now in the Pennsylvania Hospital. The first Congress assembled in Philadelphia, Sept. 5th, 1774, and adopted a declaration of rights; on July 4th, 1776, the declaration of independence; in the autumn of 1776, retired to Baltimore; Sept. 26th, 1777, the city fell into the hands of the British, who occupied it until the 18th of June following. May 17th, 1787, a convention met here, and in Sept. 17th, following, agreed on a constitution for the United States. In 1793 and 1798 the yellow fever raged in the city.

PITTSBURG, t., Coos co., N. H. Situated in the n. e. extremity of the state. It contains Connecticut lake, and several head branches of Connecticut r.

PITTSBURGH, city, port of entry, and capital of Alleghany co., Pa., is situated at the confluence of the Alleghany and Monongahela rivers, where they form the Ohio, which is here a quarter of a mile wide. It is in 40° 32' n. lat., and 80° 2' w. lon., 230 w. n. w. Baltimore, 297 w. by n. Philadelphia, 200 w. n. w. Harrisburg, 226 W. Pop. 1810, 4,768; 1820, 7,948; 1830, 12,542; 1840, 21,115, being the second city in population in the state, and the 13th in the United States. It is built on a beautiful plain between the two rivers, in the form of a triangle. About a mile back of the point it is encompassed by Grant's, Ayers's, and Quarry hills. It is compactly built, with some handsome buildings, generally of brick; but a dingy appearance is given to them by the dust of the bituminous coal, so extensively used in manufactures and otherwise. The city was first laid out in 1765, on the n. e. bank of the Monongahela, after the plan of Philadelphia, with streets running parallel with the river, and crossed by others at right angles. The streets on the Alleghany also run parallel with the river, and are crossed by streets at right angles; and the cross streets meet each other obliquely, a few streets back from the r. A bridge crosses the Alleghany, and another the Monongahela r., the former of which cost $96,000, and the latter $102,000. The Pennsylvania canal crosses the Alleghany r. in an aqueduct, and several ferries cross the Monongahela. The harbor of Pittsburgh is chiefly on the Monongahela, where the water is deeper than in the Alleghany. There are 89 steamboats, averaging over 125 tons burden, owned wholly or in part in the district of Pittsburgh. The hills with which Pittsburgh is surrounded are filled with bituminous coal, which is inexhaustible, and affords great aid to its manufactures. There are 35 churches—5 Presbyterian, 1 Reformed do., 4 Methodist, 1 Protestant do., 1 Cumberland Presbyterian, 3 Baptist, 2 Episcopal, 5 Scots Presbyterian, 3 Lutheran, 2 Congregational, 3 Welsh Methodist, 1 Unitarian, 1 Disciple, 3 Roman Catholic, and 1 African. There are four banks, with an aggregate capital of $3,000,000, besides a bank for savings, and 2 insurance offices, with a total capital of $500,000.

Among the public buildings of Pittsburgh, the new Court House, situated on Grant's hill, is a splendid edifice, 165 feet long and 100 feet broad, of Grecian Doric architecture, in a very commanding situation, and cost $300,000. The building of the Western University of Pennsylvania is also near Grant's hill, on the Monongahela side of the city. There is a spacious Roman Catholic cathedral on Grant's hill. There are a museum, which contains many aboriginal curiosities, and several splendid hotels. There are several literary societies, with small libraries, which would probably be more efficient, if united in one large institution. There are three market houses. The city is supplied with water raised from the Alleghany r., a very pure stream, by steam power, which supplies 1,500,000 gallons daily, and is sent over the city in pipes, in the whole 9½ miles in length, and is to be further extended, and which cost $183,056. Pittsburgh is alike distinguished for its commerce and manufactures. Tonnage in 1840, 12,000. It had in 1840, 7 commercial and 32 commission houses, with a cap. of $1,241,110; 408 retail stores, cap. $4,165,190; 17 lumber yards, cap. $167,000; 25 furnaces, 5 forges, cap. $1,219,000, value of machinery manufactured $443,500; hardware and cutlery, &c., $276,500; 5 cannon and 1,250 small-arms manufactured; precious metals, $14,860; various metals, $196,700; 1 fulling m., 1 woollen fac., cap. $10,000; 2 cotton fac. with 3,000 sp., 4 tanneries, 5 breweries; paints and drugs, cap. $203,300; 4 glass fac., 2 glass cutting estab., 2 flouring m., 5 saw m., 1 oil m., 18 printing offices, 7 binderies, 4 daily, 11 weekly newspapers; 53 brick and stone houses, and 15 woollen houses built, cost $161,200. Cap. in manufac. $2,057,952. 1 college, 50 students, 9 acad. 755 students, 18 sch. 2,581 scholars.

There are several places in the vicinity of Pittsburgh, which, though under different organization, should be regarded as suburbs of it, the principal of which is ALLEGHANY CITY, on the n. w. side of the Alleghany r. Here are 15 churches—2 Presbyterian, 2 Reformed do., 2 Cumberland do., 2 Methodist, 1 Protestant do., 2

Baptist, 1 Episcopal, 2 Scots Presbyterian, 1 German Reformed, 1 Disciples. The Western Penitentiary of Pennsylvania is located at this place, and has been erected at great expense. The Western Theological Seminary is also established here. It occupies a commanding eminence, which overlooks the surrounding country. The building is 150 feet long, the centre 4 stories, and the wings 3 stories high, and it has a respectable library. Allegheny city presents many agreeable residences, where persons who do business in Pittsburgh are pleased to retire from the bustle and smoke and coal dust of the principal city. It has considerable commercial and manufacturing business of its own. There were in 1840, 58 stores, cap. $83,400; 9 lumber yards, cap. $50,000; 1 furnace, 1 forge, cap. $218,000; value of hardware and cutlery produced, $50,000; 3 cotton fac. 14,270 sp., 2 tanneries, 1 brewery, 1 ropewalk. Cap. in manufac. $726,640. 1 theological college, 31 students, 3 academies, 169 students, 12 sch. 709 scholars. Pop. 10,089.

Birmingham borough, (p.-o. called Buchanan,) is another important suburb of Pittsburgh. It is on s. side of the Monongahela, about a mile distant from the centre of Pittsburgh, and has a considerable population, and important manufactures of glass, iron, &c. It has a Presbyterian and a Methodist church, and a market house. It is connected to Pittsburgh by a bridge and a ferry. There were in 1840, 10 stores, cap. $14,500; 2 lumber yards, cap. $9,300; 1 forge, 6 glass fac., 4 glass cutting estab., cap. $140,000; 1 pottery. Cap. in manufac. $155,750. 4 sch. 115 scholars. Pop. 1,554.

The French formerly had a trading post where Pittsburgh stands, denominated Fort Du Quesne. In an attempt to capture this fortress, Gen. Braddock was defeated and slain, on the e. bank of the Monongahela, 9 miles from Pittsburgh, and the youthful Washington displayed his bravery and skill, in conducting back the remains of the shattered army. This place came into possession of the British in 1758, by capture from the French; and by a fortification of some strength, the possession was maintained against a powerful attack by the Indians. The magazine of the fort built in 1764, remained entire until very recently. It was not until some time after the close of the revolutionary war that Pittsburgh began much to excite the attention of emigrants, and to commence its onward march toward its present distinguished prosperity.

PORTLAND, city, port of entry, and capital of Cumberland co., Me., is situated on a peninsula at the western extremity of Casco bay, and is in 43° 39' n. lat., and 7° 20' w. lon., from Greenwich, and 6° 45' e. from Washington. It is 54 ms. n. n. e. from Portsmouth, 50 s. e. Augusta, 110 n. n. e. from Boston, 545 n. e. from W. The population in 1800 was 3,677; in 1810, 7,169; in 1820, 11,581; in 1830, 12,601; in 1840, 15,218. Engaged in commerce, 397; in manufactures and trade, 1,032; navigating the ocean, 726; in the learned professions, &c., 101. It extends 3 miles from east to west, and has an average width of three fourths of a mile. The city presents a beautiful appearance from the sea, as it rises like an amphitheatre between two hills. It is regularly laid out, and handsomely built, and has some fine public buildings, among which are a court house, a spacious city hall, a jail, and 16 churches. It has also a custom house, 6 banks, a theatre, and an atheneum, containing a library of about 4,000 volumes. It has a light-house on a point at the entrance of the harbor, called Portland Head, which is of stone, 72 feet high, built in 1790. On an eminence, on which Fort Sumner formerly stood, there is an observatory, 70 feet high, which commands a fine view of the harbor and its islands. The harbor, which is among the best in the United States, is easy of entrance, spacious, and safe, being protected by islands at its entrance from the violence of storms. It is rarely obstructed much by ice. It is defended on opposite sides of the ship channel by forts Preble and Scammel, on islands a mile and a half from the light-house. It is well situated for trade, having an extensive back country. There were in 1840, 40 commercial and 8 commission houses, with a cap. of $658,500; 256 retail stores, with a cap. of $574,450; 2 lumber yards, cap. $4,000; fisheries, cap. $11,300; machinery produced, $3,000; 1 furnace, cap. $5,000; 2 tanneries, cap. $9,000; 2 potteries, cap. $4,000; 2 ropewalks, cap. $18,000; 9 printing offices, 5 binderies, 2 daily, 7 weekly, 3 semi-weekly newspapers, and 3 periodicals, employed 94 persons, and a cap. of $34,500. Total capital in manufac. $215,350. 11 acad. and gram. sch. 1,118 students, 32 com. sch. 1,976 scholars. The tonnage of this city in 1840 was 56,135, and that of the coasting trade about 20,000 tons. The principal articles of export are lumber and fish, with beef, butter, &c. The facilities of communication which this city enjoys have been considerably increased by the Oxford canal, which extends from it 20 miles to Sebago pond; and, by a lock in Songo river, is extended into Brady and Long ponds, 30 miles further. The trade of the city is chiefly with the West Indies and Europe, and its coasting trade primarily, though not exclusively, with Boston. With the latter place it is connected by a railroad. Portland was formerly a part of Falmouth, and 130 houses, constituting two thirds of the village, were laid in ashes by the British, in October, 1775. It was incorporated with its present name in 1786, and received a city charter in 1832.

PORTSMOUTH, p-t., and port of entry in Rockingham co., in N. H., is situated in 43° 5' n. lat., and 70° 45' w. lon., from Greenwich, and 6° 23' e. lon. from Washington. It is 14 miles e. n. e. from Exeter, 24 n. from Newburyport, 45 e. s. e. from Concord, 54 s. s. w. from Portland, 54 n. from Boston, and 493 from W. The population in 1810 was 6,934; in 1820, 7,327; in 1830, 8,082; in 1840, 7,837. It is the largest town and the only seaport in the state, situated on a peninsula on the s. side of the Piscataqua r., 3 ms. from the ocean. The situation is pleasant and healthy, the land rising gradually from the harbor. It is well built, and many of the houses are elegant. It has a fine harbor, with 40 feet of water in the channel at low tide, and is protected by its islands and headlands from storms. The Piscataqua, opposite the t., is from one half to three fourths of a mile wide; and the tide, which here rises 10 feet, flows with so rapid a current as to keep the harbor free from ice. The main channel is on the e. side of Great island, or Newcastle, and is defended by Fort Constitution, on Great island, and Fort McClary, in Kittery, opposite. There are also Fort Sullivan and Fort Washington on two other islands, which are not garrisoned in time of peace. There is also an entrance on the s. side of Great island, called Little Harbor, but the water is shallow. There is a light-house on Great island. This island contains 453 acres, and constitutes the t. of Newcastle, and it is connected to Portsmouth by a bridge, erected in 1821. Portsmouth is also connected to Kittery by 2 bridges, one of which is 1,750, and the other 480 feet in length. On Navy island, which is on the e. side of the r., and within the bounds of Maine, though it is owned by the general government, is a navy yard belonging to the United States, which has every convenience for the construction of vessels of the largest class. Good water is brought into the town, and distributed through the streets, from the distance of 3 miles, by a company, formed in 1799. Portsmouth contains much wealth, and has considerable trade, though its back country is somewhat limited. Much of the trade of the state flows to Portland, and more, probably, through the Merrimac river and Middlesex canal to Boston. This will furnish a reason why the population has diminished during the last 10 years. Among the public buildings are 8 churches, 7 banking houses, a court house, 2 market houses, an academy, an atheneum, an almshouse, and the state lunatic hospital. The Episcopal church is a spacious and elegant brick edifice, from the cupola of which there is a fine view of the town, the river, the islands, and the surrounding country. The Atheneum, a very flourishing institution, was incorporated in 1817, and has a library of more than 5,000 volumes, besides cabinets of minerals and of natural history.

Ship building and other manufactures are carried on to a considerable extent. The cod and other fisheries are actively prosecuted, and Portsmouth has considerable foreign and coasting trade. The tonnage of the port in 1840 was 27,375. There were in 1840, 18 foreign commercial and 6 commission houses, with a capital of $1,251,500; 137 retail stores, with a capital of $278,500; 6 lumber yards, cap. $11,000; fisheries, cap. $10,600; 4 furnaces, cap. $46,000; 1 woollen factory, cap. $30,000; 5 tanneries, cap. $15,700; 2 distilleries, cap. $5,000; 2 flouring m., 2 grist m., 1 saw m., total cap. $15,000; 1 ropewalk, cap. $6,000; 3 printing offices, 3 binderies, 2 weekly newspapers, employed 18 persons, and a cap. of $9,100. Total cap. in manufac. $187,101. 3 acad. 188 students, 16 common sch. with 2,222 scholars.

This town was first settled in 1623, and was incorporated by charter in 1633. It suffered less than most other places from the attacks of the savages in early times. Surrounded on three sides by water, the neck which connects it with the main land was defended by a stockaded fence, by means of which savage aggression was easily resisted. This place has been at different times severely visited by fires. In December, 1802, 102 buildings were burned; in December, 1806, 14 buildings, including St. John's Episcopal church, were destroyed; in December, 1813, a more desolating fire swept over 15 acres, destroying 397 buildings, of which 100 were dwelling houses. The parts which were burned in these fires have generally been rebuilt with brick, in an improved form.

PORTSMOUTH, p-t., Newport co., R. I., 7 N. W. Newport, 24 s. E. Providence, 417 W., occupying the N. part of the island of Rhode Island. The surface is moderately elevated; soil, a fertile gravelly and argillaceous loam, adapted to grass and to grain, and well cultivated. Being surrounded by water on 3 sides, it enjoys great facilities for navigation, and its fisheries are valuable. Its vessels are chiefly employed in the coasting trade. It contains 2 churches. Coal and plumbago are found. Several adjoining islands are attached to this t., the largest of which is Prudence, 6 miles long and three fourths of a mile wide, the soil of which is excellent. Portsmouth is connected with Tiverton by a bridge, and with Bristol by a ferry. There are in the t. 4 stores, cap. $15,500; 2 lumber yards, cap. $3,500; 1 fulling m., 1 woollen fac., 5 grist m. Cap. in manufac. $11,925.

PORTSMOUTH, p-v., port of entry, with Norfolk, and capital of Norfolk co., Va., 105 e. s. z. Richmond, 213 W. Situated on the w. side of Elizabeth r., at its mouth, opposite to Norfolk, 1 mile distant, and has one of the best harbors in the U. States. Ships of the largest class come to its wharves. It contains a court house, jail, 5 churches—1 Presbyterian, 1 Episcopal, 1 Baptist, 1 Methodist, and 1 Roman Catholic—a branch of the Bank of Virginia, a masonic hall, a theatre, a military academy, 50 stores, and 6,500 inhabitants. A United States navy yard, dry-dock, and naval hospital, are located at Gosport, a suburb of Portsmouth. By means of the Portsmouth and Roanoke railroad, and the Wilmington railroad, a daily line of communication is formed with Charleston.

PORTSMOUTH, p-v., capital of Scioto co., O., 90 s. Columbus, 424 W. Situated on the e. bank of Scioto r., at its entrance into Ohio r., and at the termination of the Ohio canal. POTEAU, r., Ark., rises in Scott co., and running n., chiefly in the Indian ter., enters Arkansas r. at Fort Smith.

POTCUSE, p-o., Northampton co., N. C., 155 n. e. Raleigh, 224 W.

POTOMAC, r., Md. and Va., rises in 2 branches, the n. and the s., in and near the Alleghany mountains, and forms, through nearly its whole course, the boundary between Virginia and Maryland. It is 550 miles long, and enters Chesapeake bay between Point Lookout and Smith's point, by a mouth 10 miles wide. At Alexandria it is 1 mile and a quarter wide, 290 miles from the ocean. It is navigable for ships of the line to the navy-yard in Washington, 500 miles from the sea, and 3 miles below the head of tide water. Above this it is obstructed by numerous falls and rapids. Little falls are 3 miles above Washington, with a descent of 37 feet, around which is a canal, 2½ miles long with 3 locks. Great falls are 8½ miles above this, and descend perpendicularly 76 feet, around which is a canal of 5 locks. Six miles above are Seneca falls, with a descent of 10 feet. Shenandoah falls, 60 miles above, are at the passage of the river through the Blue Ridge. Hore's falls are 5 miles above. Canals have been constructed around all these falls. From the mouth of Savage river, which enters the Potomac at Westport, to Cumberland, 31 miles, the fall is 445 feet; from Cumberland to the Shenandoah falls, 130 miles, the fall is 490 feet; at the Shenandoah the fall is 43 feet in 5½ miles; from the Shenandoah to Great falls, 40 miles, 39 feet; and thence to tidewater 12 miles, 143 feet. The whole descent from the mouth of Savage river to tidewater, 219 miles, is 1,160 feet. The principal places on the e. side of the river are Georgetown, Washington, Port Tobacco, and Leonard Town; on the w. side, Harper's Ferry and Alexandria. Its principal tributary is the Shenandoah, 200 miles long, and navigable 100 miles, which enters it on the s. side from Virginia, immediately before its passage through the Blue Ridge. This passage is a great curiosity. Of it Mr. Jefferson says, "the passage of the Potomac through the Blue Ridge is, perhaps, one of the most stupendous scenes in nature. You stand on a very high point of land. On your right comes up the Shenandoah, having ranged along the foot of the mountain a hundred miles to seek a vent. On your left approaches the Potomac, in quest of a passage also. In the moment of their junction, they rush together against the mountain, rend it asunder" (referring to a possible event of former times) "and pass off to the sea." His whole description is sublime and beautiful, of a scene, which he pronounces "worth a voyage across the Atlantic" to behold. The Potomac is 42 feet deep at its mouth, 30 at St. George's island, and 18 feet at Swan's point, and thence to Alexandria.

It contains an area of about 9 square miles; and the compact part is nearly equally divided by Providence river. The principal business is done on 2 long and somewhat irregular streets on the e. side of the river; but there are several wholesale stores on the w., where also is done a large retail business. There are many fine houses, mostly on the e. side of the r. It is the second city in New England in population. The two parts of the city are connected by 2 bridges, one of which is 90 feet in width. Vessels of 900 tons come to its wharves. Its commerce is extensive, and it has been successfully engaged in a trade with China. The Blackstone canal from Worcester, Mass., terminates here. It has also a railroad from Boston, which is extended to Stonington, Ct. Several steamboats connect it daily with the city of New York, and other packet lines connect it with that and other cities.

Among the public buildings are the State House—built of brick; 2 Congregational, 1 Baptist, and the Episcopal church, which are among the finest buildings of the kind in the United States; the Arcade, on the w. side of the river, extending between two streets, with a fine Doric portico on each, consisting of 5 massive columns, 25 feet high, the shafts of which, 22 feet in length, are from single blocks of granite, of which material the building is constructed, 226 feet long, 73 feet wide, and 3 stories high, occupied below by stores, and above with offices, &c. Brown University occupies a commanding situation on the e. side of the river, and has 2 large brick edifices, 4 stories high. It has a president, and 8 professors and instructors, had had in 1841, 1,390 alumni, 474 of whom were ministers, about 172 students, and 14,000 volumes in its various libraries. The philosophical apparatus is extensive and complete. The commencement is on the first Wednesday of September. A majority of the board of trustees and of the faculty are required to be of the Baptist denomination. It was originally established in Warren, in 1764, and was removed to Providence in 1770. The Friends Boarding School, belonging to the yearly meeting of this denomination in New England, is situated three quarters of a mile n. e. of the University, has a spacious edifice of stone and brick, in a commanding situation, has 10 instructors, and about 200 pupils, and is a flourishing institution. The Athenaeum, founded in 1836, has a handsome granite building, and a library of 7,000 volumes. The state prison, lately erected, and a theatre, a new and fine building. It has 31 banks, with an aggregate capital of eight millions, and 3 insurance companies. The city contains 21 churches—5 Baptist, 3 Episcopal, 3 Congregational, 1 Friends, 2 Methodist, 2 Unitarian, 1 Universalist, 2 Roman Catholic, and 2 African.

The city is not less distinguished for its manufactures than for its commerce. The most extensive manufacturing establishments are situated at North Providence, where the falls of the Pawtucket afford an extensive water power. The tonnage of this port in 1840, was 16,610.

There were in 1840, 23 for. commercial and 55 commission houses, cap. $1,582,850; 392 retail stores, cap. $1,758,040; 18 lumber yards, cap. $170,500; fisheries, cap. $130,000; machinery manufactured to the amount of $270,300; precious metals, $257,900; various metals, $147,550; 1 fulling m., 1 woollen fac. cap. $10,000; 22 cotton fac. 76,554 sp., 8 dyeing and printing estab., total cap. $1,449,000; 3 tanneries, cap. $22,000; 2 distilleries, 2 breweries, cap. $63,000; paints, drugs, &c., cap. $20,000; 1 paper fac. produced $15,000; 5 grist m., cap. $6,500; 8 printing offices, 5 binderies, 2 daily, 3 weekly, 4 semi-weekly newspapers, and 2 periodicals, cap. $23,100. This town was settled in 1636, by Roger Williams, who fled from Massachusetts, on account of his religious opinions, and who adopted in his establishment the principles of universal toleration. Providence originally included several adjacent towns. It suffered much in King Philip's war. In 1663 a charter was granted by the king to the Providence Plantations. This place has suffered severe disasters by fire and water. In 1801 an extensive fire occurred; and in 1815 a severe gale caused the tide to rise 12 feet above its ordinary height, spreading desolation along the wharves and bridges, destroying 300 buildings, and other property, to the amount, in the whole, of nearly $1,500,000. In 1831 it received a charter as a city.

RED, r., La., Ark. &c., is the first large r. which enters the Mississippi above its mouth, and rises at the base of the range of the Rocky mountains, near Santa Fe, in Mexico. It is formed by several head branches, and receives several tributaries, the largest of which are Blue r. and False Washita. The s. bank of it forms, for a great distance, the boundary between the United States and Texas. A greater part of its course is through rich prairies of a red soil, which colors the water of the r., and has been the origin of its name. Its shores are covered with grass, and abound with grape-vines, which produce an excellent fruit. About 100 ms. above Natchitoches commences what is denominated the Raft, which consists of a swampy expansion of the r. to the width of 20 or 30 ms., and has a length of 60 or 70 ms. The r. divides into a great number of channels, many of which are shallow, and these channels have been obstructed by fallen trees, brought down by floods from its upper parts. In some places, the raft covered the whole r., and had grass and willows growing on the alluvial soil collected on it, and could be even crossed on horseback, though not without danger. But more generally the r. appeared between the masses of timber. At a great expense, this raft has been so far removed by the U. S. government, that steamboats pass through it. Boats sometimes pass the raft by leaving the r. above it, in a channel which flows out of it into some neighboring lake, and following the outlet of this lake, until it joins the r. below the raft. This raft has been a serious obstruction, as the r. would otherwise be navigable for steamboats 400 ms., and the lands on its borders are highly fertile, and desirable for cultivation for a great distance above the raft. Below the raft, and 4 ms. above Natchitoches, the whole volume of the r. is again united, but very soon divides into many channels, and fills an immense number of bayous and lakes, that lie parallel to it. In its lower parts, the main channel of the r. is narrower than above the raft.

RED SULPHUR SPRINGS, p-v., Monroe co., Va., 249 w. Richmond, 286 W. Situated on Indian cr., 40 ms. s. w. of White Sulphur Springs. It flows from a rock into a quadrangular reservoir, composed of 4 slabs of white marble, the lower edges of which rest upon the rock from which the water flows. The reservoir is 6 feet long, 5 wide, and 4 deep, and a red substance covers the bottom and the lower part of the sides, giving to the water a red tinge. The water is clear and cool, has a temperature of 54° of Fahrenheit, and is charged with sulphuretted hydrogen gas, and several neutral salts. It is on a triangular plain, surrounded by mountains, and is covered by an octagon building, the second story of which is used as a chapel. There are 2 large hotels, and 3 rows of cabins of 2 rooms each, for the accommodation of families. The hotels are well kept.

RHODE ISLAND.

RHODE ISLAND, or, according to its original name, Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, one of the northern United States, is situated between  $41^{\circ} 22'$  and  $42^{\circ} 3'$  n. lat., and between  $71^{\circ} 6'$  and  $71^{\circ} 38'$  w. lon., and between  $5^{\circ} 7'$  and  $5^{\circ} 54'$  n. from W. It is about 49 miles long and 29 broad, containing 1,360 square miles, of which Narraganset bay includes 130, or, in the whole, 870,400 acres, and is the smallest state in the Union.

The population in 1790 was 58,825; in 1800, 69,122; in 1810, 76,931; in 1820, 83,059; in 1830, 97,212; in 1840, 108,830. Of these, 51,362 were white males; 54,225 do. females; colored free males, 1,413; do. females, 1,825. Employed in agriculture, 16,617; in commerce, 1,348; manufactures and trades, 21,271; navigating the ocean, 1,717; learned professions, &c., 457.

It is divided into 5 counties, which, with their population in 1840, and their capitals, were as follows: PROVIDENCE, 58,073, Providence; NEWPORT, 16,874, Newport; BRISTOL, 6,476, Bristol; KENT, 13,083, East Greenwich; WASHINGTON, 14,324, South Kingston.

Newport and Providence are the principal seats of government; but the legislature meets annually at the former in May, and at the latter, alternately with South Kingston, in October.

The n. w. part of the state is hilly and rocky. The hills, though not elevated, are found through the northern third of the state; the remainder is mostly level. The soil in the w. and n. w. parts is thin and lean; but near Narraganset bay, and on the islands in it, it has great fertility. It is better for grazing than for grain, and is distinguished for the excellence of its cattle and sheep, and its butter and cheese. Indian corn, rye, barley, oats, and, in some places, wheat, are produced, but not in sufficient quantity for exportation. Grass, fruits, and culinary vegetables, are produced in great perfection.

The rivers and bays abound in excellent fish. There were in 1840 in the state, 8,024 horses and mules; 36,891 neat cattle; 90,146 sheep; 30,659 swine. There were raised 3,098 bush. of wheat; 66,490 of barley; 171,517 of oats; 34,521 of rye; 2,979 of buckwheat; 450,498 of Indian corn; 183,830 pounds of wool; 911,973 bushels of potatoes; 333 tons of hemp and flax. The products of the dairy amounted to $223,229; of the orchard, $32,098; of lumber, $44,455.

The exports consist chiefly of flaxseed, horses, cattle, beef, pork, fish, poultry, onions, butter, cheese, barley, and cotton goods. The manufactures exceed those of any other state, in proportion to its population, the principal of which is cotton. They also have manufactures of woollen, iron, cordage, &c. This state has extensive shipping.

The climate is healthy, and more mild, particularly on the islands, than in any other part of New England. The sea-breezes moderate the heat of summer and the cold of winter; and Newport is a favorite resort, particularly during the summer.

The rivers are not large, but furnish some fine mill seats, and are extensively used for manufacturing purposes. The principal are Pawtucket, Providence, Pawtuxet, Pawcatuck, and Wood. Narraganset Bay extends from n. to s. over 30 miles into the state, and contains a number of fine islands. The principal are Rhode island, 15 miles long, with an average width of 2½ miles; Canonicut, 8 miles long and 1 broad; Prudence, 6 miles long; and Block island, 10 miles out in the Atlantic, 8 miles long and from 2 to 4 broad. It constitutes the township of New Shoreham, and has a light-house. Newport, on the s. w. part of Rhode Island, has one of the finest harbors in the world, being spacious, safe, and easily accessible. Providence, at the head of Narraganset bay, 36 miles above Point Judith, is accessible by large ships. In population, commerce, and wealth, this is the second city in New England. It has been extensively engaged in the West India, and also in the East India trade. Bristol, on the e. side of the bay, 15 miles n. of Newport, has a safe and commodious harbor, and considerable trade. Pawtucket, 4 miles n. of Providence, and Pawtuxet village, 10 miles s. of Providence, have extensive manufactures.

The exports of this state in 1840 amounted to $306,989, and the imports to $274,534.

There were in 1840, in this state, 44 commercial and 57 commission houses engaged in foreign trade, with a capital of $2,043,507; 930 drygoods and other retail stores, employing a capital of $2,810,125; 58 persons engaged in transportation, with 83 butchers, packers, &c., employing a capital of $71,050; 263 persons engaged in the lumber trade, employing a capital of $254,900; 1,160 persons employed in the fisheries, and a capital of $1,077,157.

The manufactures of this small state deserve particular notice. Home-made or family goods were produced to the amount of $51,180; 41 woollen manufactories, with 45 fulling mills, employing 961 persons, produced goods to the amount of $842,172, with a capital of $685,350; 309 cotton manufactories, with 518,817 spindles, employed 12,086 persons, producing articles to the amount of $7,116,792, and employed a capital of $7,326,000; 27 persons produced 1,000 tons of anthracite coal, with a capital of $6,000; 5 furnaces produced 4,126 tons of cast iron, and had a capital of $22,250; 2 paper mills produced articles to the amount of $25,000, and other paper manufactures produced to the amount of $3,500, employing 15 persons, and a capital of $45,000; hats and caps were manufactured to the amount of $92,465, and straw bonnets to the amount of $86,106, the whole employing 411 persons, and a capital of $66,427; 27 tanneries employed 89 persons, and a capital of $72,000; 44 saddleries and other leather manufactories produced to the amount of $182,110, with a capital of $70,695; 43 persons manufactured granite and marble to the amount of $36,302; 113 persons produced bricks and lime to the amount of $66,000; 534 persons produced machinery to the amount of $437,100; 164 persons produced hardware and cutlery to the amount of $138,720; 179 persons manufactured the precious metals to the amount of $283,500; 57 persons produced 1,237,050 pounds of soap, 157,250 do. of tallow candles, 264,500 do. of spermaceti or wax candles, with a capital of $252,628; 161 persons manufactured carriages and wagons to the amount of $73,811, with a capital of $36,661; various mills produced articles to the amount of $83,633, employing 166 persons, and a capital of $152,310; 9 ropewalks employed 45 persons, and produced cordage to the amount of $49,700, with a capital of $28,300; ships were built to the amount of $41,500; 195 persons produced furniture to the amount of $121,131, with a capital of $83,300; 4 distilleries produced 885,000 gallons, and 3 breweries 89,600 gallons, with a capital of $139,000; 6 brick and 292 wooden houses were built, employing 887 persons, at a cost of $379,010; there are 16 printing offices, 8 binderies, 2 daily, 4 semi-weekly, and 10 weekly newspapers, and 2 periodicals, the whole employing 122 persons, and a capital of $35,700. The whole amount of capital employed in manufactures in the state was $10,696,136.

Brown University, at Providence, is the only college in the state, and is a flourishing institution. It was founded in 1764, at Warwick, and was removed to Providence in 1770. A majority of the corporation are required to be of the Baptist denomination. In common school education this state has been behind the other states of New England, but is improving. In 1840 there were in Brown University, and in a high school, which partakes of the nature of a college, 324 students; 52 academies and grammar schools, with 3,664 students; 434 common and primary schools, with 17,355 scholars.

The principal religious denominations are the Baptists, the Congregationalists, the Episcopalians, and the Methodists. In 1836 the Baptists had 20 congregations and 18 ministers, besides 9 others of a different denomination; the Congregationalists had 16 congregations, 16 ministers, and 2,100 communicants; the Episcopalians had 16 congregations, 18 ministers, and 1,655 communicants; the Methodists had 10 ministers. Besides these, there are some Friends, Unitarians, Roman Catholics, Universalists, and Christians.

In the commencement of 1840, this state had 62 banks, with an aggregate capital of $9,880,500, and a circulation of $1,719,230. Although the banks in this state are so numerous, averaging two to a town, yet they have preserved their credit unimpaired.

Rhode Island has had, until recently, no other constitution of government but the charter granted by Charles II., in 1663. The government consisted of a governor, a senate, and a house of representatives, chosen annually by the people. There were 10 senators, 2 from each county. There were 72 representatives; and the legislature met twice annually, commencing on the first Wednesday of May, at Newport, and on the last Monday of October, alternately at Providence and South Kingston. The judiciary consisted of a supreme court and the court of common pleas; and all the judges were chosen annually by the legislature in grand committee.

Several works of internal improvement contribute to the prosperity of this state. The Blackstone canal, which connects Providence with Worcester, Mass., lies partly in this state. The same is true of the Providence and Boston railroad. This connects with a line of steamboats to the city of New York. The Providence and Stonington railroad lies chiefly in this state, and is 47 miles long. This road also connects with a line of steamboats to the city of New York. When the Long Island railroad shall have been completed through the island, this road will become of great importance. Rhode Island has no public debt.

There is a state prison at Providence, completed in 1838.

This state was first settled by Roger Williams, who, with his associates, left Massachusetts on account of their religious principles. He at first made a purchase of the Indians at Sekonk; but finding himself within the Plymouth colony, he removed to Providence, to which he gave name, and where he commenced a settlement in 1636. He obtained a patent from the Plymouth company, in England, in 1644. A settlement had been made on Rhode Island in 1638, and this charter included both under the name of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations. After the restoration of Charles II., a new charter was obtained from him in 1663, which, until recently, formed the basis of the government, unchanged by the revolution. In May, 1842, an attempt was made by the "suffrage party," as they were called, to take forcible possession of the government. They had previously, without authority from the legislature, formed a constitution, and in their primary assemblies, acting informally, chosen a governor, senate, and house of representatives, and attempted to maintain their authority by force of arms. But the force of the state was brought against them, and the suffrage party were dispersed, and the authority of the government was maintained. By order of the charter legislature, a convention was assembled in September, 1842, for the purpose, formed a constitution, which was approved by a majority of the people in their primary assemblies, and has gone into operation. The particulars of it we are unable to give.

Rhode Island bore an honorable part in the revolutionary war. She was the last of the old 13 states to adopt the federal constitution, which she did in May 29, 1790, by a majority of 2 votes, and became a member of the Union.

RICHMOND, city and port of entry, and capital of Henrico co., and of the state of Virginia, is situated on James r., at the lower falls, at the head of tidewater, and is in 37° 30' n. lat., and 77° 31' w. lon. from Greenwich, and 0° 27' w. lon. from W. It is 23 miles n. from Petersburg; and 117 s. by w. from W. The population in 1800 was 5,737; in 1810, 9,785; in 1820, 12,067; in 1830, 16,060; in 1840, 20,153. It is beautifully located on the w. side of the r., between 50 and 60 miles above City Point, and 150 miles above the mouth of the river. It is directly opposite to Manchester, to which it is connected by 2 bridges. The situation is healthy and highly picturesque. The deaths do not exceed 1 in 85 of the population, annually. Shockoe and Richmond hills stand opposite to each other, and Shockoe creek, an active stream, passes between them; and the city is spread over these hills, and along the margin of the creek. The elevations present many picturesque views of the city, of James r., and of the surrounding country. The city contains about 1,400 houses, a large proportion of which are of brick, with slated roof. The city is regularly laid out, the streets generally crossing each other at right angles. The city plat covers an area of about three and a half square miles, but a moderate portion of which is yet covered with buildings. The houses are neat and convenient, and many of them are elegant. In the western division of the city, on an elevated plain, denominated Shockoe Hill, stands the capitol. It has a very commanding situation, in the centre of a beautiful public square, of an oblong form, containing about 8 acres, ornamented with grass plats and gravelled walks. It is a spacious and elegant building, surrounded on 3 sides by a lofty portico of the Ionic order. In the centre of a spacious hall, in the middle of the building, stands a marble statue of Washington, executed in Paris. Near it is a marble bust of Lafayette. In one angle of Capitol Square stands the City Hall, decorated at each end by a fine Doric portico of 4 columns. On the eastern part of Capitol Square is a house erected for the residence of the governor of the state. In another angle of the same square is the county court house. In the western suburbs of the city is the State Penitentiary, a large building, in the form of a hollow square, 300 feet long and 110 feet broad, with several acres of ground connected with it. In the suburbs of the city, on the n., is the Almshouse, a spacious building, surrounded by extensive grounds. The other public buildings are a county and city jail, an orphan asylum, a theatre, a museum, 2 markets, an armory 320 by 280 feet, an academy, and a masonic hall. The city is supplied by water, which is elevated by water power, and 2 forcing pumps, into 3 large reservoirs, containing 1,000,000 gallons each, from which it is distributed over the city, and forms a great resource in case of fire, as well as a supply for the inhabitants. The cost of these works was about $120,000.

There are two banks in the city. There are 16 churches, of which the Episcopalians have 3, the Presbyterians 3, the Baptists 3, the Methodists 3, the Roman Catholics, Friends, Unitarians, one each, and the Jews have a synagogue. Some of the churches are large and elegant buildings.

Richmond is well situated for commerce. Vessels drawing 10 feet of water come to Rockers, about a mile below the centre of the city; and those drawing 15 feet to Warwick, 3 miles below the city. The falls in James r. are obstructed by the canal, and above them it is navigable for boats 220 miles. Regular lines of packets connect this city with New York and other places, and it is connected by steamboats to Norfolk. The principal articles of exportation are wheat, flour, and tobacco. The exports amount to about $3,000,000 annually. The tonnage of this port in 1840, was 6,911.

The manufactures of Richmond are also extensive. The falls of the James river afford a water power of unlimited extent. There were in 1840, 17 foreign commercial and 29 commission houses, cap. $3,062,000; 256 retail stores, cap. $1,616,450; 3 lumber yards, cap. $24,000; 4 furnaces, and 8 forges, &c., cap. $317,900; machinery produced amounted to $128,000; 1 cotton fac. 5,810 sp., cap. $175,000; tobacco manufactories, capital $192,250; 1 paper fac., cap. $75,000; 21 flouring m., 2 grist m., 3 saw m., total cap. $61,000; 8 printing offices, 1 bindery, 2 daily, 6 weekly, and 2 semi-weekly newspapers, and 1 periodical, cap. $48,700. Total cap. in manufac. $1,372,950. 1 college 63 students, 13 acad. 753 students, 14 sch. 673 scholars.

Richmond was founded by an act of the legislature of the state, in 1742; and the seat of government was removed from Williamsburg to this place in 1780. In 1787 it contained about 300 houses. The canal around the falls of James river, which has added so much to the commercial advantages of Richmond, was completed in 1791. December 26th, 1811, the theatre of Richmond took fire, during an exhibition, when 600 persons were present, of whom 66 white persons and 6 people of color lost their lives. Among the former was George William Smith, Esq., the governor of the state. To commemorate this sad event, an Episcopal, denominated the Monumental Church, has been erected on the spot. It is an octagonal building, two sides projecting and forming wings; and it has a monument in front.

ROCHESTER, p-t., and semi-capital of Strafford co., N. H., 46 E. Concord, 505 W. Salmon Falls r., which bounds it on the N. E., and Cocheco r. which drains it, afford water power. The surface is uneven, and much of the soil is fertile. Incorporated in 1722. There is a considerable v. at the falls on Cocheco r. It has 11 stores, cap. $23,300; 4 fulling m., 3 woollen fac., 2 tanneries, 2 grist m., 4 saw m., 2 oil m. Cap. in manufac. $76,450. 17 sch. 788 scholars. Pop. 2,431.

ROCHESTER, p-t., Windor co., Vt., 43 S. W. Montpelier, 482 W. The surface is mountainous and broken; soil, much of it fertile. Drained by White r. and a branch, which afford water power. Chartered in 1780. The v., at the centre, is pleasantly situated on the E. bank of White r., and contains a Congregational church, and some mills, and considerable trade. There are in the t. 3 stores, cap. $17,000; 2 fulling m., 1 tannery, 1 grist m., 7 saw m. Cap. in manufac. $13,000. 13 sch. 469 scholars. Pop. 1,396.

ROCHESTER, p-t., Plymouth co., Mass., 54 S. E. Boston, 441 W. Buzzard's bay bounds it on the S. The surface is uneven; soil, moderately fertile. In some parts it is rocky and unfit for cultivation, and in some places very fertile. Drained by Matapoisset and Spican rivers. The principal v. is called Matapoisset, situated on an inlet from Buzzard's bay, and contains 3 churches — 1 Congregational, 1 Baptist, and 1 Universalist — various mechanic shops, and about 100 dwellings. The principal business is ship building, and the whale fishery. It has a good harbor, and the largest whale ships come to its wharves. Salt is extensively manufactured here. There are in the t. 17 stores, cap. $22,600; 2 grist m., 5 saw m. Cap. in manufac. $25,500. 1 acad. 100 students, 23 sch. 1,092 scholars. Pop. 3,964.

ROCHESTER, city, capital of Monroe co., N. Y., is situated on both sides of Genesee r., 7 E. Lake Ontario, 220 W. by N. Albany, 141 W. Utica, 73 E. Buffalo, 87 Niagara falls, 369 W. Pop. 1820, 1,502; 1830, 9,269; 1840, 20,191. It contains an area of 4,324 acres, and was incorporated as a village in 1817, and as a city in 1834. It is well built, and contains many large and fine stores and many neat and some splendid dwelling houses; to many of which beautiful gardens are attached, ornamented with shrubbery. The number of dwelling houses is about 2,000. The E. and W. parts of the city are connected by 3 bridges. The Erie canal passes through the centre of the place, and here crosses the Genesee r. in a splendid aqueduct. The Genesee Valley canal, now constructing, also terminates here, connecting with the Erie canal. The great western railroad passes through the place. The public buildings and institutions are — a court house, jail, county clerk's office, 2 markets, 6 banking houses, 1 savings bank, 1 mutual insurance co., 23 churches — 3 Baptist, 1 Congregational, 1 Covenant, 2 Episcopal, 2 Friends, 1 Lutheran, 2 Methodist, 5 Presbyterian, 3 Roman Catholic, 1 Universalist, and 2 African — a museum, a Collegiate Institute, 2 female seminaries, 2 orphan asylums, the arcade building, in which is the post-office, a Mechanics' Literary Association, a Young Men's Association, and an Atheneum.

Rochester owes its great advantages and its rapid growth especially to a vast water power created here by the falls in Genesee r., which amount to 268 feet within the bounds of the city, in which are 3 successive perpendicular falls of 96, 20, and 105 feet, besides rapids. On these rapids and falls are many large flouring mills, and other hydraulic works. It is estimated that, independently of the capital invested in these mills, it requires $2,000,000 annually to keep them in operation, and that they produce annually about $3,500,000. Rochester is finely situated for commerce. Vessels come up the Genesee r. to Carthage, which is 2½ miles below the centre of the city, where steamboats daily arrive and depart, and to which there is a railroad. The river is also boatable above the city, 45 ms. to Mount Morris. The Erie canal gives it access to the E. and W., and the Genesee Valley canal, when completed, will connect it with Olean on the Susquehanna, and greatly add to its advantages. It has a railroad communication E. to Boston, Mass., and W. to Batavia, which will soon be extended to Buffalo. These facilities for transportation have completed the advantages derived from its immense water power, and the rich agricultural country by which it is surrounded.

There were in the city in 1840, 1 commercial and 1 commission house, cap. $15,100; 966 retail stores, cap. $1,238,890; 2 lumber yards, cap. $30,000; machinery manufactured, value $48,000; 4 fulling m., 4 woolen fac., capital $58,616; 1 cotton fac. 3,000 sp., cap. $50,000; 3 tanneries, cap. $128,500; 3 distilleries, 3 breweries, cap. $60,300; 1 pottery, 1 rope walk, 22 flouring m., 8 saw m., 1 oil m., total cap. $945,600; 2 paper fac., 9 printing offices, 1 bindery, 4 daily, 5 weekly, and 1 semi-weekly newspaper, 2 periodicals; 61 brick and stone, and 68 wooden houses, built at a cost of $401,270. Total cap. in manufac. $1,963,017. 4 acad. 662 students, 38 sch. 2,870 scholars.

In 1812 there were only 2 wooden frame buildings on the spot, each consisting of a single room; and when a few years before, a proposal was made in the state legislature to build here a bridge across the Genesee, it was strongly opposed, and a member declared, that it was "a God-forsaken place, inhabited by muskrats, and visited only by stragling trappers." With the exception of Lowell, Mass., the United States does not probably present another instance of equally rapid growth.

ROCHESTER, t., Ulster co., N. Y., 16 s. w. Kingston, 74 s. by w. Albany. The surface is hilly and mountainous; soil, clay and loam. Drained by Rondout cr. and its tributaries. ROCK ISLAND, p-o., Warren co., Tenn., 85 s. E. Nashville, 611 W.

ROCK ISLAND CITY, p-v., capital of Rock Island co., Ill., 150 Springfield, 879 W. It has been laid out on an extensive scale, at the junction of Rock r. and the Mississippi. It has been in contemplation to cut a canal from the Mississippi, above the rapids, to Rock r., by which an immense water power would be gained. It contains a court house, 12 stores, and about 800 inhabitants.

ROCK ISLAND RAPIDS, in the Mississippi, commence at Rock Island, just above the mouth of Rock r., and extend 15 ms. up the r., with a descent, in that distance, of 21 feet 10 inches. In various places, ledges of rocks extend across the r., and, at low water, are a great obstruction to navigation. The government of the United States has done something for the improvement of these rapids.

ROCKLAND, county, N. Y. Situated in the s. e. part of the state, and contains 172 sq. ms. It is bounded on the e. by Hudson r. The surface is hilly and mountainous, and much broken; soil, fertile. It contains some valuable minerals, particularly magnetic iron ore, and variegated marble. The New York and Erie railroad commences at Piermont, and crosses the co. Capital, New City v., in Clarkstown t. SABILLESVILLE, p-v., Frederick co., Md., 95 n. w. Annapolis, 66 W.

SABINA, p-v., Richland t., Clinton co., O., 62 s. w. Columbus, 435 W. It contains 2 stores, and a number of dwellings.

SABINE, r., La. and Texas, rises in Texas in lat. 32° 30' n., and flows southwardly and enters La. in its w. part, in Caddo par., and thence forms the boundary between the United States and Texas. It is 300 ms. long, and, in low stages of the water, it has but 4 feet of water on the bar at its mouth. It enters and passes through Sabine lake, 30 ms. long, and from 1 to 7 or 8 ms. wide, before it enters the Gulf of Mexico; but in leaving the lake, it contracts to a width but little greater than it had when it entered it. Its course, in its lower part, is through an extended and sterile prairie. It waters the most hilly parts of the state, further up, and among those hills are frequent streams and some lakes and ponds, and oftentimes small strips of good second rate land. It derives its chief importance from being the boundary between the United States and Texas.

SABLE or AU SABLE, r. (See Ausable rivers, Great and Little.)

SACANDAGA, r., N. Y., rises in Hamilton co., having its source in Oscego, Round, and Pleasant lakes, and some smaller lakes. Flowing in a wind-

SACHEM, GRAND, Mt., N. Y., called also New Beacon mt., half a mile s. of the highest point of the Highlands, and is 1,685 feet above tide water in the Hudson. Its summit presents a grand and beautiful prospect.

SACKETT'S, p-o., Macomb co., Mich., 24 n. by e. Detroit, 548 W.

SACKETTS HARBOR, p-v., Houndsfield t., Jefferson co., N. Y., 174 n. w. Albany, 415 W. Situated on Black River bay, near the foot of Lake Ontario, 12 ms. from the lake. It is one of the most secure and best harbors on the lake, and was a great naval station during the last war with Great Britain. Incorporated in 1814, and contains 3 churches—1 Presbyterian, 1 Episcopal, and 1 Methodist—a banking house, 24 stores, 4 forwarding houses, a ship yard, and rope walk, 3 saw m., 2 furnaces, 1 machine shop, 1 plaster m., 1 tannery, 300 dwellings, and about 2,000 inhabitants. Here are the Madison Barracks, erected by the United States in 1814. A great water power is created here by a canal brought from the Black r., near Watertown, a distance of 12 ms. Tonnage in 1840, 3,637.

SACO, r., N. H. and Me., rises in the White mountains, N. H., within a few rods of the source of Ammonoosuc r., flowing w. to Connecticut r., and flows e. through the celebrated Notch, with a rapid and foaming current, and frequent cascades. It enters Maine in Fryburg, and pursues a winding course, in a s. e. direction, until it enters the Atlantic, between Saco and Biddeford. It has 4 principal falls in Maine of 70, 30, 30, and 42 feet respectively, which afford in the aggregate an immense water power. Pine timber is found extensively on its banks, furnishing supplies for numerous saw mills.

SACO, p-t., and port of entry, York co., Me., 15 s. w. Portland, 65 s. w. Augusta, 100 n. n. e. Boston, 530 W. Situated on the e. side of Saco r. It has fine interval land on the r. Watered by 5 small streams flowing from a fen or bog. The v. is situated at the falls, 6 miles from the mouth of the r., where is a descent of 42 feet, creating a great water power, and presenting an interesting and beautiful view. The v. contains an elegant Congregational church, a bank, an academy, numerous mills, many handsome dwellings, and has considerable navigation and trade, particularly in lumber. Just below the falls is a fine basin, where vessels take in their cargoes. On the shore is a fine beach, 4 ms. long, with a beautiful view of the ocean, which affords a pleasant drive in warm weather. There are in the t. 38 stores, cap. $68,050; 3 cotton fac. 17,760 sp., 3 tanneries, 2 printing offices, 2 weekly newspapers, 2 grist m., 2 saw m. Cap. in manufac. $1,020,932. 5 acad. 246 students, 21 sch. 800 scholars. Pop. 4,408. Tonnage in 1840, 3,358.

SAGINAW, bay, Mich., a branch of Lake Huron, 60 ms. long, and 30 wide, containing a number of islands, the largest of which is Shawangunk island, near the centre. It is navigable for vessels of any burden, and numerous coves, protected by islands, afford some of the best harbors on the lake. It receives Saginaw r.

SAGINAW, r., Mich., is one of the largest rivers in the Peninsula. It is formed by the union of Cass r. from the e., Flint and Shiawassee from the s., and Tittibawassee from the n. w. The length of the Saginaw from Flint r., where it commences, is 25 ms., in a direct line to its mouth, but some of its branches have four times that length. Its course is n. e. to its entrance into Saginaw bay. It has a depth of from 25 to 30 feet, but a sand bar at its mouth has not ordinarily a depth of water upon it of more than 5 or 6 feet, though an e. wind frequently raises it 3 feet above its usual level.

SAGINAW, county, Mich. Situated toward the n. e. part of the settled portion of the Peninsula, and contains 1,031 sq. ms. Drained by Saginaw r. and its tributaries. Saginaw bay lies on its n. e. border. The surface is level or undulating; soil, a dark, rich, sandy loam, from 18 to 24 inches deep, on a substratum of clay. Pine timber covers one third of the co., on the e. and s. e. In the n. w. part, on the bay, limestone and gypsum are found. Capital, Saginaw. There were in 1840, neat cattle 1,066, swine 1,462; wheat 4,125 bush. produced, Ind. corn 9,837, oats 2,841, potatoes 16,929, sugar 12,229; 5 stores, cap. $20,500; 1 tannery, 1 grist m., 6 saw m. SAINT ANDREWS, bay and sound, situated on the S. coast of Florida. Its arms extend 30 miles into the country. It is easy of access, and has 18 feet of water on the bar, and good anchorage within, sheltered from all winds. The main body of the bay extends 12 ms. N., with an average breadth of from 2 to 5 ms. One mile from the sea beach, an arm extends 20 miles parallel with the coast. Ten miles from the sea another arm extends E. for 30 ms., from 1 to 10 ms. wide. The bay has some fertile settlements on its borders.

SAINT AUGUSTINE, p-v., Cecil co., Md., 89 N. E. Annapolis, 101 W.

SAINT AUGUSTINE, city, port of entry, and capital of St. Johns co., Flor., 200 E. by S. Tallahassee, 860 W. It is situated 2 miles back from the Atlantic shore, on the S. point of a peninsula, connected with the main land by a narrow isthmus, protected from the swell of the ocean by Anastasia island, not sufficiently high to obstruct the sea breezes or a view of the ocean. The site of the city, though scarcely 12 feet higher than the level of the ocean, is healthy and pleasant, which makes it a favorite resort of invalids from the N. Snow is almost unknown, and frost is felt only one or two months in the year, and in some seasons it is not perceived at all. In the summer the sea breezes temper the heat, and the land breezes render the evenings cool and pleasant. It is in the form of a parallelogram, fronting E. on Matanzas sound, forming a harbor sufficient to contain a large fleet in safety. A bar at the mouth of the harbor has not more than 9 feet of water at low tide, within which it is 18 or 20 feet. The city is one mile long, and three fourths of a mile wide. The principal streets cross each other at right angles, and are narrow, and some of the streets are very crooked. The houses are generally built of stone, two stories high. A fine large square opens from the Matanzas into the E.

part of the place, on the W. side of which stands the court house, which contains the public offices. On the N. side stands a splendid Roman Catholic church. On the S. side is Trinity church, a neat Gothic structure. In front of the harbor is a neat market place, and the intervals around the square are filled up with dwelling houses and orange groves. Fort Marion stands at the N. end of the town, and completely commands the harbor. The city contains 4 churches—1 Roman Catholic, 1 Presbyterian, 1 Episcopal, and 1 Methodist—a U. S. land office, 20 stores and groceries, various mechanic shops, 500 dwellings, and 2,459 inhabitants. In the S. part of the t., fronting the Matanzas, are extensive barracks. A regular packet runs to Charleston.

SAINT AUGUSTINE, p-v., Fulton co., Ill., 85 S. N. W. Springfield, 831 W.

SAINT BERNARD, parish, La. Situated in the S. E. part of the state, directly S. E. of New Orleans, and contains 150 square ms. It has Lake Borgne on the N. E., and, for some distance below New Orleans, includes both banks of the Mississippi. The Gulf of Mexico bounds it on the E. The surface is level, and the soil, where not too wet for cultivation, is very fertile, producing sugar, rice, and cotton. There were in 1840, neat cattle 1,862, sheep 1,154, swine 369, Ind. corn 65,150 bush. produced, potatoes 24,185, rice 34,500 pounds, sugar 4,308,000; 9 stores, cap. $63,300; 1 distillery, 2 saw m. SAINT CHARLES, p-v., capital of St. Charles co., Mo., 20 N. W. St. Louis, 110 E. Jefferson Cr., 628 W. It has an elevated and handsome situation, on the N. bank of the Missouri r., and is the first elevated land on the r. above its mouth. The shore is here rocky, and the alluvial land commences at the lower end of the town. It has 5 streets parallel with the r., and is about 1½ mile long. It contains a court house, jail, of stone, market house, of brick, 3 churches—1 Roman Catholic, 1 Methodist, and 1 Presbyterian—a nunnery, 10 stores, 2 steam mills, 150 dwellings, and 1,457 inhabitants. St. Charles College, under the direction of the Methodists, is located here. It was founded in 1833, has a president and 3 professors, and about 104 students. There is a ferry across the Missouri r., and it constitutes the great crossing place between St. Louis and the n. and w. parts of the state. There are in the t. 1 college, 104 students, 2 acad. 57 students. Pop. 2,818.

SAINT CLAIR, lake, Mich., is situated between Lake Huron and Lake Erie, and is 24 ms. long, 30 wide, 90 in circumference, and 20 feet deep. Its banks are alluvial, elevated 20 feet above the water, and have a slightly uneven surface. It receives Clinton r., from Mich., and the Thames and others, from Canada.

SAINT CLAIR, r., or strait, Mich., connects Lake Huron with Lake St. Clair, and discharges the waters of the great upper lakes, Superior, Michigan, and Huron. It flows in a southerly direction, and enters Lake St. Clair in its n. e. part, by 6 channels, the n. one of which, on the Michigan side, is the only one navigated in ascending and descending the r. It has few islands, excepting those formed by its outlets. It receives several tributaries from Mich., the principal of which are Black r., Pine r., and Belle r.; but no rivers flow into it on the e. side. It has several flourishing villages on its banks. It is 40 ms. long, half a mile wide, and on an average 50 feet deep, with a current of 3 ms. an hour, and an entire descent of about 13 feet. Its waters are clear and transparent, the navigation easy, and the scenery various and beautiful.

SAINT LAWRENCE, r., U. S. and Canada, forms the outlets of the great lakes Superior, Huron, Michigan, Erie and Ontario, and after a course of more than 2,000 miles, flows into the Gulf of St. Lawrence. It forms the boundary, with the middle of the lakes through which it passes, between the United States and Canada, until it arrives at about the 45th degree of n. lat., though by the late treaty the boundary follows the old line as formerly settled, which is 1 mile n. of the 45th degree. It has different names in different parts of its course. From its mouth to Lake Ontario it is called the St. Lawrence; between Lakes Ontario and Erie, Niagara r.; between Lakes Erie and St. Clair, Detroit r.; between Lakes St. Clair and Huron, St. Clair r.; and between Lakes Huron and Superior, St. Mary's r. It is navigable for ships of the line 400 miles, to Quebec; and for ships of 600 tons to Montreal. The distance from Montreal to Lake Ontario is nearly 200 miles. From Quebec to Montreal, it has an average breadth of 2 miles. At its mouth, the Gulf, from Cape Rosier to Mingau settlement, in Labrador, is 105 miles in length.

SAINT LAWRENCE, county, N. Y. Situated toward the n. e. part of the state, and contains 2,717 sq. ms. The surface is diversified by gentle swells, broad valleys and extended tracts of level country. In the s. e. part it is hilly and mountainous. The soil is generally productive. The St. Lawrence r. runs on its n. w. border for a distance of 75 miles. Watered by St. Regis, Racket, Grass, Oswegatchie, and Indian rivers, and their tributaries. Some of these are to some extent navigable, and they afford much water power. Black lake is an expansion of Indian r., 20 miles long and 2 wide. There are other small lakes. In the town of Canton, a natural canal, 6 miles long and from 30 to 80 yards wide, connects Oswegatchie and Grass rivers, and is boatable. The St. Lawrence is navigated by sloops and steamboats from Lake Ontario, 60 miles, to Ogdensburg. Lead ore is extensively found in the vicinity of Rosie v. Iron ore is extensively found—some of it magnetic. Marble is abundant. A railroad has been projected, from Ogdensburg to Plattsburgh. Capital, Canton. There were in 1840, neat cattle, 61,455, sheep 125,881, swine 41,889; wheat 276,007 bush. produced, rye 23,571, Ind. corn 204,824, buckwheat 34,212, barley 24,018, oats 334,009, potatoes 1,412,374, sugar 843,138 pounds; 2 commission houses, cap. $3,000, 155 stores, cap. $558,000; 16 furnaces, 6 forges, 28 fulling m., 4 woollen fac., 27 tanneries, 1 distillery, 2 potteries, 2 flouring m., 45 grist m., 103 saw m., 1 paper fac., 2 printing offices, 2 weekly newspapers. Cap. in manufac. $815,526. 4 acad. 761 students, 357 sch. 13,539 scholars. Pop. 56,706.

SAINT LAWRENCE, p-o., Chatham co., N. C., 46 w. Raleigh, 334 W.

SAINT LEONARDS, p-v., Calvert co., Md., 56 s. Annapolis, 86 W. Situated between Chesapeake bay and Patuxent r. It contains about 25 dwellings.

SAINT LOUIS, r., N. W. Ter., after a course of about 200 miles, flows into Fond du Lac, the w. end of Lake Superior. It is much obstructed by falls and rapids.

SAINT LOUIS, county, Mo. Situated in the r. part of the state, and contains 550 sq. ms. The Mississippi r. runs on its e. boundary, and the Missouri r. on the n. w. The surface is undulating; soil, generally very fertile. Maramec r. runs partly on its s. border and partly within it. Capital, St. Louis. There were in 1840, neat cattle 22,377, sheep 8,730, swine 24,441; wheat 39,177 bush. produced, rye 6,133, Ind. corn 477,879, buckwheat 1,908, oats 95,306, potatoes 90,984, tobacco 197,045 pounds; 1 commercial, and 24 commission houses, cap. $717,000; 214 stores, cap. $3,875,050; 17 lumber yards, cap. $27,529; 6 tanneries, 4 distilleries, 2 flouring m., 14 grist m., 13 saw m., 1 oil m., 23 printing offices, 6 daily, 7 weekly, and 5 semi-weekly newspapers. Cap. in manufac. $613,700. 2 colleges, 252 students, 14 acad. 662 students, 28 sch. 1,056 scholars. Pop. whites 30,503, slaves 4,616, free col'd 858; total, 35,979.

SAINT LOUIS, city, and capital of St. Louis co., Missouri, is the largest place in the state, and is situated on the w. bank of the Mississippi, 18 ms. by water below the junction of the Missouri. It is in 38° 36' n. lat., and 89° 56' w. lon. from Greenwich, and 13° 14' w. lon. from W.; 30 ms. below the junction of the Illinois; 200 above that of the Ohio; 1,800 miles, by the course of the river, above New Orleans; 1,100 below the Falls of St. Anthony; 120 z. Jefferson City; 808 from Washington. The population in 1810 was 1,600; in 1820, 4,598; in 1830, 6,694; in 1840, 16,469, of whom 1,531 were slaves. Employed in commerce, 845; in manufactures and trades, 2,012; navigating rivers, &c., 891; in the learned professions, &c., 188.

The situation of the city is pleasant and healthy. The ground rises gradually from the first to the second bank of the river; and on the second bank, which is about 40 feet higher than the first, the city is chiefly built. It presents a beautiful appearance as seen from the opposite side of the river, or as it is approached on the river. At the distance of about half a mile from the river, the ground attains its highest elevation, and spreads out in a plain to the west. There are five principal streets running parallel with the river, which are crossed by many others, at right angles. Two streets along the river are narrow, but those which have been more recently laid out, on the second bank, are regular and spacious, and present many commanding situations. The compact part of the city extends about a mile and a half along the river; but there are suburbs on the n. and s. making the whole extent five miles. It contains many neat, and some elegant buildings. The more recent houses have been built of brick, made of an excellent quality in the immediate vicinity; some are of stone, quarried on the spot, and generally white-washed. Many of the houses have spacious and beautiful gardens attached to them.

Front-street is open on the side toward the water, and on the other side is a range of warehouses four stories high, built of limestone, which have a very commanding appearance, and are the seat of a heavy business. In first-street, the wholesale and retail drygoods stores are located; and in the streets back of this are the artisans and tradesmen.

The city is watered from the Mississippi. The water is raised by steam power to a reservoir situated on an elevated ancient mound, whence it is distributed in iron pipes through the city. A company is also formed for lighting the city with gas. The country around St. Louis, and w. for 15 miles, is a very fertile prairie.

The city is admirably situated for commerce, and already surpasses in its trade every other place n. of New Orleans. The Mississippi and the Illinois to the n.; and the Ohio and its tributaries to the s. z.; and the Missouri to the w., give it a ready access to a vast extent of country; and to the s. the Mississippi furnishes an outlet to the ocean for its accumulated productions. It is the principal western depot of the American Fur Company, who have a large establishment in the place, and nearly 1,000 men in their employ. A vast amount of furs of every description is here collected; and 10,000 dried buffalo tongues have been brought in in a single year. Numerous steamboats ply from this place in various directions. The steamboat arrivals, in a single year, have amounted to over 800, with a tonnage of over 100,000. The total tonnage of this port in 1840 was 11,259.

Among the public buildings, the City Hall, a splendid building of brick, several of the churches, and particularly the Roman Catholic Cathedral, deserve notice. The Cathedral is 136 feet long, 84 feet wide, and the walls are 40 feet high. The front of the edifice is 58 feet high, above which the tower of the steeple rises 20 feet square to the height of 40 feet. This is surmounted by an octagon spire covered with tin, crowned with a brass gilt ball 5 feet in diameter, surmounted by a cross of gilt brass 10 feet high. In the steeple is a peal of 6 bells, the three largest of which weigh from 1,600 to 2,600 pounds each. The front of the building is of polished freestone, with a portico of 4 massive Doric columns. There is also a U. S. land office, a Theatre, and a Concert Hall.

There are several literary and benevolent institutions in the city. The St. Louis University is under the direction of the Catholics, and has 15 instructors, 60 students, and 7,900 volumes in its libraries. It has a spacious building in the city, and is amply endowed. The commencement is on the 31st of July. Kemper College is under the direction of the Episcopalians, and is beautifully situated 4 miles from the city, with extensive grounds around it. Its medical department is within the city, and has a spacious building capable of accommodating 400 students, a hall for lectures, chemical laboratory, &c. The Western Academy of Sciences has an extensive museum of natural history and mineralogy, &c. There is also a Museum, containing Indian antiquities, fossil remains, and other curiosities.

The Convent of the Sacred Heart is an institution of nuns, for conducting female education. The Protestant ladies conduct an Orphan Asylum; and there is a Catholic Orphan Asylum conducted by the Sisters of Charity.

There are 14 churches in the city—3 Episcopal, 2 Methodist, 2 Presbyterian, 2 Roman Catholic, 1 Associate Reformed Presbyterian, 1 German Lutheran, 1 Baptist, 1 Unitarian, 1 African Methodist, and 1 African Baptist.

The city has a bank and 2 insurance companies. In the southern limits of the city is a U. S. arsenal, and 14 miles distant from it are the U. S. Jefferson Barracks, capable of accommodating 600 or 700 men.

There were in 1840, 1 foreign commercial and 24 commission houses, with a cap. of $717,000; 214 retail stores, with a cap. of $3,575,050; 17 lumber yards, with a cap. of $287,529; 40 persons employed in internal transportation, together with 37 butchers and packers, employed a cap. of $141,500; furs, skins, &c., valued at $306,300; machinery $169,807; 2 tanneries, cap. $54,500; 1 distillery, and 6 breweries, capital $48,800; 1 ropewalk, cap. $10,000; 2 flouring m., 1 grist m., 6 saw m., 1 oil m., cap. $106,500; 22 printing offices, 6 daily, 7 weekly, and 5 semi-weekly newspapers, employed a cap. $49,650; 210 brick and stone, and 130 wooden houses, cost $761,980. Total cap. in manufac. $674,250. 10 acad. 577 students, 7 sch. 713 scholars.

This place was founded in 1764, by the French from Canada, as a trading post with the Indians; but during the French and Spanish possession of it, it remained an inconsiderable village.

SAINT LOUISVILLE, p-o., Licking co., O.
SAINT MARIE, p-v., Jasper co., Ill., 139 s. z. Springfield, 716 W.

SAINT MARKS, r., Flor., a small r. which unites with Wakully r. at St. Marks, to form Apalachee r. It rises in a small pond 19 m. n. z. from its junction with the Wakully. Boats requiring 4 feet water ascend it to its source.

SAINT MARKS, p-v., and port of entry, Leon co., Flor., 20 s. Tallahassee, 816 W. It is situated on St. Marks r., near the junction of Wakully r., which form Apalachee r., and constitutes the port of Tallahassee, with which it is connected by a railroad. It promises to be a place of considerable business. Below St. Marks the navigation is very crooked and impeded by oyster bars. Congress, in 1829, appropriated a sum of money to improve the navigation. There is a light-house at the entrance of the r. St. Marks is 6 miles above the entrance of the r., which has 8 feet of water to this place.

SAINT MARTIN'S, r., Md., crosses the n. e. part of Worcester co. and enters Sinepuxent bay, in the Atlantic, opposite to Fenwick's island.

SAINT MARTIN'S, parish, La. Situated toward the s. part of the state, and contains 850 sq. ms. The Atchafalaya bayou runs on its n. e. border. Watered by Teche r. In its s. e. part it is liable to submersion. It contains Chetimaches lake and Grand island in its s. e. part. It has some prairie and some arable soil on the banks of the streams, which is very fertile. It produces cotton, Indian corn, rice and indigo, and peaches and figs. Cattle are raised. Capital, St. Martinsville. There were in 1840, neat cattle 26,930, sheep 5,054, swine 7,297; Ind. corn, 96,939 bush. produced, cotton 1,783,283 pounds, sugar 2,474,700; 39 stores, cap. $294,100; 2 lumber yards, cap. $18,500; 2 tanneries, 1 printing office. Cap. in manufac. $126,000. 1 acad. 26 students, 6 sch. 110 scholars. Pop. whites 3,549, slaves 4,641, free col'd 484; total, 8,674.

SAINT MARTINSVILLE, p-v., St. Martin's par., La., 178 w. New Orleans, 1,291 W. Situated on the w. side of Teche r. It is built chiefly on one street, on the elevated bank of the r. It contains a court house, a jail, a Roman Catholic church, and is surrounded by a settlement of opulent planters. Pop. about 400.

SAINT MATHEW'S, p-o, Orangeburg dist., S. C.

SAINT MARY'S, r., Ga. and Flor., rises in a swamp in the s. part of Ware co., Ga., and flowing s. for some distance, it suddenly turns n., and after a considerable distance, it takes an easterly course, until it falls into the Atlantic. Its length is 105 ms. It has a depth of water, on the bar at its mouth, of 13½ feet at low tide, and 19½ feet at ordinary high tide. It forms the only good harbor from the boundary of Ga. to Florida point. It is susceptible of defence. This r. was formerly the boundary of the United States.

SAINT MARY'S, r., O. and Ia., rises in Mercer co., O., and flows n. w., and unites with St. Joseph's r., at Fort Wayne, to form Maumee r.

SAINT MARY'S, strait, Mich., forms the outlet of Lake Superior, and connects it with Lake Huron. It leaves Lake Superior in its s. e. part, and pursues a s. e. course for 60 m., and enters Lake Huron by three passages—the e., middle, and w. straits. It has four large islands, Sugar, Sailors' Encampment, Lime Kiln, St. Joseph's islands, and Drummond island, at its mouth, besides some smaller ones. The usual ship channel is up the w. strait, and the navigation is difficult, and requires an experienced pilot. Its general width is three fourths of a mile, and the current 1½ m. an hour. It is navigable above and below the rapids, which are 15 ms. from Lake Superior, for large vessels. The rapids are three fourths of a m. long, and have a fall of 22 feet 10 inches. The entire fall of the r., from Lake Superior to its mouth, is 44 feet 8 inches. A ship canal has been in contemplation around the falls. Large quantities of whitefish, trout, and other fish are taken in this r., and extensively exported.

SAINT MARY'S, county, Md. Situated in the s. w. part of the state, between the Potomac and Patuxent rivers, and contains 200 sq. ms. Several short rivers, with broad estuaries, flow into the Potomac r. The largest of these is the Wicomico r., which forms its western boundary for some distance. Capital, Leonardtown. There were in 1840, neat cattle 10,073, sheep 11,390, swine 17,330;

SALEM, city, port of entry, and one of the capitals of Essex co., Mass. Situated in 43° 34' n. lat., and 70° 5' w. lon. from Greenwich, and in 6° e. lon. from Washington. It is 14 n. n. w. from Boston, and 454 n. e. W. The population in 1810, was 12,613; 1820, 12,731; in 1830, 13,886; in 1840, 15,082. Employed in commerce, 287; manufactures and trades, 1,189; navigating the ocean, 1,301; learned professions, &c., 52.

It is chiefly built on a tongue of land formed by 2 inlets from the sea, called North and South rivers, over the former of which is a bridge, upwards of 1,500 feet long, connecting it with Beverly, and the latter forms the harbor. The harbor has good anchorage ground, but vessels drawing more than 12 or 14 feet of water must be partially unloaded before they can come to its wharves. The situation of Salem is low, but it is pleasant and healthy. It is well built, and latterly most of the houses which have been erected, are of brick, and many of them are tasteful and elegant. The compact part of Salem is about one and a half miles long, and half a mile wide. The streets are irregular, having been originally laid out without much regard to symmetry and beauty. In the northern part of the town there is an elegant public square or common, containing about 10 acres, surrounded by a handsome public walk, ornamented with rows of trees. An aqueduct supplies the city with an abundance of excellent spring water. Salem was long the second town in New England in wealth, commerce, and population; but Providence and Lowell now exceed it in population, and New Bedford in shipping. It was long distinguished for its East India trade, by which it was greatly enriched; but this branch of commerce, though still carried on, is less extensive than formerly. On a peninsula below the town are Fort Pickering and Fort Lee; and on Baker's island there is a light-house. The tonnage of this port in 1840, was 37,020.

Among the public buildings are a court house, a jail, an almshouse, a market house, an East India Marine Museum, and a Lyceum. It has 9 banks, with an aggregate capital of $2,000,000; 6 insurance companies, with a total capital of $950,000; a marine insurance company, and an institution for savings. There are 2 public libraries, an Athenaeum containing 10,000 volumes, and a mechanics' library, containing 1,200 volumes. There are 16 churches—4 Unitarian, 4 Congregational, 2 Baptist, 1 Episcopal, 1 Methodist, 1 Christian, 1 Roman Catholic, 1 Friends, and 1 Universalist.

Among the public institutions is a society formed of those who, as captains or supercargoes, have doubled the Cape of Good Hope or Cape Horn, formed in 1801, for the relief, when necessary, of the families of its members, and for advancing the knowledge necessary for the East India trade. It has a splendid museum, consisting of curiosities collected from all parts of the world. To this museum strangers have free access when introduced by a member.

There were in 1840, 45 commercial houses; 80 retail stores, with a cap. of $430,000; capital invested in the fisheries, $200,000; 17 tanneries, cap. $75,000; 4 distilleries, cap. $35,000; paints, drugs, &c., cap. $140,000; 4 ropewalks, cap. $83,000; 2 grist m., 2 saw m., cap. $50,000; 3 printing offices, 2 weekly and 2 semi-weekly newspapers, cap. $9,000. Total cap. in manufac. $1,439,000. 1 acad. 32 students, 77 sch. 2,965 scholars.

Next to Plymouth, Salem is the oldest place in the state, having been settled in 1623. Its Indian name was Naumkeag or Naumkeek, by which it was designated in early times. The territory, which originally included Danvers, Beverly, and Marblehead, was purchased of the Plymouth colony by a company in England, and was settled by a colony under John Endicott, as agent, and John Winthrop was its first governor, appointed by the company in England. This colony so increased that in a few years Boston, Charlestown, and Dorchester, were settled by emigrants from it. In 1693, the celebrated delusion denominated "the Salem witchcraft" prevailed, and 19 persons were hanged as witches, in this and some neighboring towns, including Charlestown and Boston. The first trial was of a person living in what is now Danvers, and the house is still standing in Salem in which the trials were held, and the place of execution is now denominated "gallows hill," from which now peaceful spot the most delightful view of the city is obtained. At length this severity was condemned, and the occasion of it was pronounced a delusion. These colonists undoubtedly erred exceedingly, but their error belonged to the age. The English laws at the time recognized witchcraft as a capital offence, and these laws were sanctioned by such men as the learned and upright judge, Sir Matthew Hale.

Salem was distinguished as the early supporter of the American Revolution. On the closing of the port of Boston, the general court was removed to this place, and General Gage hoped that the inhabitants would be conciliated by the prospect of increasing prosperity. But by a unanimous vote in a public town meeting they gave him to understand that they disdained to flourish on the ruin of Boston, and they offered resistance to an attempt to seize some military stores before the battle of Lexington. During the revolutionary war Salem was distinguished for the number, boldness, and success of its privateers, amounting to 60 vessels, manned by 4,000 men. Salem became a city in 1836. The railroad from Salem to Boston was opened in 1838, and is passed in 50 minutes.

SAVANNAH, P.-O., Richland co., O., 86 n. by e. Columbus, 375 W.

SAVANNAH, city, port of entry, and capital of Chatham county, Georgia, is situated on the s. w. bank of the Savannah river, 17 miles from its mouth. It is in 32° 8' n. lat. and 81° 10' w. lon. from Greenwich, and 4° 10' w. from Washington. It is 118 s. w. from Charleston; 123 s. e. Augusta; 158 e. s. e. Milledgeville; 663 s. by w. from W. The population in 1810, was 5,195; in 1820, 7,523; in 1830, 7,776; in 1840, 11,214—of which 4,694 were slaves. Employed in commerce, 604; in manufactures and trades, 707; navigating the ocean, canals, &c., 241; learned professions, 131.

The city is built on a sandy plain, elevated about 40 feet above the level of the tide. It was formerly considered unhealthy, which chiefly arose from the rice grounds in the neighborhood; but the citizens subscribed $70,000 to induce the owners of the plantations to substitute a dry for a wet cultivation of that article, by which the health of the city has been much improved. The city is regularly laid out in the form of a parallelogram, with streets, many of them wide, crossing each other at right angles. There are 10 public squares, containing 3 acres each, at equal distances from each other. These squares, and many of the streets, are bordered with trees, and particularly with the Fride of India, which gives them a beautiful appearance. Many of the houses are of brick, and a considerable number of them are elegant. On the e. and w. of the city are marshes; and a pine barren extends 2 miles to the s.

It has a good harbor. Vessels requiring 14 feet of water come up to the wharves of the city, and larger vessels come up to Fathom Hole, 3 ms. below. The city is defended by Fort Wayne on the e. side, and by Fort Jackson at Fathom Hole, 3 ms. below. Much of the trade of Georgia centres in Savannah—the principal articles of them are cotton and rice. 20 steamboats of a large size, and 50 steam tow-boats, navigate the river. On Tybee island, at the mouth of the river, is a light-house. One line of packets, consisting of 2 ships and 4 brigs, one vessel sailing from each place weekly—and another, consisting of 6 brigs, ply between this place and New York part of the state, and contains 418 square miles. Organized in 1819. Drained by Miami r. and its branches. The surface is undulating; soil, fertile. ## SOUTH CAROLINA.

SOUTH CAROLINA, one of the southern United States, is bounded n. by North Carolina; s. e. by the Atlantic; and s. w. by Georgia, from which it is separated by the Savannah river. It is between 32° 2' and 35° 10' n. lat., and between 78° 24' and 83° 30' w. lon., and between 1° 45' and 6° 15' w. from W. It is 200 miles long and 125 broad, containing about 25,000 square miles, or 16,000,000 acres. The population in 1790 was 240,000; in 1800, 345,591; in 1810, 415,115; in 1820, 502,741; in 1830, 581,458; in 1840, 594,393, including 327,038 slaves. Of the free population, 130,496 were white males; 128,598 do. females; 3,864 were colored males; 4,412 do. females. Employed in agriculture, 198,363; in commerce, 1,958; manufactures and trades, 10,325; navigating the ocean, 381; canals, rivers, &c., 348; learned professions, &c., 1,481.

This state is divided into 29 districts, which with their population in 1840, and their capitals, were as follows: ABBEVILLE, 29,351, Abbeville; ANDERSON, 18,493, Anderson C. H.; BARNWELL, 21,471, Barnwell C. H.; BEAUFORT, 35,794, Coosawhatchie; CHARLESTON, 82,661, Charleston; CHESTER, 17,747, Chester C. H.; CHESTERFIELD, 8,574, Chesterfieldville; COLLETON, 25,543, Walterborough; DARLINGTON, 14,822, Darlington C. H.; EDGEFIELD, 32,852, Edgefield C. H.; FAIRFIELD, 20,165, Winnsborough; GEORGETOWN, 18,274, Georgetown; GREENVILLE, 17,839, Greenville; HORRY, 5,755, Conwayborough; KERSHAW, 12,281, Camden; LANCASTER, 9,907, Lancaster C. H.; LAURENS, 21,584, Laurensville; LEXINGTON, 12,111, Lexington; MARION, 13,932, Marion; MARLBOROUGH, 8,408, Bennettsville; NEWBERRY, 18,350, Newberry C. H.; ORANGEBURG, 18,519, Orangeburg C. H.; PICKENS, 14,356, Pickens C. H.; RICHLAND, 16,397, Columbia; SPARTANBURG, 23,699, Spartanburg; SUMTER, 27,892, Sumterville; UNION, 18,936, Unionville; WILLIAMSBURG, 10,327, Kingstree; YORK, 18,383, Yorkville.

Columbia, on the left bank of the Congaree, immediately below the confluence of Broad and Saluda rivers, is the seat of government.

The seacoast is bordered with a fine chain of islands, between which and the shore there is a very convenient navigation. The mainland is naturally divided into the Lower and Upper country. The low country extends from 80 to 100 miles from the seacoast, and is covered with extensive forests of pitch pine, called pine-barrens, interspersed with marshes and swamps of a rich soil. The banks of the large rivers, and the creeks of this region, are bordered with a belt of excellent land, producing cotton and Indian corn in abundance. The marshes and swamps in this district make fine rice plantations.

After leaving the Low country, in proceeding into the interior, you first pass through a region of little sand-hills, which have been compared to the arrested waves of the sea in a storm. This curious country, sometimes denominated the Middle country, continues for 50 or 60 miles, till you arrive at the Ridge, or Upper country, the ascent to which, proceeding from the Atlantic, is sudden, and somewhat precipitous. The Lower falls of the river are found along this ridge. The low grounds between the sand hills in this region are suitable for agriculture and pasturage; but with these exceptions, the country below the ridge is barren, and scarcely worth cultivation. Beyond the ridge commences a beautiful and healthy country of hills and dales, and fine flowing streams of pure water. This whole region may be regarded as an elevated table land, and is generally fertile. At the distance of 220 miles n. w. from Charleston, the land is 800 feet above the level of the sea. From this the country rises gradually to the mountainous region to the w., where the great Alleghany range passes through the state, in several ridges, some of which have high peaks. Table mountain, one of the most conspicuous of these, is 4,000 feet above the level of the sea. The staple productions of the state are cotton and rice, great quantities of which are exported. Rice was first introduced in 1693, and is raised only in the low country, where the land can be irrigated by the tide, or the overflowing of the rivers. Indigo was formerly produced in large quantities, but it has given place to the more profitable crop of cotton. The sea-island cotton, produced in the islands along the shore, is of a superior quality, and is in great demand.

In 1840, there were in this state 129,921 horses and mules; 572,608 neat cattle; 232,961 sheep; 878,532 swine; poultry to the value of $396,364. There were produced 963,354 bushels of wheat; 3,967 of barley; 1,486,208 of oats; 44,738 of rye; 14,722,805 of Indian corn; 299,170 pounds of wool; 15,857 of wax; 2,698,313 bushels of potatoes; 24,618 tons of hay; 51,519 pounds of tobacco; 60,590,860 of rice; 61,710,274 of cotton; 2,030 of silk cocoons; 30,000 of sugar. The products of the dairy were valued at $577,810; of the orchard, $52,275; of lumber, $537,684.

The minerals in this state are gold, iron, various ochres, marble, limestone, and some lead, potter's clay, fuller's earth, and other useful fossils.

Charleston, at the confluence of Ashley and Cooper rivers, is much the largest and most commercial place in the state; but its harbor is obstructed, at the entrance, by a dangerous sand bar. Georgetown, at the head of Winyaw bay, 13 miles from the ocean, will only admit small vessels. Beaufort, on the island of Port Royal, has much the best harbor in the state, but is not a place of much trade. Besides these, Columbia, the capital, and Georgetown, are flourishing places.

The great Pedee river, 450 miles long, rises in N. Carolina, and runs through the eastern part of the state. It is navigable, for sloops, 130 miles. The Santee, formed by the junction of the Wateree and the Congaree, rises in North Carolina, and has a sloop navigation for about 130 miles. The Saluda is a branch of the Congaree. The Edisto is navigable for large boats 100 miles. The Savannah washes the whole s. w. border of the state, and is a noble stream. There are several smaller rivers, among which are Cooper, Ashley, and Combahee.

The most important literary institution in this state is the College of South Carolina, at Columbia, founded in 1804. There is a theological seminary connected with the institution. It had in 1840, 163 students. Charleston College was founded in 1785, and has about 65 students. There were in this state in 1840, 117 academies, or grammar schools, with 4,326 students; and 566 common and primary schools. There were 20,615 free white persons, over 20 years of age, who could neither read nor write.

The Methodists, Baptists, and Presbyterians are the most numerous religious denominations. At the commencement of 1836, the Methodists had 37,503 communicants. The Baptists had 314 churches, 226 ministers, and 36,276 communicants. The Presbyterians had 90 churches, 70 ministers. The Episcopalians had 50 churches, 1 bishop, and 43 ministers. The Lutherans had, in 1840, 24 ministers, 34 congregations, and 1,667 communicants. There are a few congregations of Roman Catholics, Unitarians, Friends, Universalists, and Jews.

At the commencement of 1840 there were 14 banks and branches in this state, with an aggregate capital of $11,534,355, and a circulation of $4,439,404. The state debt at the close of 1840, amounted to $3,764,734.

The exports of this state in 1840, were $10,036,769; and the imports were $2,058,870. There were 41 commercial and 41 commission houses engaged in foreign trade, with a cap. of $3,668,050; 1,253 retail drygoods and other stores, with a capital of $6,648,736; 1,057 persons employed in the lumber trade, with a capital of $100,000; 125 persons employed in internal transportation, who, with 46 butchers, packers, &c., employed a capital of $112,900; 53 persons employed in the fisheries, with a capital of $1,617.

The amount of home-made or family manufactures was $930,703; there were 3 woollen manufactories, employing 6 persons, producing articles to the amount of $1,000, with a capital of $4,300; 15 cotton manufactories, with 16,355 spindles, employing 570 persons, producing articles to the amount of $359,000, employing a capital of $617,450; 4 furnaces, producing 1,250 tons of cast iron, and 9 forges producing 1,165 tons of bar iron, employing 248 persons, and a capital of $113,300; 5 smelting houses, employing 69 persons, producing gold to the amount of $37,418, with a capital of $40,000; 1 paper manufactory, employing 30 persons, producing articles to the amount of $20,800, with a capital of $30,000; 20 persons produced hats and caps to the amount of $3,750; 97 tanneries, employing 281 persons, and a capital of $212,020; 243 other leather manufactories, as saddlery,

&c., producing articles to the amount of $109,472, employing a capital of $45,662; 8 potteries, employing 49 persons, producing articles to the amount of $19,300, with a capital of $12,950; 127 persons produced machinery to the amount of $65,561; 26 persons produced hardware and cutlery to the amount of $13,465; 420 persons produced carriages and wagons to the amount of $182,270, with a capital of $132,690; 164 flouring mills produced 58,458 barrels of flour, which with other mills employed 2,122 persons, producing articles to the amount of $1,201,678, and employing a capital of $1,663,804; 1,231 persons manufactured bricks and lime to the amount of $193,408, with a capital of $72,445; 168 persons manufactured 596,327 pounds of soap, and 68,011 pounds of tallow candles; 251 distilleries produced 102,238 gallons, employing 219 persons, and a capital of $14,342; ships and vessels were constructed to the amount of $60,000; 241 persons manufactured furniture to the amount of $28,155, with a capital of $133,600; 111 brick or stone houses, and 1,594 wooden houses were erected, employing 2,398 persons, at a cost of $1,527,576; 16 printing offices, and 7 binderies, 3 daily, 12 weekly, and 2 semi-weekly newspapers, and 4 periodicals, employed 164 persons, and a capital of $131,300. The amount of capital employed in manufac. was $3,216,970.

The first constitution of South Carolina was formed in 1775; the present constitution was adopted in 1790. The governor is elected for 2 years by a joint vote of both houses of the assembly. After having served one term, he is ineligible for the next 4 years. A lieutenant-governor is chosen in the same manner and for the same period. The senate consists of 45 members, elected by districts for 4 years. The house of representatives consists of 124 members, apportioned among the several districts, according to the number of white inhabitants, and taxation; and are elected for 2 years. The representatives and one half the senators are chosen every second year, in October. The legislature meets annually in Columbia, on the fourth Monday of November. The chancellor and judges of the supreme court are chosen by the joint ballot of both houses of the assembly, and hold their offices during good behavior. Every free white male citizen of 21 years of age, who has resided in the state 2 years immediately preceding the election, and having been possessed of a freehold of 50 acres of land, or a town lot, 6 months before the election; or not possessing this freehold, who shall have resided in the election district in which he offers to vote, 6 months before the election, and have paid a tax of 3 shillings sterling to the support of the government, possesses the right of suffrage.

South Carolina has some important works of internal improvement. The Santee canal extends 22 miles from Charleston harbor to the Santee river, and was finished in 1802, at a cost of $650,667. Through this canal and the improvement of the Santee and Congaree rivers, a boatable communication has been opened from Charleston to Columbia. Winyaw canal extends 7½ miles from Winyaw bay to Kinlock creek, a branch of the Santee river.

The navigation of the Catawba river has been improved by 5 short canals, with an aggregate length of about 11½ miles. Saluda canal extends from the head of Saluda Shoals to Granby Ferry, 6½ miles. Besides these, there are three other short canals to avoid obstructions of falls or shoals in rivers.

The South Carolina railroad commences at Charleston and extends 135½ miles to Hamburg. This road was commenced in 1830 and completed in 1834, at a cost of $1,750,000. It has since been sold to the Louisville, Cincinnati and Charleston Railroad Company for $2,400,000, paid for in the stock of the latter company. The entire length of this road from Charleston to Cincinnati will be 718 miles. The Branchville and Columbia railroad extends from Branchville, on the South Carolina railroad, 66 miles to Columbia. This is to form a part of the Charleston, Louisville, and Cincinnati railroad.

The first settlement of this state was made under Governor Sayle, at Port Royal, in 1670. The next year they settled Charleston above its present site, but 9 years after they abandoned that settlement and began to build Charleston where it now stands. In 1682 the province was divided into 3 counties. A colony of French refugees, in 1690, exiled by the revocation of the edict of Nantz, settled in Carolina; and from them many of its respectable inhabitants are descended. The Church of England was established by law, in 1703. The colonists throughout the Carolinas threw off the proprietary government in 1719, and established one for themselves. The next year the privy council sanctioned the proceeding, and in 1729, the parliament purchased the country of the proprietors, as mentioned in the account of North Carolina. The country was then divided and this portion received its present name of South Carolina. At different times colonies of Swiss, of Germans, and of Irish have settled in this state. In 1752, 1,600 foreign protestants arrived in Carolina. This state early suffered much from wars with the Indians. This state was early in its resistance of the aggressions of the mother country, and bore its part in the revolutionary war. The British troops occupied Charleston, and a considerable part of the state in 1780. Several battles were fought here during that and the succeeding year, the most important of which was that of the Eutaw Springs, in 1781, which in effect terminated the war in this state. In convention, May 23d, 1788, this state adopted the constitution of the United States; yeas 149, nays 73—majority 76.

SUPERIOR, lake, the largest in North America, and supposed to be the largest body of fresh water in the world. It is about 390 ms. long and 130 wide, and about 1,200 or 1,500 in circumference. The boundary line between the United States and Canada passes through its central part. It is surrounded mostly by a rocky and uneven coast, and contains many considerable islands, one of the largest of which, Isle Royal, is about 100 ms. long and 40 ms. broad. It abounds with fish, particularly trout, sturgeon, and whitefish, which are caught at all seasons, and in large quantities. Of these the trout, weighing from 12 to 50 pounds, and the whitefish, weighing often over 20 pounds, are, perhaps, the most important. The storms on this lake are equal to those on the Atlantic; the waves run as high, and its navigation is as difficult. Its surface is elevated 635 feet above the level of the sea, and its mean depth is 900 feet. Its waters are remarkably clear and transparent. It receives more than 30 rivers, and discharges its waters into Lake Huron, by the straits or r. of St. Mary. The rapids or falls here prevent vessels from passing into it, from Lake Huron. The pictured rocks on its s. shore, toward its E. end, are a great curiosity. They form a perpendicular wall, 300 feet high, extending about 12 ms. They have caves which receive the waves with a tremendous roar. At one place a considerable stream is thrown from them into the lake, by a single leap, from the height of 70 feet, and boats can pass dry between it and the rocky shore. At another place 4 rocky pillars support a stratum or entablature of stone, covered with soil, on which trees of spruce and pine grow, some of which are 50 or 60 feet high. This is called the Doric Rock or Arch, and appears like a work of art, though it is the work of nature.

SUSQUEHANNA, r., the largest river in Pa., and one of the largest in the U. S., is formed by 2 main branches, the Eastern and the Western. The Eastern branch rises in Otsego co., N. Y., and one of its sources in Otsego lake. It receives the Chenango, a considerable river from the n., at Binghamton, and proceeding w. and turning s., it crosses into Pa., soon after which it is joined by the Western branch, called the Tioga or Chesung river, 3 ms. below the Pennsylvania line. It then flows s. e., and then s. w., until it receives the Western branch, its largest tributary, at Northumberland, after which its course is first s., 40 ms., until it receives the Juniata from the w., and then s. e. until it falls into the Chesapeake bay, near the n. e. corner of Maryland. It is navigable for sloops 5 miles from its mouth to Fort Deposit, at the head of the tide. Above that, for nearly 50 miles, the river is obstructed by a continued succession of rapids, which render navigation in boats up the stream impossible; but in high water, a vast amount of lumber and produce comes down the river, in rafts, arks, &c. In the upper parts of the river the obstructions to boat navigation are not great, and might be easily overcome. The importance of a river depends much upon its capacity for navigation. In this view, the Susquehanna has less importance than many others in the U. S., which drain a less extent of surface, and carry a less volume of water. It is a mile and a quarter wide at its entrance into Chesapeake bay. Canals are extensively constructed along its banks, for which it affords great facilities. Its whole length is about 450 miles.

SUSQUEHANNA, county, Pa. Situated in the n. e. part of the state, and contains 675 sq. miles. The surface is hilly and broken; soil, fertile. Susquehanna r. passes into the n. part of the co., and returns into N. Y. Drained by branches of Susquehanna r. Capital, Montrose. TENNESSEE river runs chiefly in the state of the same name, and is the largest tributary of the Ohio. Its most remote sources are Clinch r. and Holston r., which rises in the Alleghany mountains in Virginia. Its other head branches are Nolachucky, French Broad, Tellico and Richland. The Holston and Clinch, of which the others are branches, unite about 45 miles s. of w. from Knoxville, forming the Tennessee proper, which then pursues a s. w. direction across the state, and enters the state of Alabama, in which it pursues a westerly course for 150 or 200 miles, and then turns N., and crosses the state of Tennessee, and the western part of Kentucky, and enters the Ohio 11½ ms. below the mouth of Cumberland river, and 47½ miles above the entrance of the Ohio into the Mississippi, by the course of the river. It receives, through its whole course, many tributaries, none of which are of very great extent. The whole descent of the river from its most remote source to its mouth, is about 1,700 feet; its whole length by the course of the river is nearly 1,200 miles, being longer than the Ohio below Pittsburg. It drains a surface of 41,000 square miles. There are no perpendicular falls, and few rapids which obstruct navigation, through its whole course. The greatest obstruction is the Muscle shoals in Alabama. Florence, at the foot of these rapids on the N. side, is 259 miles from its mouth, and to this distance steamboats come, during high water. A canal has been made around these shoals 36 miles in length, but is designed to be extended further; and above, the navigation for boats is unobstructed for 250 miles. At that distance occurs the suck or whirl, in which the river passes a large projecting rock on the N. side, causing a sudden bend in the river, which produces the whirl. The whirl is at the entrance into the Cumberland mountains, above which the country is rough, and the navigation is more difficult. The river being rapid, is chiefly favorable to navigation down the stream.

TENNESSEE.

TENNESSEE, one of the western United States, is bounded N. by Kentucky; E. by North Carolina; S. by Georgia, Alabama, and Mississippi; and W. by the Mississippi river, which separates it from Arkansas and Missouri. It lies between 35° and 36° 30' N. lat., and between 81° 30' and 90° 10' W. lon., and between 4° 39' and 13° 14' W. from W. It is at its mean length 400 miles, and its mean breadth 114 miles; containing 45,600 square miles, or 29,184,000 acres. The population in 1790 was 35,691; in 1800, 105,602; in 1810, 261,737; in 1820, 422,813; in 1830, 681,904; in 1840, 889,210, of which 183,059 were slaves. Of the free population 325,434 were white males; 315,193 do. females; 2,796 free colored males; 2,728 do. females. Employed in agriculture, 227,739; in commerce, 2,217; in manufactures and trades, 17,815; navigating the ocean, rivers, &c., 357; learned professions, 2,042.

This state is divided into 73 counties, which, with their population in 1840, and their capitals, were as follows: Eastern District—ANDERSON, 5,658, Clinton; BLEDSOR, 5,676, Pikeville; BLOUNT,

11,745, Marysville; BRADLEY, 7,385, Cleveland; CAMPBELL, 6,149, Jacksborough; CARTER, 5,372, Elizabethtown; CLAIBORNE, 9,474, Tazewell; COCKE, 6,992, Newport; GRANGER, 10,572, Rudge; GREENE, 16,076, Greenville; HAMILTON, 8,175, Dallas; HAWKINS, 15,033, Rogersville; JEFFERSON, 12,076, Dandridge; JOHNSON, 2,658, Taylorsville; KNOX, 15,485, Knoxville; MARION, 6,070, Jasper; McMINN, 12,719, Athens; MEIGS, 4,794, Decatur; MONROE, 12,056, Madisonville; MORGAN, 2,660, Montgomery; POLK, 3,570, Bentonville; REEA, 3,985, Washington; ROAN, 10,948, Kingston; SEVIER, 6,442, Sevierville; SULLIVAN, 10,736, Blountville; WASHINGTON, 11,751, Jonesborough. Middle District—BEDFORD, 20,546, Shelbyville; CANNON, 7,193, Woodbury; COFFEY, 8,184, Manchester; DAVIDSON, 30,509, Nashville; DE KALE, 5,968, Smithville; DICKSON, 7,074, Charlotte; FENTRESS, 3,550, Jamesstown; FRANKLIN, 12,033, Winchester; GILES, 21,494, Pulaski; HICKMAN, 8,618, Centerville; HUMPHREYS, 5,195, Reynoldsburg; JACKSON, 12,872, Gainesborough; LAWRENCE, 7,121, Lawrenceburg; LINCOLN, 21,493, Fayetteville; MANSHALL, 14,555, Lewisburg; MAURY, 28,186, Columbia; MONTGOMERY, 16,927, Clarksville; ORTONTON, 9,279, Monroe; ROBERTSON, 13,801, Springfield; RUTHERFORD, 24,280, Murfreesborough; SMITH, 21,179, Carthage; SUMNER, 22,445, Gallatin; STEWART, 8,587, Dover; WARREN, 10,311, McMinnville; WAYNE, 7,705, Waynesborough; WHITE, 10,747, Sparta; WILLIAMSON, 27,006, Franklin; WILSON, 24,460, Lebanon. Western District—BENTON, 4,772, Camden; CARROLL, 12,362, Huntingdon; DYER, 4,484, Dyersburg; FAYETTE, 21,501, Somersville; GIBSON, 13,689, Trenton; HARDEMAN, 14,563, Bolivar; HARDIN, 8,245, Savannah; HAYWOOD, 13,870, Brownsville; HENDERSON, 11,875, Lexington; HENRY, 14,906, Paris; LAUDERDALE, 3,435, Ripley; MADISON, 16,530, Jackson; McNAIRY, 9,385, Purdy; OSION, 4,814, Troy; PERRY, 7,419, Perryville; SHELBY, 14,721, Raleigh; TIPTON, 6,800, Covington; WEAKLEY, 9,870, Dresden.

Nashville, on the s. bank of Cumberland river, is the seat of government.

Cumberland mountains run through the middle of the state, in the direction of N. E. and S. W., dividing it into two parts, denominated East Tennessee and West Tennessee. The western part of Tennessee is level, or gently undulating; in the middle it is hilly. East Tennessee abounds in mountains, many of them elevated, presenting much grand and picturesque scenery. Of the mountains, Cumberland, or Great Laurel ridge, is the most remarkable. It nowhere has an elevation of more than 1,000 feet. The names of the other mountains are Stone, Yellow, Iron, Bald, Smoky, and Unika, which form a chain in a N. E. and S. W. direction, and constitute the eastern boundary of the state. Northwest of these are Bay's mountain, Copper ridge, Clinch mountain, Powell's mountain, and Welling's ridge, with valleys between them from 5 to 10 miles wide. These valleys open passages for rivers and roads. Caves of great depth and extent are found throughout the state.

The soil is various, but generally fertile. The western part has a black, rich soil; in the middle are great quantities of excellent land; in the eastern part the mountains are poor, but the valleys are very fertile. The country has a great profusion of native timber, poplar, hickory, walnut, oak, beech, sycamore, locust, cherry, sugar-maple, &c., and in some parts are great quantities of cane, very thick and strong. There are many medicinal plants, such as snakeroot, ginseng, Carolina pink, angelica, senna, anise, and spikenard. The soil produces abundantly cotton and tobacco, the staple commodities of the state; also grain, grass, and fruit. Cattle are extensively exported from East Tennessee.

In 1840 there were in this state, 341,409 horses and mules; 822,851 neat cattle; 741,593 sheep; 2,926,607 swine; poultry valued at $606,969. There were produced 4,569,692 bushels of wheat; 4,809 of barley; 7,035,678 of oats; 304,320 of rye; 17,118 of buckwheat; 44,966,186 of Ind. corn; 1,060,332 pounds of wool; 850 of hops; 50,907 of wax; 1,904,370 bushels of potatoes; 31,223 tons of hay; 3,344 of hemp and flax; 29,550,432 pounds of tobacco; 7,977 of rice; 27,701,877 of cotton; 1,217 of silk cocoons; 258,073 of sugar. The products of the dairy were valued at $472,141; and of the orchard at $367,105; value of lumber produced, $217,606; 3,336 barrels of tar, pitch, &c., were made.

A considerable portion of this state rests on a bed of limestone. Gypsum in large quantities has been discovered. Copperas, alum, nitre, and lead, are among the minerals, and some silver has been found. Saltpetre forms a considerable article of commerce. Many salt springs, and some valuable mineral springs, have been found.

The climate is mild and generally healthy. The winter in Tennessee resembles the spring in New England. Snow seldom falls to a greater depth than 10 inches, or lies longer than 10 days. Cumberland river has been frozen over but three or four times since the country was settled. Cattle are rarely sheltered in winter. Some low grounds in the western part of the state are subject to bilious fevers and fever and ague, but they constitute but a very small portion of the state.

The usual route to a market is down the Cumberland and Tennessee rivers to the Ohio and thence to New Orleans. Foreign goods come extensively from the east through Pittsburgh. Cattle, in considerable numbers, are driven from East Tennessee to an eastern market.

Tennessee river, though it has not its rise nor its entrance, has its chief course in this state. It is 1,200 miles long, and is navigable for steamboats to Florence in Alabama, 259 miles above its entrance into the Ohio, and for boats 250 miles further. Cumberland river rises in Kentucky, but runs mainly in Tennessee. It is navigable for steamboats 200 miles to Nashville, and for boats 300 miles further. It enters the Ohio in Kentucky, 60 miles from the Mississippi. The Holston, Clinch, French Broad, and Hiwassee, are branches of the Tennessee. Obion, Forked Deer, and Wolf rivers, in the western part of the state, flow into the Mississippi, and are navigable for boats.

Nashville is the largest and most commercial place in the state. Knoxville, on the Holston river, is the principal town in East Tennessee, and was formerly the seat of government. Murfreesborough, in West Tennessee, was formerly the seat of government, and is in the midst of a fertile country. Memphis, on the Mississippi, is a place of considerable business. Clarksville, Franklin, Jonesboro', Winchester, and Columbia, are considerable places.

There were in 1840, 13 commercial and 52 commission houses engaged in foreign trade, with a capital of $1,495,100; 1,032 retail drygoods and other stores, with a capital of $7,357,300; 1,126 persons employed in the lumber trade, with a capital of $6,700; 31 persons employed in internal transportation, who, with 5 butchers and packers, employed a capital of $93,811.

The amount of home-made or family goods was $2,886,661. There were 26 woollen manufactories and 4 fulling mills, employing 45 persons, producing articles to the amount of $14,290, with a capital of $25,600; 38 cotton manufactories with 16,813 spindles, employing 1,542 persons, producing articles to the amount of $325,719, with a capital employed of $463,240; 34 furnaces, producing 16,123 tons of cast iron, and 99 forges, &c., producing 9,673 tons of bar iron, employing 2,266 persons, and a capital of $1,514,736; 4 persons produced gold to the amount of $1,500, with a capital of $400; 2 smelting houses for lead; 21 persons produced 13,942 bushels of bituminous coal; 5 paper manufactories produced articles to the amount of $46,000; other manufactories of paper produced articles to the amount of $14,000, the whole employing 87 persons, and a capital of $93,000; 177 persons produced hats and caps to the amount of $104,949; 454 tanneries employed 909 persons, and a capital of $484,114; 374 other leather manufactories, as saddleries, &c., produced articles to the amount of $359,050, with a capital of $154,540; 29 potteries employed 50 persons, producing articles to the amount of $51,600, with a capital of $7,300; 266 persons produced machinery to the amount of $257,704; 142 persons manufactured hardware and cutlery to the amount of $57,170; 34 persons manufactured 564 small-arms; 11 persons manufactured the precious metals to the amount of $28,460; 10 persons manufactured granite and marble to the amount of $5,400; 417 persons produced brick and lime to the amount of $119,371; 1,426 distilleries produced 1,109,107 gallons, and 6 breweries produced 1,835 gallons, the whole employing 1,341 persons, and a capital of $218,182; 518 persons manufactured carriages and wagons to the amount of $219,897, employing a capital of $80,878; 28 ropewalks employed 258 persons, producing articles to the amount of $132,630, and employing a capital of $84,230; 255 flouring mills produced 67,891 barrels of flour, and, with other mills, employed 2,100 persons, producing articles to the amount of $1,020,664, and employing a capital of $1,310,195; 203 persons manufactured furniture to the amount of $79,580, with a capital of $30,650; 193 brick or stone houses, and 1,098 wooden houses, were built by 1,467 persons, at a cost of $427,402; 41 printing offices, 5 binderies, 2 daily, 6 semi-weekly, and 38 weekly newspapers, and 10 periodicals, employed 191 persons, and a capital of $112,500. The whole amount of capital employed in manufactures was $3,731,580.

Greenville College, at Greenville, in East Tennessee, was founded in 1794; Washington College, in Washington county, was founded in 1794; the University of Nashville, in Nashville, the most important literary institution in the state, was founded in 1806; East Tennessee College, at Knoxville, was founded in 1807; Jackson College, near Columbia, was founded in 1830. The Southwestern Theological Seminary, at Marysville, was founded in 1821. The number of students in all these institutions in 1840, was 369. There were in the state 152 academies, with 5,539 students; and 983 common and primary schools, with 25,099 scholars. There were 58,531 white persons, over 20 years of age, who could neither read nor write.

In 1836 the Methodists had 127 travelling preachers, and 34,266 communicants; the Baptists had 413 churches, 219 ministers, and 20,472 communicants; the Presbyterians had 120 churches, 90 ministers, and 10,000 communicants; the Episcopalians had 1 bishop and 8 ministers. There were besides many Cumberland Presbyterians, and some Lutherans, Friends, Christians, and Catholics.

At the commencement of 1839 there were in the state 1 bank and 7 branches, with an aggregate capital of $2,292,757, and a circulation of $742,542. The state debt at the close of 1840, was $1,789,166.

The constitution of this state was formed in 1796, at Knoxville. This constitution was revised and amended, and ratified by the people, in March, 1835. The governor is elected by the people for 2 years, but is not eligible more than 6 years in 8. The representatives are chosen biennially, and their number cannot exceed 75 until the population is 500,000, and never afterwards exceed 99, apportioned among the different counties according to the number of qualified voters. The senators are chosen and apportioned in like manner, and can never exceed one third the number of representatives. The legislature meets biennially, at Nashville, in October following the election. It can be called together at other times, by the governor, if necessary. The judges of the supreme court are chosen by the joint ballot of both houses of the legislature, and hold their offices during 12 years. Every white person over 21 years of age, who is a freeholder in the county where he offers his vote, or who has resided in the county 6 months immediately preceding the election, enjoys the right of suffrage.

The internal improvements of Tennessee consist of several railroads. Lagrange and Memphis railroad extends from Memphis, on the Mississippi, 50 ms. to Lagrange, in Lafayette county. Somerville branch extends from the main road at Moscow, 16 miles, to Somerville. The Hiwassee railroad extends from Knoxville, 98½ miles, to the Georgia line, where it unites with the Western and Atlantic railroad of Georgia. The New Orleans and Nashville railroad is designed to pass through this state.

This state was originally included in the charter of North Carolina given by Charles II., in 1664; but no settlement had been made beyond the Alleghany mountains until 1757, when a few hardy pioneers established themselves at Fort Loudon, on Watauga river. This fort was attacked by the Indians in 1760, when more than 300 men, women, and children, were massacred. But the savages were chastised and subdued by Col. Grant and his troops the following year, and a favorable treaty was made by the natives. In 1765 settlements began on the Holston river. During the earlier parts of the revolutionary war the people of this territory had frequent contests with the Indians, and, in the latter part of it, with the combined forces of the British and Indians. In 1784 North Carolina ceded this territory to the United States, but soon repealed the act, and the people set up an independent government, calling it the State of Frankland, which brought them into collision with North Carolina. The territory was finally ceded to the United States in 1790, and a territorial government was established under the name of the Territory Southwest of the Ohio river. In 1795, Tennessee was admitted into the Union. The citizens of this state bore an important part in the last war, and particularly in the defence of New Orleans.

TRENTON, city, Mercer co., N. J., and capital of the state, is situated on the e. side of the Delaware, opposite the falls, and is in 40° 13' n. lat. and 75° 48' w. lon. from Greenwich, and 2° 16' e. lon. from W. It is 10 miles s. w. from Princeton; 26 s. w. from New Brunswick; 30 n. e. from Philadelphia; 60 s. w. from New York; 166 from W. The population in 1810, was 3,003; in 1820, 3,942; in 1830, 3,925; in 1840, 4,035. Of these, 103 were employed in commerce; 571 in manufactures and trades; 41 in the learned professions. The city is at the head of steamboat and sloop navigation. It is regularly laid out, and has many good houses, stores, and other buildings. The villages of Mill Hill, Bloomsbury, and Lambertson, combined in the borough of South Trenton, extending a mile and a half down the Delaware, are suburbs of the city, and in a general description, should be considered as belonging to it. In the city proper, there are a state house, 100 feet by 60, built of stone and succeeded in imitation of granite; it is beautifully situated on the bank of the Delaware, and commanding a fine view of the river, and the surrounding scenery; a house for the residence of the governor of the state; and 3 fire-proof offices, 2 banks, a public library, established in 1750, a lyceum, 7 churches—1 Presbyterian, 1 Dutch Reformed, 1 Episcopal, 2 Friends, 1 Methodist, and 1 African Methodist; and in South Trenton, a court house, state prison, 4 churches—1 Baptist, 1 Reformed Baptist, 1 Methodist, and 1 Roman Catholic, and about 2,000 inhabitants. There were in 1840, 50 retail stores, cap. $196,300; 4 lumber yards, cap. $49,000; 3 tanneries, 1 brewery, 1 pottery; 3 paper fac. cap. $30,000; 1 rope walk, 2 flouring m., 2 grist m., 3 saw m., 3 printing offices, 2 binderies, 2 weekly and 1 semi-weekly newspaper. Total cap. in manufac. $247,800. 4 acad. 104 students, 10 sch. 314 scholars.

At the foot of the falls or rapids a beautiful covered bridge crosses the Delaware, 1,100 feet long, resting on five arches, supported on stone piers. The Delaware and Raritan canal, forming a sloop navigation from Trenton to Brunswick, passes through the city, and is here entered by a feeder taken from the Delaware, 23 miles above the city. The canal crosses the Assunpink creek e. of the town in a fine stone aqueduct. Above the falls the Delaware is navigable for large boats as far as Easton, which adds much to the commercial advantages of Trenton. The New Jersey railroad passes through the place. A company has been chartered, with a capital of $200,000, for the purpose of taking the water from the river by means of a dam and raceway, and carrying it along and below the city, with outlets for mills, which will create a very extensive water power for manufacturing purposes. The Assumpink creek also, which enters the Delaware below the city, furnishes some water power.

This town was first settled about the year 1720. It is memorable for the "Battle of Trenton," December 25th, 1776, when 1,000 Hessians were captured by the Americans under General Washington. That was a gloomy period of the revolutionary war, and this event contributed greatly to revive the hopes of the people. Trenton was incorporated as a city in 1792.

TROY, city, port of entry, and capital of Rensselaer co., N. Y. It is pleasantly situated on the e. side of Hudson r., 6 n. Albany, 151 n. N. York, 376 W. It is in 42° 44' n. lat., 73° 40' w. lon., 3° 15' e. lon. from W. Pop. 1810, 3,895; 1820, 5,264; 1830, 11,405; 1840, 19,334. of these 796 were employed in commerce, 2,279 in manufactures and trades, 208 navigating the ocean, rivers, &c., 218 in the learned professions. Its limits extend about 3 miles along the river, and its breadth is 11 miles. The plat includes an alluvial flat, somewhat raised above the level of the river, and bordered on the e. by hills of considerable elevation, from which descend two considerable streams, denominated Poesten Kill, and Wyant's Kill, which have romantic cataracts and cascades, and afford extensive water power for mills and machinery. The city is laid out with great regularity. The main business street, called River-street, follows the course of the river and is curved, but the other streets are straight and cross each other at right angles. There are 15 streets running n. and s., numbers of which fall successively into River-street; these are crossed by 19 others running e. and w. The streets are generally 60 feet wide, well paved and have good sidewalks, and are generally ornamented by trees and well lighted. The houses are mostly built of brick, and with great neatness and taste, and a number of the public and private buildings are elegant. The court house is a large marble building with a fine Grecian front of the Doric order. There is a brick jail, and a county poorhouse with a farm of 200 acres. The Rensselaer Institute is designed to give a scientific and practical education, and the Troy Female Institute has been very celebrated. There are also several other schools of a high order. There is a Lyceum of Natural History, with a valuable library, and a cabinet of minerals and natural history; a Young Men's Association, with a large library, cabinet, and reading room. There are in the city 2 excellent market-houses. Some of the churches are elegant buildings; one of them, an Episcopal, is a fine specimen of the Gothic architecture. There are 18 churches—7 Presbyterian, 3 Episcopal, 2 Baptist, 2 Methodist, 1 Roman Catholic, 1 Universalist, 1 Friends Meeting house, and 1 African. There are 6 banks, with an aggregate capital of $1,568,000; and 2 insurance companies.

Troy is well situated for commerce. Being at the head of tidewater on the Hudson, sloops and steamboats come to its wharves. Sixty sloops, 3 large and 2 smaller steamboats, 5 steam tow-boats, and 22 barges are engaged in the trade between this city and New York. Troy has a rich and extensive back country to the n. and n. e., with which it is connected by fine roads, and it also participates in the advantages of the Erie and the Champlain canals. There were in 1840, 44 commercial and 13 commission houses engaged in foreign trade, with a cap. of $2,274,621; 270 retail stores, cap. $944,963; 8 lumber yards, cap. $205,000; 4 furnaces, 8 forges, cap. $279,000; machinery manufactured, value $17,000; hardware and cutlery, $925,400; 3 fulling m., 1 woollen fac., cap. $50,000; 7 cotton fac. 35,500 sp., cap. $352,150; 7 tanneries, cap. $91,000; 1 distillery, 3 breweries, cap. $110,000; manufactures of leather, cap. $489,525; 1 pottery, 1 ropewalk, 13 flouring m., 2 saw m., 3 paper fac., 4 printing offices, 2 binderies, 2 daily, 3 weekly, 1 semi-weekly newspaper, and 1 periodical; 41 brick and stone, and 21 wooden houses were built, and cost $190,430. Cap. in manufac. $2,423,135. 11 acad. 446 students, 40 sch. 1,261 scholars.

The water power of Troy is great. It is derived not only from the streams which flow from the hills on the e., but a dam with a lock across the Hudson, is not only valuable for navigation, but renders most of the water of the river available for manufacturing purposes. The city is abundantly supplied with pure and wholesome water from a reservoir in the n. part of city, supplied from a creek, and is conveyed in iron pipes through the city, supplying not only families, but fountains and hydrants, from which the water can be thrown, by its pressure alone, over the highest houses. A railroad connects the city with Ballston Spa, where it joins the Schenectady railroad to Saratoga. Troy was incorporated as a city in 1816. In 1820 a disastrous fire swept over and destroyed the richest and most important part of the city.

West Troy, Watervliet t., on the w. side of the Hudson r., though in a different county, is properly a suburb of Troy, with which it is connected by a bridge and two ferries. This growing village was incorporated in 1836, and contains 800 dwelling houses, and 5,000 inhabitants. It has 8 churches; the Watervliet bank, with a capital of $150,000; and an extensive United States Arsenal. In the n. part of the village, the

a. branch of the Mohawk unites with the Hudson, and here is a lateral canal, by which the Erie canal enters the river; and there is a second lateral canal a mile below. The waters of this a. lateral canal pass through the grounds of the Arsenal, comprising about 100 acres, enclosed on 3 sides by an iron fence, and in the rear by a stone wall, containing a large number of buildings; and an extensive water power is here afforded by the waste water of the canal, for the use of the establishment. About 200 officers, soldiers and workmen, are attached to the Arsenal, and manufacture arms, and munitions of war, to the amount of $100,000 annually. The value on hand, Jan. 1st, 1841, was $1,662,230. In the yards of the Arsenal are found cannon which were captured at Saratoga and at Yorktown, and others cast in New York and Philadelphia during the revolution.

VERMONT.

VERMONT, one of the northern United States, is bounded n. by Lower Canada; e. by New Hampshire; s. by Massachusetts; and w. by New York, from which it is chiefly separated by Lake Champlain. It lies between 42° 44' and 45° n. lat., and between 71° 38' and 73° 26' w. lon. It is 137 miles long from n. to s., and 90 miles broad on the northern boundary, and 40 on the southern, and contains 10,212 square miles, or 6,535,680 acres. The population in 1790, was 85,599; in 1800, 154,465; in 1810, 217,895; in 1820, 235,764; in 1830, 280,679; in 1840, 291,948. Of these 146,378 are white males; 144,840 do. females; 364 colored males; 366 do. females. Employed in agriculture, 73,150; in commerce, 1,303; in manufactures and trades, 13,174; navigating the ocean, rivers, &c., 187; learned professions, &c., 1,563.

The state is divided into 14 counties, which, with their population in 1840, and their capitals, were as follows: ADDISON, 23,583, Middlebury; BENNINGTON, 16,872, Bennington and Manchester; CALEDONIA, 21,891, Danville; CHITTENDEN, 22,977, Burlington; ESSEX, 4,226, Guildhall; FRANKLIN, 24,531, St. Albans; GRAND ISLE, 3,883, North Hero; LAMOILLE, 10,475, Hydepark; ORANGE, 37,873, Chelsea; ORLEANS, 13,634, Irsburg; RUTLAND, 30,699, Rutland; WARRENTON, 23,506, Montpelier; WINDHAM, 27,442, Newfane; WINDSOR, 40,356, Windsor and Woodstock.

Montpelier, on Winooski river, 38 miles e. s. e. from Burlington, is the capital.

Vermont is a hilly or mountainous country. To the distance of from 5 to 10 miles e. of Lake Champlain the country is moderately uneven, and generally very fertile. A chain of mountains, called the Green mountains, from which the state takes its name, runs almost the whole length of the state, being in the south part from 10 to 15 miles wide, with some intervening valleys. Near the centre of the state the range divides into two parts; the western continues n., and, though broken, has the highest summits; while the eastern passes in a n. e. direction, in an unbroken chain. It is a curious fact that this immense barrier has a passage through it, without even any high hills. The southern branch of Onion river, which flows into Lake Champlain, has its source very near to if not in the same swamp with the head of White river, which flows into the Connecticut. The road passes along these streams from Burlington through Montpelier to Hartford, Vt., without any considerable elevations or depressions, and is called the valley road, presenting much grand and beautiful scenery. It passes near the base of Camel's Rump, one of the highest peaks of the Green mountains. Before the mountain divides, Killington Peak, 3,675 feet above the level of the sea, is the highest summit, but there are two higher summits after it divides, which are in the western range. These are Camel's Rump, on the s. side of Onion river, which is 4,188 feet high, and Mansfield mountain, the highest of all, on the n. side of Onion river, which is 4,279 feet high. The land in the part of the state e. of the mountain ridge, is more hilly than that on the western side.

The soil of the state may be regarded as fertile, but is generally better fitted for grazing than for grain. Excellent land for wheat is found throughout the western border of the state near Lake Champlain, and summer wheat succeeds well in most parts of the state. Corn produces the best on the margin of the streams, though it does well in other parts. Even among the Green mountains are fine grazing farms. The productions of the state are wheat, rye, Indian corn, oats, buckwheat, peas, and flax. The natural growth of the soil, on the e. of the mountains, is birch, beech, maple, ash, elm, and butternut; and on the w. the growth of hard wood is intermixed with pine and other evergreens.

In 1840 there were in this state, 62,402 horses and mules; 384,341 neat cattle; 1,681,819 sheep; 203,800 swine; poultry to the value of $131,578. There were produced 495,800 bushels of wheat; 54,781 of barley; 2,222,584 of oats; 230,993 of rye; 228,416 of buckwheat; 8,869,751 of potatoes; 1,119,678 of Indian corn; 836,739 tons of hay; 29 of hemp and flax; 4,286 pounds of silk cocoons; 3,699,235 of wool; 4,647,934 of sugar; 48,137 of hops; 4,660 of wax. The products of the dairy amounted to $2,008,737; of the orchard to $213,944; of lumber to $349,939; 718 tons of pot and pearl ashes.

The exports consist of pot and pearl ashes, beef, pork, butter, cheese, flax, live cattle, &c. The trade e. of the mountains is chiefly to Boston and Hartford; and w. of the mountains to New York and Montreal, to which it has an easy access through Lake Champlain and the Champlain canal to the Hudson river.

The climate is healthy, though the winters are cold. The snow generally lies from December to March, and is often 4 feet deep on the mountains. It is on an average several degrees colder on the eastern than on the western side of the mountains. Lake Champlain is not wholly frozen over until about the 1st of February.

The most important rivers are on the w. side of the state, and flow into Lake Champlain. They are the Otter Creek, 85 miles long, and navigable for sloops 6 miles to Vergennes; Onion river, which is 80 miles long, and enters the lake 4 miles e. of the village of Burlington; Lamouille, which is 70 miles long, and Missisique, which has about the same length. Small boats may penetrate these rivers to their lower falls, and they all have sets of fine falls, which furnish excellent mill seats. The principal rivers on the e. side of the mountains, which flow into the Connecticut, are Deerfield, White, Black, and Passumpsic rivers.

Lake Champlain, more than two thirds of which is in this state, is estimated to contain 600 square miles. Lake Memphremagog lies partly in this state and partly in Canada, and is 40 ms. long, and 7 or 8 wide. Lake Bombaxine in Castleton, and Salisbury Pond in Salisbury, are considerable bodies of water. The islands of Lake Champlain are considerably numerous, and some of them are large, fertile, and populous, and, with the peninsula of Alburgh, constitute Grand Isle county. The principal are North Hero, South Hero, and La Motte. There are various harbors on Lake Champlain, the principal of which are those of St. Albans, Burlington, and Vergennes.

Burlington is the largest and most commercial town in the state. The other principal towns are Middlebury, St. Albans, Rutland, and Bennington on the w., Montpelier in the centre, and Windsor, Woodstock, Danville, and Newbury on the e. side of the mountains.

The exports of this state in 1840, amounted to $305,150; and the imports to $404,617.

Vermont is an agricultural, rather than a commercial or manufacturing state. There were in the state in 1840, 747 retail stores, groceries, &c., which employed a capital of $2,964,060. There was employed in the lumber trade a capital of $45,506. The home-made or domestic manufactures amounted to $674,548. There were in the state 95 woollen manufactories, and 239 fulling mills, which employed 1,450 persons, and produced articles to the amount of $1,331,953, with a capital of $1,406,950; there were 7 cotton manufactories with 7,254 spindles, which manufactured articles to the amount of $113,000, and employed a capital of $118,100; 26 furnaces produced 6,743 tons of cast iron, and 14 forges produced 655 tons of bar iron, employing 788 persons, and a capital of $664,150; hats and caps were manufactured to the amount of $62,432, and straw bonnets to the amount of $2,819, employing 126 persons, and a capital of $32,875; 17 paper manufactories produced articles to the amount of $179,720; all other manufactories of paper produced $35,000, the whole employing 195 persons, and a capital of $216,500; 2 glass houses employed 70 persons, producing articles to the amount of $55,000, with a capital of $35,000; 8 potteries produced articles to the amount of $23,000, with a capital of $10,350; 261 tanneries employed 509 persons, with a capital of $403,093; 399 other leather manufactories, as saddleries, &c., manufactured articles to the amount of $361,468, with a capital of $168,090; granite and marble were manufactured to the amount of $62,515; bricks and lime were made to the amount of $402,218; 2 distilleries and 1 brewery employed 5 persons, and a capital of $8,850; 87 persons produced machinery to the amount of $101,354; 33 persons produced hardware and cutlery to the amount of $16,650; 437 persons produced carriages and wagons to the amount of $162,097, with a capital of $101,570; 190 persons manufactured furniture to the amount of $63,275, with a capital of $49,850; 72 stone or brick houses, and 468 wooden houses were built by 912 persons, and cost $344,896; 42 persons manufactured 1,158 small-arms; vessels were built to the amount of $72,000; 29 printing offices, 14 binderies, 2 daily newspapers, 26 weekly do., 2 semi-weekly do., and 3 periodicals, employed 156 persons, and a capital of $194,200. The total amount of capital employed in manufactures in the state was $4,326,440.

There are three colleges in Vermont. The University of Vermont, in Burlington, was founded in 1791; Middlebury College in 1800; and Norwich University in 1834. In these institutions, there were in 1840, 233 students. There were in the state 46 academies, with 4,113 students; and 2,402 primary and common schools, with 82,817 scholars; and 2,270 persons over 20 years of age who could neither read nor write.

The principal religious denominations are the Congregationalists, the Baptists, and the Methodists. In 1836, the Congregationalists had 186 churches, 114 ministers, and 20,575 communicants; the Baptists, 125 churches, 78 ministers, and 10,525 communicants; the Methodists had 75 itinerant preachers; the Episcopalians, 1 bishop and 18 ministers. Besides these there is a considerable number of Universalists and Christians, and a few Unitarians and Roman Catholics.

In September, 1839, there were 19 banks, with an aggregate capital of $1,325,530, and a circulation of $1,966,812. Vermont has no state debt.

There is a Penitentiary located at Windsor.

The first constitution of this state was formed in 1777. The present constitution was adopted July 4th, 1793. The legislative power is vested in the house of representatives, elected annually, and every town is entitled to one representative. The "General Assembly of the State of Vermont" meet annually at Montpelier in October. The executive power is vested in a governor, lieutenant-governor, and a council of 12 persons chosen annually by the people. They commission all officers, sit as judges to consider and determine on impeachments, prepare and lay before the general assembly such business as appears to them necessary, and have power to revise and propose amendments to the laws passed by the house of representatives. The judiciary power is vested in a supreme court, consisting of 5 judges; and one judge of the supreme court, with two assistant judges in each county, constitute a county court. The judges of the supreme and county courts, judges of probate courts, sheriffs and justices of the peace, are elected annually by the general assembly. A council of censors, consisting of 13 persons, are chosen every 7 years, who meet at Montpelier in June, to inquire whether the constitution has been preserved inviolate, whether the executive and legislative branches of the government have performed their duty as guardians of the people, whether taxes have been justly laid and collected, in what manner the public moneys have been disposed of, and whether the laws have been duly executed.

Every person of 21 years of age, who has resided in the state one year immediately previous to the election of representatives, and is of quiet and peaceable behavior, has the right of suffrage. The pay of the councillors and representatives is $1.50 a day, during the session, and 6 cents a mile for travel, going and returning. The lieutenant-governor and speaker of the house receive $2.50 a day. The salary of the governor is $750 a year.

Several charters have been granted by the legislature for works of internal improvement, but it is doubtful whether any of them will soon be undertaken. Several short canals have been constructed for the improvement of the navigation of Connecticut river.

The first settlement of the state was at Fort Dummer, in the s. e. part of the state, by settlers from Massachusetts. New Hampshire claimed the territory from 1741 to 1764, and granted many townships in the state to proprietors. New York also claimed the territory, and obtained a grant of it from the British Parliament in 1764. These conflicting claims produced great difficulties. When the revolutionary war commenced, Congress dared not admit Vermont to the confederacy, for fear of offending New Hampshire and New York. But the inhabitants were determined to be independent, and the British hoped to be able to detach them from the American cause. Vermont had a difficult part to act. But her wise leaders outwitted the British, by cherishing their hopes, and thus saving themselves from attack; and gave the most demonstrative proof of their exalted courage, and their devoted patriotism.

In 1790, New York was induced, by the payment of $30,000, to withdraw its claims; and in 1791, Vermont was admitted into the Union.

Richmond is the capital of the state, situated on the N. side of James river, at the head of tidewater, and just below its lower falls.

This state has a great variety of surface and soil. From the Atlantic to the lower falls on the rivers, which includes a tract of from 110 to 130 miles in width, the country is low and flat in some places marshy, but extensively sandy, covered with the pitch pine. On the margin of the rivers, the soil is often rich. This is denominated the low country, and is unhealthy from August to October. Between the head of tidewater and the Blue Ridge, the country becomes uneven and hilly, and more so as it approaches the mountains. The soil in this region is some of it sandy and poor; some of it is fertile, particularly on the margins of the rivers. Toward the mountains the country is stony and broken, though the soil is often rich. The first ridge of mountains in this state is generally about 150 miles from the ocean. Beyond this the country is mountainous, traversed by successive ridges of the Alleghany, which occupies a greater breadth of country in Virginia than in any other state. Between the various ridges, however, there are long valleys or table land, parallel with them, often of considerable breadth, and containing some of the best and most pleasant land in Virginia. The farms are here smaller than in other parts of the state, better cultivated, and there are fewer slaves. The climate in this region is very healthy.

The soil in the tidewater country is generally poor, producing Indian corn, oats, and peas. Wheat is raised in some parts of it, and a little rice in the swamps in its southern part. Between tidewater and the mountains is the tobacco country; but in the northern upland counties which has extensively superseded tobacco; and south of James river, sufficient cotton is raised for home consumption. The southeastern counties produce apples and peaches in great abundance. Among the mountains, the farmers raise large numbers of cattle and hogs. Indian corn is cultivated throughout the state. The country west of the mountains toward the Ohio, is rough and wild—sometimes, but not generally fertile; but very rich as a mineral region.

There were in this state in 1840, 326,433 horses and mules; 1,024,148 neat cattle; 1,293,772 sheep; 1,992,155 swine; poultry to the value of $754,698. There were produced 10,109,716 bushels of wheat; 87,430 of barley; 13,451,062 of oats; 1,482,799 of rye; 243,822 of buckwheat; 34,577,591 of Indian corn; 2,538,374 pounds of wool; 10,597 of hops; 65,020 of wax; 2,944,660 bushels of potatoes; 364,708 tons of hay; 25,594 of hemp and flax; 75,347,106 pounds of tobacco; 2,956 of rice; 3,494,483 of cotton; 3,191 of silk cocoons; 1,541,833 of sugar. The products of the dairy were valued at $1,480,488; of the orchard $705,765; value of lumber produced $538,092; 13,911 gallons of wine were made.

The mineral wealth of Virginia is very great. Gold, copper, lead, iron, coal, salt, limestone, and marble are found, together with a number of valuable mineral springs. An attention to the business of mining has recently been excited, and in 1840, 2,000 persons were employed in it. The belt of country in which gold is found, extends through Spotsylvania county and the adjacent country, and in a s. w. direction, passes into North and South Carolina, Georgia, and Alabama. The gold in this state is not sufficiently concentrated to render it profitable, excepting in a few places, to engage in mining it. The coal fields in Virginia are very extensive, and afford both the bituminous and the anthracite. Large quantities have been obtained and exported from the vicinity of Richmond. Salt springs have been found in various places, and salt has been extensively manufactured on the Great Kanawha river, near Charleston. The warm springs, at Bath, the hot springs, a few miles distant, the sulphur springs, in Greenbrier and Montgomery counties, and the sweet springs, of Botetourt county, are much resorted to by those in pursuit of health and of pleasure.

The natural bridge, in Rockbridge county, and Weyer's cave, in Augusta county, are great curiosities.

The staple productions of the state are wheat and tobacco

The Potomac river separates this state from Maryland. James river is the largest which belongs to this state. It is 500 miles in length, and flows from the mountains in the interior, behind the Blue Ridge, through which it passes. It is navigable for sloops 120 miles, and for boats much further, and enters into Chesapeake bay. The Appomattox is 130 miles long, and enters James river 100 miles above Hampton roads, and is navigable 12 miles, to Petersburg. The Rappahannock rises in the Blue Ridge, is 130 miles long, is navigable 110 miles for sloops, and enters into the Chesapeake. York river enters the Chesapeake 30 miles below the Rappahannock, and is navigable 40 miles for ships. The Shenandoah enters the Potomac just before its passage through the Blue Ridge. Of the rivers w. of the mountains, the Great Kanawha rises in North Carolina, passes through this state and enters the Ohio. The Little Kanawha also enters into the Ohio. The Monongahela rises in this state, though it runs chiefly in Pennsylvania.

The lower part of Chesapeake bay lies wholly in this state, is 15 miles wide at its mouth, and enters the Atlantic between Cape Charles and Cape Henry. Norfolk, 8 miles from Hampton roads, has a fine harbor, much the best in the state, spacious, safe, and well defended; and it is the most commercial place in Virginia; but Richmond and Petersburg are more populous, and have an extensive trade. Besides these, Wheeling, Lynchburg, Fredericksburg, and Winchester, are principal places.

The exports of this state in 1840, amounted to $4,778,220; and the imports to $545,685. There were 31 commercial and 64 commission houses engaged in foreign trade, with a capital of $4,299,500; 2,736 retail drygoods and other stores, with a capital of $16,684,413; 1,454 persons employed in the lumber trade, with a capital of $113,210; 931 persons engaged in internal transportation, who, with 103 butchers, packers, &c., employed a capital of $100,680; 556 persons employed in the fisheries, with a capital of $23,383.

The manufactures of Virginia are not so extensive as those of some states inferior to it in territory and population. There were in 1840, domestic or family manufactures to the amount of $2,441,672; 41 woollen manufactories and 47 fulling mills, employing 222 persons, producing articles to the amount of $147,792, with a capital of $112,350; 22 cotton manufactories, with 42,262 spindles, employing 1,816 persons, producing articles to the amount of $446,063, with a capital of $1,299,020; 42 furnaces producing 18,810 tons of cast-iron, and 52 forges, &c., producing 5,836 tons of bar-iron, the whole employing 1,742 persons, and a capital of $1,246,650; 11 smelting houses employed 131 persons, and produced gold to the amount of $51,758, employing a capital of $103,650; 5 smelting houses employed 73 persons, and produced 878,648 pounds of lead, employing a capital of $21,500; 12 paper manufactories, producing articles to the amount of $216,245, and other paper manufactories producing $1,260, the whole employing 181 persons, and a capital of $287,750; 3,342 persons manufactured tobacco to the amount of $2,406,671, employing a capital of $1,526,080; hats and caps were manufactured to the amount of $155,778, and straw bonnets to the amount of $14,700, the whole employing 340 persons, and a capital of $85,640; 660 tanneries employed 1,432 persons, and a capital of $838,141; 982 other leather manufactories, as saddleries, &c., produced articles to the amount of $826,597, and employed a capital of $341,957; 4 glass-houses, and 2 glass-cutting establishments employed 164 persons, producing articles to the value of $146,500, with a capital of $132,000; 23 potteries employed 64 persons, producing articles to the amount of $31,380, with a capital of $10,225; 36 persons produced drugs, paints, &c., to the amount of $66,633, with a capital of $61,727; 445 persons produced machinery to the amount of $429,858; 150 persons produced hardware and cutlery to the amount of $50,504; 263 persons manufactured 9,330 small-arms; 40 persons manufactured granite and marble to the amount of $16,652; 1,004 persons produced bricks and lime to the amount of $393,253; carriages and wagons were manufactured to the amount of $647,815, employing 1,592 persons, and a capital of $311,625; 1,454 distilleries produced 865,725 gallons, and 5 breweries produced 32,960 gallons, employing 1,631 persons, and a capital of $187,212; 764 flouring mills produced 1,041,596 barrels of flour, and with other mills employed 3,964 persons, producing articles to the amount of $7,855,499, with a capital of $5,184,669; ships were built to the amount of $136,807; 675 persons manufactured furniture to the amount of $299,391; 402 brick or stone, and 2,604 wooden houses were built, employing 4,694 persons, and cost $1,367,393; 50 printing offices, and 13 binderies, 4 daily, 12 semi-weekly, and 35 weekly newspapers, and 5 periodicals, employed 310 persons, and a capital of $168,850. The whole amount of capital employed in manufactures in the state was $11,360,861.

William and Mary College, at Williamsburg, is the oldest in the state, and one of the oldest in the country, and was founded in 1691. Hampden Sidney College, in Prince Edward county, was founded in 1783, and is flourishing. Washington College, at Lexington, was founded in 1812. Randolph Macon College, was founded at Boynton in 1832. There are theological schools at Richmond, in Prince Edward county, and in Fairfax county. But the most important literary institution in the state, is the University of Virginia, at Charlottesville, founded in 1819. Its plan is extensive, its endowment has been munificent, and it is a prosperous institution. In all these, with a few smaller institutions, there were in 1840, 1,097 students; there were in the state, also, 332 academies, with 11,063 students; 1,561 common and primary schools, with 35,331 scholars; and 58,787 white persons over 20 years of age who could neither read nor write.

The Baptists, the most numerous religious denomination, have about 437 churches; the Presbyterians 120; the Episcopalians, 63 ministers; the Methodists 170. There are also a few Lutherans, Catholics, Unitarians, Friends, and Jews.

In January, 1840, there were in this state 8 banks and branches, with a capital of $3,637,400, and a circulation of $2,513,413. At the close of the same year the public debt amounted to $6,857,161.

There is a state penitentiary located at Richmond.

The first constitution of Virginia was formed in 1776. This was altered and amended by a convention assembled for that purpose, in 1830. The executive power is vested in a governor, elected by the joint vote of the two houses of the general assembly. He is chosen for three years, but is ineligible for the next three. There is a council of state, elected in like manner for three years, the seat of one being vacated every year. The senior councillor is lieutenant-governor. The senators can never be more than 36, and the delegates than 150; and both are apportioned anew among the counties every 10 years, commencing with 1841. The senators are elected for 4 years, and the seats of one fourth of them are vacated every year. The delegates are chosen annually. All appointments to any office of trust, honor, or profit, by the legislature, are given openly, or vis voce, and not by ballot. The judges of the supreme court of appeals, and of the superior courts, are elected by the joint vote of both houses of the general assembly, and hold their offices during good behavior, or until removed by a joint vote of two thirds of the legislature.

The right of suffrage is extended to every resident white male citizen of 21 years of age, entitled to vote by the former constitution; or who owns a freehold valued at $25; or a joint interest in a freehold to that amount; or who has a life estate, or a reversionary title to land valued at $50, having been so possessed for 6 months; or who shall own, or be in occupation of, a leasehold estate, having been recorded 2 months, for a term not less than 5 years, to the annual value or rent of $200; or who for 12 months shall have been a housekeeper and head of a family, and paid the taxes assessed by the commonwealth.

Virginia has undertaken several important works of internal improvement, by chartering private companies, several of which have been liberally aided by the state. The Dismal Swamp canal connects Chesapeake bay with Albemarle sound, extending from Deep creek to Joyce's creek, 23 miles, at a cost of $679,864. It has branches of 11 miles. The Alexandria canal extends 7½ mi., from Georgetown to Alexandria. The James River and Kanawha canal extends 175 miles, from Richmond to Buchanan. The Richmond, Fredericksburg, and Potomac railroad extends 75 miles, to Aquia creek. Louisa branch, 25 miles from Richmond, proceeds 49 miles, to Gordonsville.

Richmond and Petersburg railroad, from Richmond, extends 23 miles, to Petersburg. Petersburg and Roanoke railroad extends from Petersburg, 59 miles, to Weldon. Greenville railroad extends from near Hicks, for 18 miles, to Gaston, N. C. City Point railroad extends from Petersburg, 12 miles, to City Point. Chesterfield railroad extends from Coal Mines, 13½ miles, to Richmond. Portsmouth and Roanoke railroad extends from Portsmouth, 8 miles, to Weldon, N. C. Winchester and Potomac railroad extends from Harper's Ferry, 32 miles, to Winchester.

Virginia is sometimes denominated the Ancient Dominion, having been settled in April, 1607, at Jamestown, on James river, which was the first white settlement in the United States. It was named Virginia, in honor of Queen Elizabeth, by Sir Walter Raleigh, to whom she granted the country. He attempted a settlement of it, which failed. The grant was vacated by the execution and attainder of that nobleman, under James I. The country was then granted to two companies, the London company and the Plymouth company, and called South and North Virginia. By the former the country was settled, and Jamestown was named in honor of their royal patron. This country suffered many disasters arising from the turbulence of its citizens, the wars with the Indians, and the tyranny of the royal governors. Virginia was a very loyal province, and was attached to the royal party in the revolution of 1688; and was among the first to proclaim Charles II., at the restoration. The Church of England was established by law, in 1662. Virginia had the high honor, in 1732, of being the birth-place of George Washington, and it was as an officer of her colonial militia that he commenced his career of military glory. This state was among the first to resist the aggressions of the mother country, and her sages and her yeomen bore a distinguished part in the struggles of the revolution. Her Patrick Henry, as a revolutionary orator, her Washington, as the greatest and the best in the field and in the cabinet, and her Jefferson, Madison, and Monroe, as presidents of the United States, and her Marshall, as chief-justice, have conferred distinguished honor on their country. In convention, June 25th, 1783, the constitution of the United States was adopted—yeas 89, nays 79; majority, 10. It will be found that the constitution was adopted with most difficulty where the spirit of freedom was the most jealous.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dist. of Columbia, the capital of the United States, is situated on the E. side of the Potomac, 295 miles from the ocean, by the course of the river and bay, and is in 33° 32' 54" N. lat. and 77° 1' 48" W. lon. from Greenwich. It is 38 miles S. W. from Baltimore; 136 from Philadelphia; 925 from New York; 432 from Boston; 856 from St. Louis; 544 from Charleston, S. C.; 662 from Savannah, Ga.; 1,263 from New Orleans. The population in 1800, was 3,210; in 1810, 8,206; in 1820, 13,247; in 1830, 18,827; in 1840, 23,364. Employed in commerce, 103; in manufactures and trades, 896; navigating the ocean, 45; do. rivers and canals, 25; learned professions, 83.

The city stands on a point of land between the Potomac and the Anacostia or Eastern branch. The city contains a little over 8 square miles, and upwards of 5,000 acres. The ground is in general about 40 feet above the level of the river, and there are some moderate elevations, on two of which stand the Capitol and the President's house. The city is regularly laid out in streets running north and south, and crossed by others at right angles, running east and west. But the different parts of the city are connected by broad avenues, which traverse the rectangular divisions, diagonally. Where the intersection of these avenues with each other and with the streets would form many acute angles, considerable rectangular or circular open grounds are left, which, when the city shall be built up, will give it an open appearance. The avenues and streets leading to public places are from 120 to 160 feet wide, and the other streets are from 70 to 110 feet wide. The avenues are named after the states of the Union, and the other streets, beginning at the Capitol, are denoted by the letters of the alphabet, as A. north and A. south, B. north and B. south, &c.; and east and west, they are designated by numbers, as 1st east, 1st west, &c. Pennsylvania avenue, between the Capitol and the President's house, contains the most dense population, and is much the finest street in the city. Five of the avenues radiate from the Capitol, and five others from the President's house, giving these prominent places the most ready communication with all parts of the city. The buildings of Washington consist of scattered clusters; nor is it probable that the magnificent plan of the city will soon be built up. Three things are requisite to sustain a large city, one of which, it is to be hoped, will never be found in the United States. There must be extensive commerce, or manufactures, or an expensive and luxurious court, with the multitudes which a luxurious court draws around it, to expend their money. This last constitutes a great item in the support of some European cities. Washington cannot be expected to become a very great commercial or manufacturing place; and though the chief men of the government, and the national legislature, and the multitudes whom they draw around them, do much toward the prosperity of Washington, the money thus expended is too small in amount to constitute a main reliance of a large city. Baltimore, in the vicinity, will be likely to surpass Washington in commerce and manufactures, for a long time to come. The growth of Washington, however, has been considerably extensive, and it is continually increasing; and probably the bustle of a large city would not much improve it as a seat for the national congress. It enjoys the two important requisites for health, pure air and good water, and there is much elegant and refined society, rendering it a pleasant place of residence.

The public buildings of Washington have a splendor becoming a great nation. The Capitol is probably the finest senate house in the world, and it is fit that the most august legislative assembly on earth should be thus accommodated. The ground on which the Capitol stands is elevated 73 feet above the level of the tide, and affords a commanding view of the different parts of the city, and of the surrounding country. The building, which is of freestone, covers an area of more than an acre and a half; the length of the front is 352 feet, including the wings; the depth of the wings is 121 feet. The centre building is surmounted by a lofty dome; and there are 2 less elevated domes, one toward each end. A projection on the east or main front, including the steps, is 65 feet wide; and another on the west front, with the steps, is 83 feet wide. In the projection on the east front, there is a noble portico of 26 lofty Corinthian columns; and in the west front there is a portico of 10 Corinthian columns. The height of the building to the top of the dome is 190 feet. Under the dome in the middle of the building is the Rotundo, a circular room 95 feet in diameter, and of the same height, adorned with sculptures representing in relief Smith delivered by Pocahontas, the Pilgrims landing at Plymouth, Penn treating with the natives, and a fight of Boone with the Indians; and 4 magnificent paintings by Trumbull, with figures as large as life, representing the presentation to Congress of the Declaration of Independence, the capture of Burgoyne, the surrender of Cornwallis, and Washington resigning his commission to Congress. Another painting, the baptism of Pocahontas, by Chapman, has recently been added. The Rotundo has recently received a splendid additional ornament in Greenough's statue of Washington, a colossal figure in a sitting posture, twice as large as life. On the west of the Rotundo is the Library room of Congress, 92 feet by 34, and is 36 feet in height, containing, in arched alcoves, 20,000 volumes. In the second story of the south wing of the Capitol is the Hall of the House of Representatives, of a semi-circular form, 96 feet long and 60 high, with a dome supported by 24 beautiful columns of variegated marble from the Potomac, with capitals of Italian marble, of the Corinthian order. The circular wall is surrounded by a gallery for men, and the chord of the arc, back of the Speaker's chair, has a gallery for the ladies. The room is ornamented with some fine statuary and paintings, and the whole furniture of it is elegant. The Senate Chamber is in the second story of the north wing of the Capitol, and is semi-circular like that of the Representatives, but smaller, being 75 feet long and 45 feet high. The Vice-president's chair is canopied by a rich crimson drapery, held by the talons of a hovering eagle. A gallery of light bronze running round the arc in front of the Vice-president's chair, is mainly appropriated to ladies. There is another gallery above and behind the chair, supported by fine Ionic columns of variegated marble. A magnificent chandelier hangs in the centre of the room, and the whole appearance and furniture of the room are splendid. Below the Senate Chamber, and of nearly the same form and dimensions, but much less elegant, is the room of the Supreme Court of the United States; and there are in the building 70 rooms for the accommodation of committees and officers of Congress. The grounds around the Capitol are spacious, containing 22 acres, highly ornamented with gravelled walks, shrubbery, and trees, a naval monument ornamented with statuary, and fountains, and the whole is enclosed by a handsome iron railing. The whole cost of the building has exceeded $2,000,000.

The President's house, a mile and a half n. w. from the Capitol, is an elegant edifice of freestone, 2 stories high, with a lofty basement, and is 170 feet long and 86 wide, the n. front of which is ornamented with a fine portico of 4 lofty Ionic columns, projecting with 3 columns. The outer intercolumniation is for carriages to drive under, to place company under shelter. It stands in the centre of a plat of ground of 20 acres, beautifully laid out and highly ornamented. It is elevated 44 feet above tide-water, and the southern front presents a grand and beautiful prospect. The apartments within are admirably fitted to their purpose, and splendidly furnished. On the n. side of the President's house are two large buildings, and on the w. side two large buildings for the departments of State, of the Treasury, of War, and of the Navy. The General Post-Office and the Patent-Office are also extensive buildings. These, with the new Treasury building, have been recently erected, to supply the place of those which were burned a few years since. The new Treasury building contains 150 rooms, and when completed, will contain 250. It has a splendid colonnade, 457 feet in length. The General Post-Office contains about 80 rooms, and is of the Corinthian order, with columns and pilasters, on a rustic base. The Patent-Office, in addition to other spacious apartments, has one room in the upper story 275 feet by 65, and when completed by wings, according to the original design, will be upwards of 400 feet in length. It is considered one of the most splendid rooms in America, and is devoted to the grand and increasing collections of the national institution. The portico of this building is of the same extent as that of the Parthenon, at Athens, consisting of 16 columns, in double rows, 50 feet high. In the war-office was formerly kept the fine collection of Indian portraits, painted from the original heads by King. These valuable pictures are now in the custody, and adorn the collections of the National Institution, in the patent-office.

The Navy Yard is on the Eastern branch, about three fourths of a mile s. e. of the Capitol, and contains 27 acres. It has houses for the officers, and shops and warehouses, and 2 large ship-houses, a neat armory, and every kind of naval stores. Several ships of war, some of which were of the largest class, have been built at this yard. There are also in the city an Arsenal, a City Hall, an Hospital, a Penitentiary, a Theatre, &c.

Washington is separated from Georgetown by Rock creek, over which are 2 bridges. A substantial pile bridge, over a mile in length, crosses the Potomac, and leads to Alexandria. There is a bridge, also, over the Anacostia, or Eastern branch. This river has water of sufficient depth for frigates to ascend to the navy yard, without being lightened. Vessels requiring 14 feet of water can come up to the Potomac bridge. By means of the Chesapeake and Ohio canal, a communication is opened with a rich back country; and it may be expected that the commerce of Washington will increase. The Washington canal is a continuation of this canal through the city. It extends from the Chesapeake and Ohio canal, at 17th-street, west, to which it is connected by a lock at that street, to the Eastern branch. The canal and all the basins are walled with stone on both sides. From 17th to 14th street, is a spacious basin, 500 feet wide; from 14th to 6th street, where there is another ample basin, its width is 150 feet; and from 6th street to its termination in the Eastern branch, its width varies from 45 to 80 feet; and its depth is 4 feet below tide throughout. At its eastern termination is another spacious basin and wharf, which extends to the channel. This canal has been greatly neglected, and is much out of repair. The expense of this canal has been over $230,000.

There were in the city in 1840, 106 stores, cap. $296,040; 6 lumber yards, cap. $57,000; precious metals manufactured to the amount of $13,000; various other metals $17,300; 2 tanneries, cap. $2,000; 1 brewery, cap. $63,000; 2 potteries, cap. $3,250; 1 rope-walk, 1 grist m., 11 printing offices, 9 binderies, 3 daily, 5 weekly, 5 semi-weekly newspapers, and 3 periodicals, cap. $149,500; 30 brick and stone, and 23 wooden houses built, cost $86,910. Total cap. in manufac. $336,275.

The Columbian College was incorporated by an act of Congress, in 1821. It is delightfully situated on elevated ground n. of the President's house, about 2½ miles from the Capitol. The buildings are a college edifice, 5 stories high, including the basement and the attic, having 48 rooms for students, with 2 dormitories attached to each, 2 dwelling-houses, for professors, and a philosophical hall, all of brick. It has a medical department attached. The Medical College is situated at the corner of 10th and E streets, at equal distances from the Capitol and the President's house. In the several departments are a president, 10 professors, and in the college proper, about 25 students. There are about 4,200 books in its libraries. The commencement is on the first Wednesday of October. The whole number of alumni is 97. It is under the direction of the Baptists.

There were in the city in 1840, 12 academies, with 609 students, 9 primary and common schools, with 330 scholars.

The National Institution for the Promotion of Science, was organized in May, 1840. The President of the United States is patron; the heads of departments constitute 6 directors on the part of the government, and 6 literary and scientific gentlemen are directors on the part of the institution. Its stated monthly meetings are held in the patent-office building. Its collections are deposited in the grand hall of this building, 275 feet long and 65 feet wide, and constitute a rapidly increasing scientific museum. The United States exploring expedition has added largely to its curiosities. The Historical Society and the Columbian Institute have united with it, with their libraries and collections. They have a valuable mineralogical cabinet. It is proposed to bring out regularly volumes of transactions. If properly fostered, it may become an honor to the nation. The Union Literary Society has been in existence for many years, and holds a weekly discussion in the lecture room of the medical college, and is well attended. Sectarian religion and party politics are excluded from its discussions. The City Library contains about 6,000 volumes.

The city contains 21 places of worship, of which the Presbyterians have 4, the Episcopalians 3, the Baptists 3, the Methodists 3, Protestant do. 1, Roman Catholics 3, the Africans 2, and the Unitarians and Friends 1 each.

There are 2 orphan asylums. There are 3 banks, with an aggregate capital of $1,500,000; and 2 insurance companies, with an aggregate capital of $453,000.

The congressional burial ground is in the eastern section of Washington, about a mile and a half from the Capitol, and contains about 10 acres of ground, near the Eastern branch. The grounds are tastefully laid out and neatly kept. It has already received a number of distinguished men, and has some fine monuments, and a vault in which bodies are placed that are awaiting a removal.

This city was fixed on as the future seat of the government in accordance with the suggestion of the great man whose name it bears, and the ground on which it stands was ceded to the United States in December, 1788. The owners of the land gave one half of it, after deducting streets and public squares, to the United States to defray the expenses of the public buildings. Such grounds as should be wanted by the United States was to be paid for at the rate of $66 66 cents per acre. It was laid out by 3 commissioners, in 1791, and surveyed under the direction of Andrew Ellicot. The seat of the federal government was removed to this place in 1800. The north wing of the Capitol was commenced in 1793, and finished in 1800, at an expense of $480,202. The south wing was commenced in 1803, and finished in 1805, at an expense of $308,803. The centre building was commenced in 1818, and finished in 1827, at an expense of $957,647. In August, 1814, Washington was captured by the British, under Gen. Ross, who set fire to the Capitol, the President's house, and the public offices, with the exception of the patent-office, which was saved by the solicitation of its superintendent. The library of Congress was burned, and was afterwards replaced by the purchase of that of Mr. Jefferson, consisting of 7,000 volumes, for $23,000, in 1815.

WHIFFY SWAMP, p.-o., Beaufort dist., South Carolina.

WHITE, r., Vt., rises in Hancock t., Addison co., and receives 3 large branches from the n., called the First, Second, and Third branches, in Bethel and Royalton. The Second branch has its source in Williamstown, in the same swamp with Stevens' branch of Onion or Winooski r. Each of these branches affords water power. White r. is about 55 ms. long, and flows into Connecticut r., in Hartford t. It is the largest r. in Vt. on the e. side of the Green mts. The road along Onion r. and down White r. affords a pleasant passage across the state, with no high hills.

WHITE, r., Ia., is composed of the East and West forks. The first rises in Johnson co., receives numerous tributaries, and can be made navigable 150 ms. above the confluence of the branches. The West fork rises in Randolph co., receives numerous branches, and is navigable for steamboats in high water as far as Indianapolis, and for flat-boats much further. The branches unite between Daviess and Knox co's., and flowing about 30 ms. w. s. w. enter the Wabash r. The lower part of the r. is 200 yards wide, and is navigable for ordinary steamboats at the usual stages of water, in the spring season.

WHITE, r., Ark., rises in a ridge called the Black mountains, and running a considerable distance in Mo., enters Ark., and receives Big Black r. from the n., between Independence and Jackson counties. Thence flowing s. and s. e. it receives on the w. Little Red r., and on the e. Cache r., and enters the Mississippi r. in Desha co. About 7 ms. from its mouth it is connected, through an inundated forest, by a bayou as wide as the r. with Arkansas r., 30 ms. above its mouth, which, in moderate stages of the water, is boatable. White r. has a very winding course, and is said to be boatable for 1,000 ms., though its length in a direct course, is not over 500 ms. The country through which it flows is extensively a fertile agricultural and a rich mineral region. Near its entrance into the Mississippi, its course is through a deep swamp.

WHITE MOUNTAINS, N. H. Situated in Coos co., toward the n. e. part of the state. In their more elevated parts, the range extends in a direction of n. w. and s. e. for 30 ms., with a breadth of 8 or 10 ms. They lie 30 ms. n. of Winnipiseogee lake, and 70 n. Concord. Until recently they were regarded as the highest land in the United States e. of the Rocky mountains, but it has been ascertained that there are higher peaks in North Carolina. The 3 highest peaks of each, above the level of the sea, are as follows:

White Mountains, N. H.

|                        |             |
|------------------------|-------------|
| Mount Washington . . . | 6,234 feet. |
| Adams . . . . .        | 5,328 "     |
| Jefferson . . . . .    | 5,058 "     |

Mountains in Yancey co., N. C.

|                         |             |
|-------------------------|-------------|
| Black Mountain . . . .  | 6,476 feet. |
| Roane " . . . . .       | 6,038 "     |
| Grandfather mt. . . . . | 5,556 "     |

Madison peak, of the White mountains, is 4,866 feet, Monroe 4,711 feet, Franklin 4,356 feet, Lafayette 4,339 feet high. Mount Washington is frequently visited by travellers, who commonly ascend by the s. e. side, commencing at the town of Conway, and following the course of the Saco r., which rises high in the mt. After climbing up the side of the mt. for a considerable distance, the trees begin to diminish in height, till at the elevation of about 4,000 feet, you come to a region of dwarfish evergreens, about the height of a man's head, putting forth numerous horizontal branches, closely interwoven with each other, and surrounding the mountain with a formidable hedge. On emerging from this thicket, you are above all woods, at the foot of what is called the bald part of the mountain, which consists of a huge pile of naked rocks. After attaining the summit, the traveller is recompensed for his toil, if the sky be clear, with a most grand and extensive prospect, embracing the Atlantic ocean at Portland, 65 ms. in a direct line to the s. e.; the Katahdin mountains to the n. e., near the sources of Penobscot r.; on the w. to the Green mountains in Vt.; and Monadnock mt., 120 ms. s. w. Among the nearer and more picturesque objects are Umbagog and Winnipiseogee lakes, Androscoggin and Connecticut rivers, and numerous smaller lakes and streams. Beneath and around, in every direction, the mountains extend many miles from the summit, resembling in their shape the waves of the sea in a storm. The elevated summits of the White mountains are covered with snow for 9 or 10 months in the year. The writer of this has seen Mount Washington from a high hill a little w. of Hollowell, Me., in the month of May, its white top apparently covered with snow. The Notch or Gap, on the w. side of the mountain, is a deep and narrow defile, in one part only 22 feet wide. The road from Lancaster, N. H., to Portland Me., which passes through this gap, is crossed by Saco r. Several brooks, the tributaries of the Saco, fall down the sides of the mountains, forming a succession of beautiful cascades, some of them within sight of the road, presenting the wildest and most romantic scenery. The White mountains belong to a range which extends southwardly to Belcher-town, Mass., where it divides into 2 branches, called the Lyme range, and the Mount Tom range.

WISCONSIN.

WISCONSIN is bounded n. by the British possessions; n. e. by Montreal and Menomonee rivers, and a line connecting their sources, separating it from northern Michigan; e. by Lake Michigan, separating it from Michigan proper; s. by Illinois; and w. by the Mississippi, separating it from Iowa ter. It is between 42° 30' and 49° 30' n. lat., and between 86° 50' and 96° w. long.; being 600 miles long and 150 broad. It contains about 90,000 square miles, or 57,600,000 acres. It contained in 1840, 30,945 inhabitants: of these 18,757 were white males; 11,992 do. females; 101 were colored males; 84 do. females. Employed in agriculture, 7,047; in commerce, 479; in manufactures and trades, 1,814; in mining, 794; navigating the ocean, rivers, lakes, &c., 223; learned professions, &c., 259.

It is divided into 22 counties, which, with their population in 1840, and their capitals, were as follows: BROWN, 2,107, Green Bay; CALUMET, 275, Calumet; CRAWFORD, 1,502, Prairie du Chien; DANE, 314, Madison; DODGE, 67, Dodge C. H.; FOND DU LAC, 139, Fond du Lac; GRANT, 3,926, Lancaster; GREEN, 933, Monroe; IOWA, 3,978, Mineral Point; JEFFERSON, 914, Jefferson; MANITOWOC, 235, Manitowoc; MARQUETTE, 18, Marquette; MILWAUKIE, 5,605, Milwaukee; PORTAGE, 1,623, Fort Winnebago; RACINE, 3,473, Racine; ROCK, 1,701, Rockport; ST. CROIX, 809, St. Croix C. H.; SAUK, 102, Prairie du Sac; SHEBOYGAN, 133, Sheboygan; WALWORTH, 2,611, Elkhorn; WASHINGTON, 343, Washington; WINNEBAGO, 135, Oshkosh.

Madison, between the third and fourth of the 4 lakes which discharge their waters into Rock river, in Dane county, is the seat of government.

The surveyed part, south of Green Bay, Fox, and Wisconsin rivers, is composed of timbered and prairie lands, with some swamps or wet prairies, having a vegetable soil of from 1 to 10 feet deep. North of the Wisconsin commences a hilly region, swelling as it proceeds north into a mountainous country, with a rugged and broken surface, creating many rapids and falls in the streams, and affording many wild and picturesque views. Near the sources of the Mississippi is an elevated table land, abounding with lakes and swamps, in which fish are abundant and wild rice grows. Bordering on the Mississippi and Wisconsin rivers the soil is rich, and the surface is generally covered with a heavy growth of timber. The white pine is found on the Upper Mississippi. All the productions common in this latitude can be cultivated with success, and the great range of pasture on the prairies, renders the country peculiarly favorable for raising cattle.

In 1840 there were in this territory 5,735 horses and mules; 30,269 neat cattle; 3,463 sheep; 51,327 swine; value of poultry produced $16,167. There were produced 212,116 bushels of wheat;

11,062 of barley; 406,514 of oats; 1,965 of rye; 10,654 of buckwheat; 379,359 of Indian corn; 419,608 of potatoes; 6,777 pounds of wool; 1,474 do. of wax; 135,288 do. of sugar. The products of the dairy were valued at $35,677.

The southwestern part of Wisconsin is exceedingly rich as a mineral region, which extends into Illinois and Iowa. Lead ore, yielding 75 per cent. of metal, is abundant; and copper ore is also extensively found. The former has long been, and the latter is beginning to be wrought. Iron ore also exists.

The principal rivers are the Mississippi, washing its western border; the Wisconsin, 500 miles long, a large tributary of the Mississippi; Chippeway river, which enters the Mississippi further n. w., and is a large river; Rock river, which rises and runs partly in this state; Neenah or Fox river, which passes so near the Wisconsin that in time of high water the country between them is often overflowed, and can be passed in boats, passes through Lake Winnebago, and enters Green bay: though obstructed by rapids, boats pass up it 180 miles.

There are many lakes and ponds in this state, particularly in its northern parts. The 4 lakes near Madison, are pleasant sheets of water. Winnebago lake is 24 miles long and 10 broad, and has an outlet to Green bay. Green bay is a branch of Lake Michigan, and is partly in this territory; and Lake Michigan bounds it on the e.

The most important place in this state is Milwaukee, on Lake Michigan. It is extensively visited by steamboats, and is an important commercial centre. It is the only good harbor between Chicago and Green bay. Green Bay is near the mouth of Neenah or Fox river, at the head of Green bay, and has a good harbor and an extensive trade. Racine and Sheboygan on Lake Michigan, and Prairie du Chien on the Mississippi, just above the mouth of the Wisconsin, are considerable places.

There were in this territory in 1840, 1 commercial and 7 commission houses engaged in foreign trade, with a capital of $63,000; 178 retail drygoods and other stores, with a cap. of $661,550; 133 persons employed in the lumber trade, with a cap. of $21,180; 62 persons engaged in internal transportation, who, with 3 butchers, packers, &c., employed a capital of $14,100.

The amount of home-made or family manufactures was $12,567. There were 1 furnace, cap. $4,000; 49 smelting houses produced 15,129,350 pounds of lead, employing 220 persons, with a cap. of $664,600; 3 distilleries and 3 breweries employed a cap. of $14,400; 4 flouring m., 29 grist m., 124 saw m., cap. $561,650; 7 brick, 509 wooden houses were built, and cost $212,085; 6 printing offices and 6 weekly newspapers employed a capital of $10,300. Total capital in manufactures $535,926.

No college has been established in this territory. There were in 1840, 2 academies, with 65 students; and 77 common and primary schools, with 1,937 scholars.

In Jan., 1840, this territory had 1 bank, with a capital of $100,000, and a circulation of $109,185.

The government was organized in 1836. The governor is appointed by the president of the United States, with the advice and consent of the senate, and is ex-officio superintendent of Indian affairs. The legislative assembly consists of a council of 13 members, elected for 4 years; and a house of representatives of 26 members, elected for 2 years. Their pay is 3 dollars a day, and 3 dollars for every 20 miles travel. The Congress of the United States have appropriated $20,000 for the erection of public buildings, and $5,000 for a library.

This territory has a few works of internal improvement. The United States commenced, in 1838, the Portage canal, 1½ miles long, to connect the Wisconsin and Fox rivers, which completes a steamboat navigation from Lake Michigan to the Mississippi. The Milwaukee and Rock River canal, 60 miles in length, to connect Rock river with Lake Michigan, is in progress.
